MISSOURI G.O.P. PICKS BROMWICH AS ITS NATIONAL COMMITTEEMAN

Insists on Free Hand and Own Delegate Slate, Including Seven Active Here in Raising Funds.

Elroy W. Bromwich, St. Louis business man, was elected Republican national committeeman for Missouri at the G.O.P. state convention here yesterday, as state Republicans sought to provide new leadership and restore party harmony in Missouri.

There were indications that Bromwich would be given a free hand in running the state party organization. He insisted on that as a condition before accepting the job of rebuilding the strife-torn Republican party in Missouri.

A slate of candidates picked by Bromwich for delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention was elected without opposition at the meeting. Seven of the 10 persons named as delegates-at-large are St. Louisans who have been active in campaign fund-raising drives or were generous contributors to the party in the past.

This indicated that the party fund-raisers will have a greater voice in the management of Republican affairs in Missouri, and that the 1956 G.O.P. campaigns will be more adequately financed than those in recent years.

Gambrel Halts Balloting.

Bromwich, head of an industrial tool supply firm, easily defeated Harry M. Gambrel, Kansas City insurance executive, for the national committee post.

Incomplete balloting by delegates at the state convention gave the St. Louisan a lead of 1269 votes to 230 for Gambrel, before the Kansas City Republican stopped the voting and moved that Bromwich be named by acclamation.

The way was cleared for Bromwich, a former treasurer of the Republican state committee, to succeed A. D. (Bud) Welsh of Ladue, the present national committeeman, within a short time.

Under the usual procedure, Bromwich would not take over until after the Republican national convention at San Francisco late in August.

However, Welsh announced his resignation as national committeeman in a letter read to the state meeting by Louis H. Wissman, Republican committeeman of the Fourteenth Ward.

The state convention accepted his resignation "with regrets," and, as Welsh suggested, adopted a motion asking Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, immediately to seat Bromwich on that committee.

New Committeewoman.

The convention also elected Mrs. Horace S. Hedges of Kansas City as the new national committeewoman, to succeed Mrs. Estelle D. Tanner of Jefferson City.

Mrs. Hedges was expected to have strong opposition in this race from Mrs. L. C. Davis of Boonville, former vice chairman of the G.O.P. state committee, but Mrs. Davis dropped out at the last minute and her name was not placed before the convention.

Following his election, Bromwich appeared before the party meeting and declared his first step would be to unify the party in Missouri.

"Obviously this cannot be done by one man alone, but requires the co-operation of everyone," he said. Bromwich pledged that "all matters affecting the party will be handled through duly elected party officials."

Bromwich earlier had con-

U.S. Air Force Chief in Moscow

TWINING ARRIVES IN MOSCOW, SAYS HIS MISSION IS TO LOOK AND LISTEN

General to View Air Show Today, Then Tour Installations — Deputy Defense Chief Greets Him.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

MOSCOW, June 23 — United States Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Nathan F. Twining's arrival in Moscow today is even bigger news historically than it is currently.

It was only a few years ago that nine out of ten Americans would have thought it more probable that American bombers would be operating over Moscow on a hostile mission by now than that the Air Force Chief of Staff would be coming here on a friendly mission to see the Soviet air show and to inspect Soviet facilities and equipment.

Twining's remarks on arrival lent emphasis to this point of view.

"I am very happy to be here," he said. "I am also honored and delighted that our President, Mr. Eisenhower, let me represent him here."

Twining said he was here to view the air show and other activities, to talk to Soviet air leaders to see what the Soviet Air Force is doing and to look at Soviet air equipment.

"I am sure it will benefit us a great deal," he added.

Not in Political Business.

Asked by reporters if his interest was primarily political, Twining replied that he was not in the political business.

"Our principal interest is to meet and talk with Soviet Air Force leaders," Twining said. "The purpose of this trip is to show our Air Force what the Soviet Air Force is doing in the way of developing new equipment."

The friendly visit of the United States Air Chief will have to be reciprocated by an invitation to Soviet air officials for a visit to the United States and inspection of our air facilities and equipment.

Perhaps the Russians also will receive a great deal of benefit. It is hard not to view this exchange of inspections as much like two gladiators examining each other's sword and armor before combat.

The alternative aspect is that such an exchange may lead to a lessening of tension and a decrease in emphasis on armaments.

This factor is responsible for the heart-searching that went on in Government councils before it was decided to allow Twining to accept the Soviet invitation. Our European allies, with the exception of Britain, have never met their NATO military obligations. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization was brought into being because of Soviet aggressiveness. If the United States and the U.S.S.R. permit their top military personalities to exchange visits like allies the heavy pressure that built and maintained NATO is apt to evaporate. This may be, of course, one of the Soviet motives in the present exchange.

It was almost impossible not to have permitted Twining to accept the invitation. France and Britain had also been invited to send their air chiefs and had accepted. Refusal by the United States would have branded us before the world as needlessly hostile to what the rest of the world considers a friendly gesture.

British Chief Arrives.

British Air Chief Marshal Sir Ronald Ivelaw Chapman came in an hour after Twining with a group of air marshals in a jet passenger liner. The chief of the French Air Ministry, Gen. Paul Bailly, arrived later in a twin-engined Bretagive transport instead of the Caravelle jet airliner in which he had been expected to fly to Moscow.

Twining's ship was a DC-6-B four-engined propeller transport. There were two Soviet TU-104 jet transports on the field. The United States is the last of the great nations to build jet transports. Ours will not be available until 1958.

The Egyptians arrived in a Soviet transport just after Twining drove away. Officers from East Germany, North Korea, the Mongolian Peoples Republic, Communist China, South Asia and eastern Europe have arrived or will arrive tomorrow. There are 20 foreign delegations coming to the air show.

Twining was met by Field Marshal Konev, first deputy minister of defense, and also commander of the Warsaw Pact forces—the Soviet counterpart of NATO—and Air Marshal Zhigerev, commander of the Soviet Air Forces.

Konev welcomed Twining to the Soviet Union. It was in response to this welcome that Twining made the remarks previously quoted. The greetings were informal.

Soviet officers lined up to the left of the airliner ladder and United States Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen and his at-

Eisenhower Reverses Wilson On Mufti vs. Uniform Issue

Secretary Withdraws Order to Wear Civilian Clothes After President Says Officers Should Have Choice.

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP) —Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, already in a jam in Congress on the question of Air Force funds, was reversed by President Eisenhower today on the issue of civilian clothes vs. uniforms for thousands of military officers.

Mr. Eisenhower passed the word from Walter Reed hospital, through an aid, that he feels the choice of civilian dress or military garb should be left up to the officers themselves.

So Wilson quickly withdrew his order, made public yesterday, for about 11,000 Army, Navy, and Air Force officers in administrative type jobs around Washington to shed uniforms.

The Wilson aim had been to take some of the military look off the capital, where uniforms abound. As Wilson put it: "We don't think that at the seat of government it is good to have so many people putting on a military act."

The order, which would have been effective July 1, led to much grumbling among officers faced with the prospect of having to lay out substantial sums for new clothes. Some said that about all the civilian clothes they have now are of the sports variety.

One young reservist called to active duty lamented "I've put $500 into uniforms I don't need."

The reaction from the President, who knows what it is to try to get along on a junior officer's pay, was swift. He talked it over with White House aids today, and Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told reporters:

"I would think you could say he feels (the question of whether to wear civilian clothes) should be optional, and particularly optional in the case of junior officers to avoid an unusual outlay of money for civilian clothes."

Such a feeling on the part of the Commander in Chief amounts to a command. So Wilson quickly issued a new directive from Quantico, Va., where he is attending a conference of military chiefs.

The new order contained some governmentese about working out "details" but left no doubt that the original Wilson command was void. It said:

"Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson announced today that there remained details to be worked out in connection with the instructions to be issued by the Secretary of the Army, Navy and Air Force in regard to the wearing of civilian clothes by commissioned and warrant officers who are attached to headquarters in the Washington (D.C.), area.

"In the meantime he has asked the secretaries to issue instructions to make the practice of wearing civilian clothes after July 1, 1956, optional or voluntary on the part of the individual officers concerned."

MILITARY HOLDS 'SHORT NUCLEAR WAR DOCTRINE UNJUSTIFIABLE'

Official Paper Calling for a Single Chief of Staff for All Three Services Now Being Strongly Supported.

By JAMES RESTON
The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23 — The Army-Air Force controversy has broken out again over the strategy and organization of the United States armed services.

Though Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson tried to end the row on May 20 by opposing the creation of a single chief of staff for the Army, Navy and Air Force, powerful Army officials are still pressing for precisely that solution.

An official Army staff paper, which is widely supported in the Department of the Army, was made available to the New York Times before the public controversy on this question last month.

After Wilson's statement, it was withheld from publication pending developments, but it is now known that the Army is not only continuing its campaign for a sweeping reorganization of the armed services but is criticizing the Air Force's doctrine of a "short nuclear war" as "morally, politically, and practically unjustifiable."

Holds Unification Failure.

Though the Army staff paper concedes that the reorganization of the armed services succeeded at the Secretary of Defense level, it charges that the "unification" of the armed services envisaged by the Army in 1947 has "failed."

Accordingly, it calls for "revision of the National Security Act (of 1947) to reorganize the Department of Defense above the military services level to provide an operating joint military staff and a single chief of staff of the joint staff."

This is necessary, the Army staff paper asserts, "in order to resolve service divergencies on basic strategy, on the doctrine of unity of command, and on the control and use" of the new family of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

Instead of uniting the services, the Army paper says, time and the development of differences over total hydrogen war have driven the services further apart and necessitated basic political and organizational decisions to change the present system.

Eisenhower's Words.

"It was the hope of all of us who worked to achieve the passage of the National Defense (Security) Act of 1947, "Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said on Sept. 25, 1952, during the presidential campaign, "that unity was in the making.

"This has not proved to be the case. Such unity as we have achieved is too much form and too little substance. With three services, in place of the former two, still going their separate ways, and with an over-all civilian staff frequently unable to enforce corrective action, the end result has been not to remove duplication, but to produce triplication. All this must be brought to an end."

The Department of the Army is now charging that, after three and a half years of the Eisenhower Administration, the "triplication" has not been brought to an end, that the services are still going their separate ways, that the civilian heads have not enforced corrective action, and that the situation has been made infinitely worse as a result of the controversy over the role of the hydrogen bomb in the national strategy.

Massive Retaliation Policy.

The heart of this controversy lies in the increasing tendency in the present Administration to rely on the doctrine of what Secretary of State John Foster Dulles calls "the capacity for massive retaliation."

The Army staff paper defines the Army-Air Force controversy on this point in these terms:

"Although in apparent outward agreement to date, the Army and the Air Force are divided on the basic concept of fighting World War III.

"In brief, the Air Force believes in the so-called 'short-war concept'—primarily a strategic air war of massive atomic destruction in which a decision will be reached in from 30 to 60 days.

"In opposition to this concept is the fundamental Army belief that decision will not be reached, in a manner acceptable to our basic national objectives, until the effectiveness of enemy land, sea and air forces as war-making potentials

EISENHOWER HAS A BUSY DAY, MAY GO HOME IN WEEK

Phones Dulles, Talks Politics With Adams, But Keeps Mum on Second Term.

WASHINGTON, June 23 (UP) —President Eisenhower's doctors told him today he should be able to leave the hospital in about a week.

They gave him this good news during a busy morning in which Mr. Eisenhower talked politics with a member of his staff, diplomatic matters with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and overruled Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson's order that all military officers in the Washington area doff their uniforms for civilian dress.

During the busy schedule in his hospital room the President did nothing to squelch Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall's flat statement of yesterday that he "hasn't the slightest doubt" the Chief Executive will run for a second term.

The President, impatient to leave Walter Reed Army medical center, asked the doctors when he could be discharged. They informed him that if his convalescence from his intestinal operation two weeks ago today continues at the present rate he could leave "in about a week."

15 Days Original Estimate.

One of the President's doctors, Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, had said immediately after the operation that Mr. Eisenhower would be able to leave the hospital in about 15 days, which would be about this time. White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said today he did not feel that Dr. Heaton had been "over-optimistic."

The doctors today cut the deep stitches taken in Mr. Eisenhower's abdomen during the operation. They said the sutures "will be removed within 24 hours." Surface stitches were removed earlier this week.

Hagerty said he probably will be able to say early next week where the President will go to recuperate. The President's Gettysburg farm is regarded as likely. It has been recommended by his doctors.

In good spirits after a restful night's sleep, the President held his longest business session since his operation on June 9.

Report on Convention.

Hagerty said the Chief Executive received a report from presidential aid Sherman Adams on Republican national convention appointments made yesterday by the G.O.P. arrangements committee.

Hall made his second-term statement after that meeting.

Hagerty indicated Mr. Eisenhower was fully aware of Hall's remark. He said the President "read the papers." But Hagerty insisted it was not brought up at the Adams conference.

The President already was "fully aware" of most of the convention appointments, Hagerty said, having discussed them with Hall before he entered the hospital June 8.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower also did not indicate whether he plans to attend the Republican convention in San Francisco Aug. 20.

The physicians made public their prediction about the President's prospective departure from the hospital in a midday

AIRLINES SAID TO OK 20 PCT. CUT IN ATLANTIC FARES

CANNES, France, June 23 (UP) — Executives of International Airlines have approved a 20 per cent cut in trans-Atlantic passenger fares, unofficial sources reported here tonight.

However, the executives confirmed only the fact that they ended two days of voting on demands for reduced fares and other problems facing the airlines. They indicated that an official announcement would be made within the next 24 hours.

The 64 airlines represented at the International Air Transport Association conference faced more than 200 separate resolutions all involved in the proposals made by two American airlines to bring down fares and entice more travelers to go by air.

BOAT ATTEMPTING NEW SPEED MARK BEHIND SCHEDULE

A motorboat crew trying to beat the New Orleans-St. Louis speed record of 52 hours and 53 minutes on the Mississippi river arrived at 7:40 o'clock last night at Cairo, Ill., for a refueling stop and quickly pushed off again, 2½ hours behind schedule.

The boat, called the Rambler, was operated by Roy Cullum and Dick Arant, both of Little Rock, Ark. They were aiming at 46 hours, which would put them in St. Louis at 2 a.m. today. When they stopped for fuel at Memphis about noon yesterday they were three hours behind schedule because of spark plug trouble at Helena, Ark.

They left New Orleans at 5:30 a.m. Friday. One day behind them, hoping to make the trip in no more than 40 hours, were Wylie Cavin Jr. and James Phillips, both of North Little Rock, in the Yellow Jacket.

The present record was set last summer by Charles and Raymond Loestscher of Little Rock.

BONN'S MOSCOW ENVOY SAYS REDS INVADED EMBASSY

MOSCOW, June 23 (AP)— West German Ambassador Wilhelm Haas charged today Soviet Tuesday and arrested two persons.

He wrote a note of protest claiming this was a violation of diplomatic immunity and delivered it to Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir S. Semyenov.

The two persons arrested had gone to the embassy claiming they were German citizens and requesting that they be repatriated to Western Germany. The West German embassy here has 20 to 40 such requests every day.

The building to which they went is a large mansion in the embassy quarter. The only Germans at the building were two embassy chauffeurs.

The building is guarded by two Soviet police who stand at the front gate. When the two persons who were later arrested walked into the grounds two other policemen came, after them, Haas said, adding that the two arrested persons only had time to shout to the chauffeurs "We are Germans. Please help us."

Soviet police insisted they were Soviet citizens.

2 Forest Fires in Alaska.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, June 23 (AP) — Flames swept over more than 30,000 acres of spruce and brush in two serious foresf fires in Western Alaska today. The fires, both near the villages of Nulato and Galena, raged out of control.

BIG MAJORITY INDICATED FOR NASSER IN VOTING

Of the First 125,000 Ballots Counted, Only 16 Vote Against Egyptian Premier.

CAIRO, June 23 (AP)—Unofficial reports from voting centers tonight indicated a huge majority had marked a little red circle for Premier Nasser in Egypt's "yes or no" election of a president.

Great numbers of the 5,720,000 registered voters, including women for the first time, voted throughout the nation today in Egypt's first election in seven years. At the same time they were asked to vote for a new constitution that will transform Egypt's government from a nine-man military council to a civilian system governed by laws.

Official results are not expected to be known until tomorrow.

The first scattered returns reported by the Interior Ministry gave Nasser and the new constitution an almost unanimous indorsement. Of the first 125,000 counted, only 16 voted against Nasser.

Given voting rights for the first time, 150,000 women were registered, and a high proportion of them apparently cast ballots.

Feminist Abstains.

Egypt's most famous feminist, Dr. Doria Shafik, indignantly abstained, however, on the ground the new constitution is not democratic and does not recognize the absolute equality of men and women.

Among women voting were the wives of Nasser and the eight other members of the Revolution Command Council which has wielded supreme power since the overthrow of King Farouk four years ago.

The voters were given two ballots, a white one for the presidential election and a yellow one for the plebiscite on the constitution. On the white one was a picture of Nasser and beneath it a black and a red circle. On the yellow ballot was a picture of the document representing the constitution and also black and red circles.

Because a big majority of the electorate is illiterate, election committees explained to voters they should fill in the red circle for "yes" or the black circle for "no"—there was no candidate for president running against Nasser, and the voters' choice was Nasser or nothing.

The voters were instructed to mark their ballots in a private booth, fold it and drop it in the box. This experiment in use of the secret ballot worked well in upper class districts but tended to break down in poorer, crowded sections where so many pushed into the voting places that the machinery was swamped. In such cases the voters simply marked their circles in front of onlookers.

Civilian Cabinet.

After the election Nasser will retire as a military man. So will all the other eight members of the military council except Gen. Abdel Haikm Amer, who will remain the army's commander-in-chief. The new constitution requires the cabinet to be civilian.

Nasser's first political move is expected to be organization of a single political party to be called the National Union, in preparation for the popular election of a national assembly.

Election of 38-year-old Nasser rings down the curtain on a weird chapter of Egyptian history in which a small band of 13 military men, totally inexperienced in politics, took over power from Farouk and proceeded to guide the nation through some its greatest crises.

Gen. Mohamed Naguib, leader of the revolution in the early days, was deposed from the presidency in 1954 and remains under arrest in a spacious house in Cairo's outskirts. He still draws a monthly pension of $560 and has his family with him. He makes few public appearances.

TROOPER DANGLES FROM PLANE WHEN PARACHUTE SNARLS

FORT BRAGG, N.C., June 23 (UP)—Pvt. David J. Wilde, 19 years old, of Clifton, N. J., dangled by his parachute harness for five minutes from a Flying Boxcar before companions pulled him back to safety.

The incident occurred Thursday when Wilde started on his fifth jump. The parachute failed to open and caught on the undercarriage of the plane.

Jump masters and other crew members pulled him back into the plane, frightened but unhurt. Wilde said he decided he had to overcome his fear then and there, so he went right back up for another try, that time successful.

Fort Bragg officials attributed the accident to a failure of the static line to open the parachute. They said it appeared that the line was caught underneath the harness of Wilde's chute.

MARINE REVIVED AFTER BEING HIT BY LIGHTNING

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C., June 23 (AP)—Prompt artificial respiration probably saved the life of a Marine staff sergeant injured by lightning, the Public Information Office here reported today.

The injured man was Staff Sgt. Robert L. Moore, 28 years old, of Keystone, W.Va., an instructor in infantry tactics at this Marine Corps base.

While he was instructing the Eighty-first special Infantry Company, Marine reserve unit from Springfield, Ill., Monday a severe electrical storm developed. Moore, using a field telephone, was knocked unconscious when lightning struck nearby.

Hospitalman first class Cyril Melichar, on the reserve unit's inspector-instructor staff, immediately began artificial respiration. It was feared at one time that Moore's heart had stopped, but after about 45 minutes he regained consciousness. Marine officials said he recovered and apparently suffered no ill effects. He was the only man injured.

MISUNDERSTOOD ON 'PHONY' TERM, WILSON EXPLAINS

Asserts it Applied to Reporter's Questions, Not to Senate Efforts to Raise Fund.

By ANTHONY LEVIERO
The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

QUANTICO, Va., June 23 — Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson asserted today that he was misunderstood though not misquoted in using the epithet "phony" about increased defense spending proposals in Congress.

Wilson was tense and obviously considerably disturbed as he came to a full realization of the impact of his remarks on both Republican and Democratic lawmakers engaged in debating the $34,983,734,000 defense appropriation.

He explained that his remark was intended to characterize a reporter's question in a news conference Thursday evening and not political maneuvers in the Senate. On this ground he was ignoring Democratic demands for his resignation or even direct communication with the offended parties.

"I didn't have it in mind to," said Wilson when asked if he had communicated with any of the Senators. "I thought I'd give them a chance to change their position."

Counting on His Explanation.

He remarked that they "took their position on what they saw in the papers" and apparently he was relying on his comments today to clear the air.

The Secretary is opposed to any increase in the defense budget, in the conviction that it will provide all the authority he needs to make defense contracts (obligational authority) in fiscal 1957, beginning July 1.

Many members are dissatis-

Only a Fourth of Marriages 'Really Happy,' Author Says

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., June 23 (AP)—Happily married? If so, you're an exception, says Samuel G. Kling.

Kling, Baltimore lawyer and author of several books on marriage, told the Maryland State Bar Association yesterday unhappy marriages far outnumber blissful unions.

"For every four marriages, there is one divorce," he said in a speech at the lawyer's annual convention. "And of the three remaining marriages, only one is really happy. The other two are marriages that are merely tolerated for one reason or another.

"Some couples remain unhappily married because of religious scruples, some for the sake of children, others from sheer inertia, some because of cowardice or lack of gumption, some for reasons of vanity, status or prestige.

"Fifty years ago marriage was for life. Today, the average duration of marriage is about 10 years. In almost half of a test survey of 81,000 divorces made in 1949, the marriage lasted five years or less."

Kling told the lawyers he is convinced that "youthful marriages are an important factor in our shocking divorce rate."

"The grim fact is that in a marriage where both parties are 20 or younger the divorce rate is even 14 per cent higher than the normal rate," he said. "But where the bride and groom are between 21 and 25, divorces occur in only 6 per cent of the cases."

City's New Weed Control Law Cutting Blow to Lazy Citizens

St. Louis property owners who let their weeds grow unchecked this summer will find city authorities determinedly beating a pathway to their doors with greater powers under a new weed-control ordinance.

Now, when an owner fails to trim his weeds properly and the city has to do the job, officials can recover the cost of the work by placing a lien against the property. The old ordinance did not permit this.

In addition, there now exists a $25,000 revolving fund—a sort of fiscal power mower—to finance the weed-cutting operation.

PRESIDENT WILL WIN COLORADO, ITS DEMOCRATIC GOVERNOR SAYS

Johnson Assert Loss By Eisenhower would Be 'Big Upset' — Suggests Nixon for Secretary of State.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

ATLANTIC CITY, June 23— The Democratic Governor of Colorado said today that it would be a "big political upset" if President Eisenhower failed to carry Colorado again this year as he did in 1952.

Edwin C. Johnson, who is retiring this year after two years as Governor and 12 years as a United States Senator from Colorado, was one of the early arrivals for the forty-eighth annual Conference of Governors, which starts tomorrow.

"Ike is very popular personally in Colorado; people regard him as one of the home-folks," he told reporters in an interview. This popularity, he added, does not extend to the Republican party, with the result that the election results in Colorado this November could be very "mixed."

Gov. Johnson created something of a stir by suggesting the appointment of Vice President Nixon as Secretary of State. His suggestion was made in answer to a question as to whether Nixon's renomination for Vice President would help President Eisenhower carry Colorado.

"I Think Well of Nixon"

"Our people think it would hinder the President," Johnson replied. "I served in the Senate with Nixon. I respect his capacity a great deal. I would like to see Nixon made Secretary of State. He has done so much in his tours to build up good will for the United States. I think very well of Nixon myself."

Gov. Fred Hall, Republican, of Kansas, was another early arrival. He told reporters that President Eisenhower is sure to carry Kansas again this year. The decline in farm prices weakened the President in Kansas for a time, he explained, but added that the enactment of the second farm bill, which the President signed, is helping him regain lost ground.

This year, as in other years, the stated purpose of the annual governors conference is to provide the chief executives of the various states with an opportunity to exchange views on common problems, such as highway construction, mental hospital operation, state contributions to school costs, and similar matters.

But with a national election this fall and the nominating conventions of the two major parties nearing, the Governors are expected this year, as in other presidential years, to devote their main energies to the political situation.

All but two of the 48 state governors are scheduled to attend the conference. The absentees will be Govs. George M. Leader of Pennsylvania, who is visiting Europe, and Earl Long of Louisiana.

Some Favorite Sons.

Three of the Democratic Governors who will be present are active or favorite son candidate for their party's presidential nomination. They are Averell Harriman of New York, Frank J. Lausche of Ohio and G. Mennen Williams of Michigan. Several others are potential candidates for Vice President on the Democratic ticket.

In the second category are Govs. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, this year's host Governor, and Frank G. Clement of Tennessee.

Only one of the other Governors attending the conference is on record to date as supporting Harriman's presidential ambitions. He is Raymond Gary of Oklahoma. A number of the other Governors have publicly stated their support of Adlai E. Stevenson.

James A. Finnegan, national manager of the Stevenson for President Committee, arrived in Atlantic City today and took up headquarters in a hotel about two blocks from those serving as headquarters for the conference.

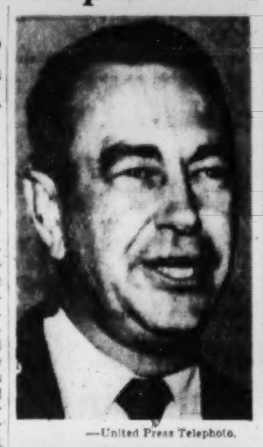

Conference headquarters were flooded today with reports that Carmine G. DeSapio, leader of Tammany and Democratic national committeeman for New York, would likewise put in an appearance at the conference. He is regarded as Harriman's chief political adviser and supporter.

These reports were denied with some heat by members of the Governor's staff who arrived today. They implied that any open quest for convention support at the conference would be "unseemly."

Democratic State Committee Rebuffs Gov. Chandler, Names Man He Opposed.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 23— Encouraged by the recently renewed feud between Democratic leaders of the state, the Kentucky Republican Central Committee, which was to have selected a nominee for the United States Senate seat held by the late Alben W. Barkley at its meeting here today, postponed action in the hope that former Senator John Sherman Cooper might be persuaded to accept the place on the ticket.

Because of the importance of Kentucky to control of the next Senate, some Republicans think President Eisenhower can be prevailed on to ask Cooper to leave his post as Ambassador to India and, good man that he is, come to the aid of his party.

Now is the time, they say, for the Senate now numbers 48 Democrats and 47 Republicans. Thirty-five Senate seats will be at stake Nov. 6. Two Senators will be elected both in Kentucky and in South Carolina.

Both Sides Predict Gains.

National Democratic leaders contend they have a good chance of picking up as many as 12 Republican seats. The Republicans challenge this and say they expect to replace at least six Democratic Senators with Republicans. Much depends, of course, on the presidential nominees.

Cooper, in response to a request that he consider the nomination, wrote on June 2 to Dewey Daniels of Hazard, Republican state chairman, saying he thought his present job was highly important and that to leave it would not be an "orderly or responsible action." Two days later he underwent a throat operation at a Boston Hospital which apparently was successful.

Another advantage of postponing action is the opportunity it affords to gauge the full significance of the bitter Democratic contest for control of the party in the state. Efforts of Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler to make peace with Senator Earle C. Clements and former Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby, who control the party machinery in Kentucky, were rebuffed last week and the factions now are vying for delegates to the state Democratic Convention to be held July 3 at Louisville.

Cooper a Vote-Getter.

Cooper would contribute substantially to the strength of the Republican ticket in Kentucky because of his record in public office and his success as a vote-getter. He had an important part in organization of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and took part in many vital meetings of the NATO Council. He was a member of the United States delegation to three meetings of the United Nations General Assembly and was a special consultant to Dean Acheson when he was Secretary of State.

In November 1946 Cooper became the third Republican in Kentucky's history to be elected to the Senate. He filled the unexpired term of Chandler, who had resigned after serving four years to become baseball commissioner. Cooper was defeated for a full six-year term in 1948 by Virgil Chapman of Paris, won another unexpired term in 1952 and lost the full-term election in 1954 to Barkley.

The Democratic nominee for the four-year unexpired Barkley term is Wetherby, who was succeeded as Governor by Chandler last December.

The Democratic candidate for the full six-year term is Senator Clements, who was nominated for re-election at the May 29 primary. He defeated Joe B. Bates, who was put in the race by Chandler, who had vowed to beat Senator Clements.

G. O. P. Opponent a Liberal.

Senator Clements's Republican opponent is Thurston B. Morton, who served three terms as a Congressman and resigned as Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations to seek the nomination in the primary. The 48-year-old Louisville lawyer is considered an internationalist and liberal in Republican ranks.

Some Kentucky Republican leaders who have not abandoned hope that Cooper might be induced to become a candidate think he might change his mind if the Democratic State Convention reveals an irreconcilable rift. The first indication of the seriousness of the Democratic fight may be seen in the meetings which will be held next Saturday in Kentucky's 120 counties to elect delegates to the state convention. Numerous contested delegations are expected.

The convention will name members of the Democratic State Central Committee, a national committeeman and delegates to the Aug. 13 Democratic national convention at Chicago.

A new series of skirmishes, marches and counter-marches within the Democratic organization began after the surprising 80,000-vote primary victory of Senator Clements last month over Gov. Chandler's candidate. This was a starting setback for Gov. Chandler, who had made a flashy comeback in politics by winning the Democratic nomination for Governor last year against the combined efforts of Senator Clements, Gov. Wetherby and Senator Barkley, who denounced him as a renegade for his party irregularity and aid to the Dixiecrats.

Unsolved Questions.

But Gov. Chandler and Senator Clements met soon after the primary. There was still the question as to who would be appointed by Gov. Chandler to sit in the Barkley Senate seat until the November general election, and the question of who would be named by the Democratic State Central Committee as the nominee for election to the remainder of the Barkley term.

Gov. Chandler offered to name a man agreeable to Senator Clements to serve until the election on certain conditions.

The conditions were that: the man to get the interim appointment would not be Wetherby, who had refused to campaign for Chandler in the general election last year.

Chandler be named chairman of the Kentucky delegation to the national convention.

Chandler be named Democratic national committeeman for Kentucky.

Chandler receive the votes of the Kentucky delegation for a few ballots as a favorite son.

Chandler's political ambitions do not stop this side of the presidency, he has acknowledged.

Traditionally, in Kentucky, the Governor is named to head the delegation to the national convention and also is made national committeeman. Wetherby, however, has clung to the committee membership.

Last Monday, Chandler announced the appointment of Joseph Leary, Frankfort attorney, to serve until the election. Leary, who had been co-chairman of the Chandler campaign for the gubernatorial nomination, also was an old friend of Senator Clements.

Setback for Chandler.

Tuesday members of the Democratic State Committee, some of whom had expresssed indignation because Senator Clements had treated with Gov. Chandler, voted 35 to 0 to place on the ticket for the four-year unexpired term none other than Wetherby—the one man Chandler had stipulated against. Senator Clements issued a statement expressing pleasure at both selections.

Gov. Chandler's peace overtures had proved futile. The war was on.

On Wednesday Learly, an ardent and able party worker, who had hoped to get the state committee's nod for the nomination for the unexpired Barkley term, declined to accept the interim appointment although a brass plate bearing his name had been fixed to a Senate desk in anticipation of his taking the seat at once.

Thursday Gov. Chandler then announced the appointment of the other co-chairman of his gubernatorial campaign, Robert Humphreys, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee whom he had previously named State Highway Commissioner. On Friday, receiving news of the new appointment, Senator Clements at Washington issued another statement expressing joy at Humphrey's appointment, referring to him as "an old friend of mine" and a "real Democrat."

Asked if he intended to support the Clements-Wetherby ticket in November, Leary promptly replied "Of course."

Chandler, when asked what he had to say about supporting the ticket, answered, "If I had to say I would have said it. I've said nothing."

Chandler Eats Crow.

Gov Chandler, who made the Clements-Wetherby-Barkley faction eat crow last year with his victory over Bert T. Combs in the Democratic primary, now is having a taste of the tough old bird himself.

Although he won a resounding triumph over the state organization in the primary nominating him less than a year by a plurality of 18,000 and went on to defeat Republican Edwin Denney by a record 128,000 majority, Gov. Chandler's candidate Bates lost by a near-record 80,000 votes.

The answer appears to lie principally in Chandler's tax program which he rammed through the Legislature soon after he took office. In order to raise revenue to support an improved public school program he reduced state income tax exemptions to a point which created 150,000 new taxpayers, and increased the rates on both personal and corporation income taxes, increasing the yield from these sources by 50 per cent. The Legislature also increased the production tax on whisky from 5 to 10 cents a gallon in a state which produces more than half of the nation's bourbon.

The reaction in Franklin county, which includes Frankfort, the state capital, and has several large distilleries, was readily apparent. Gov. Chandler carried the county in the primary last year by about 1000 votes. His candidate for the senatorial nomination lost it by about 1000.

Those mentioned besides Cooper for the Republican nomination opposing Wetherby include the Rev. Dr. Elmer E. Gabard and James Park, Lexington attorney. The Rev. Dr. Gabbard, 65-year-old Presbyterian minister is president of the Witherspoon College and director of orphanages at Buckhorn, Ky. He lost close races against Democrats for Congress in 1942 and 1944. Park is former commonwealth attorney for Fayette county.

COUPLE DRIVES ACROSS U.S. TWICE IN RECORD 124 HOURS

NEW YORK, June 23 (UP)— A husband and wife team from Richmond, Va., rolled into New York in their French Renault today to win a 50-cent bet and set a record of five days for an automobile trip to Los Angeles and back.

Tom and Lucy Clark, taking turns at the wheel and making only 10-minute stops for food and fuel, shortened by 29 hours and 22 minutes the record for a round trip from New York to Los Angeles.

They left New York shortly after noon on Monday. Today, 124 hours and three minutes later, they were back at the same point, breaking a record set in 1928 by E. G. (Cannonball) Baker.

TRUMAN VISITS FAMED HOME IN BRITAIN, PREFERS OWN

LONDON, June 23 (AP) — Harry S. Truman visited one of the stately homes of England today and decided he preferred his frame house in Independence, Mo.

"It's wonderful, beautiful and historic," said the former President, "but nothing in the world is so good as Independence."

Truman drove 30 miles to Hatfield House, the home of Lord Salisbury, Lord President of the Privy Council. Accompanied by Mrs. Truman, the former President had tea with Lord and Lady Salisbury and then went on a tour through the famous house. Hatfield House dates from the sixteenth century. It was the childhood home of the first Queen Elizabeth.

SHEPILOV AVOIDS COMMITMENT ON BACKING ARABS

Syrian Premier Discusses Palestine, Algeria Questions With Soviet Visitor.

DAMASCUS, Syria, June 23 (AP)—Premier Sabri Assali today tried to draw Russia's new foreign minister into publicly backing the Arabs against Israel, but Dmitri Shepilov deftly avoided any solid commitment.

Shepilov and the Syrian leader talked for an hour on the Palestine and Algerian questions. Earlier Shepilov and Syrian Foreign Minister Salah Bitar discussed the same subjects. Shepilov did not make any commitments at that meeting either.

A Foreign Office communique said the two Foreign Ministers would take up the questions more thoroughly tomorrow.

Meets President

Shepilov also conferred with President Shukri Kuwatly on the first day of his three-day visit to Damascus. This is his second stop on a swing through the Mideast that will take him to Lebanon and Greece. He arrived last evening from Cairo.

After his one-hour meeting with the Premier the Syrian government issued a statement saying Assali told the Soviet visitor "Syria's foreign policy is based on Syria's supreme national interest," the "liberation" of Palestine and Algeria.

"Syria stands always for right and peace and supports without hesitation every liberation movement because right and peace cannot exist under the shadow of colonialism," Assali said.

"On this basis, Syria is ready to make friends with anyone who stands beside her and extends a helping hand."

The Premier also told Shepilov: "The Arabs will never forget the honorable stands made by the Soviet Union with the Arabs over Palestine and Algeria."

Rightful Problems.

In reply, the statement said, "Shepilov expressed his support of Syria's and the Arabs' attitude regarding their rightful problems—a free independent attitude not influenced except by national interests."

Diplomats pointed out that in this expression Shepilov had again avoided mention of Palestine, the most pressing issue in this country.

"Shepilov . . . affirmed," the statement added, "the Soviet Union backs every nation which works for the realization of the right, justice which fights aggression and works for promoting peace in the world."

U.S. Gives Lebanon $3,670,000 on Eve of Red's Visit.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23— The United States reached for its purse today to help Lebanon improve its road and air transportation, on the eve of the Soviet Foreign Minister's visit there.

Although the $3,670,000 grant-in-aid to Lebanon, announced today, has been under discussion for several months, the scheduled arrival of Dmitri Shepilov in Beirut Monday helped the State Department to decide the issue in a hurry.

Shepilov is expected to offer the Lebanese a long-term loan. Unlike Egypt, which was able to barter cotton for guns and jet planes from the Soviet bloc, Lebanon has few natural resources to interest the Russians.

Beirut seemed no less interested than Washington in demonstrating friendship for the West just as Shepilov was touring the Arab countries. In an unusual public statement, the Lebanese government had nothing but praise for the United States foreign-aid program. It recalled that the United States over the past four years had invested $23,400,000 in the economic growth and development of Lebanon.

1500 Europeans Attempt to Storm Casbah But Police Disperse Them

6 Killed, 16 Wounded in Algiers Clashes —Rebel Commandos Attack—Military Patrols in Streets.

ALGIERS, June 23 (AP)— Fifteen hundred Europeans today tried to storm the Casbah, the old Arab quarter used as a hideout for rebel hit-and-run attacks. They were dispersed by police and troops armed with tommyguns.

The outbreak, followed by rebel violence and police countermeasures, left six persons dead and 16 wounded in Algiers. Military patrols with tommyguns guarded the streets tonight.

Dead were two Europeans, three pro-French Arabs, and one nationalist. Eleven Europeans, four pro-French Arabs, and one nationalist were wounded.

The violence erupted at the edge of the Casbah after attacks by a four-man rebel commando band from the native quarter killed two persons.

The commandos killed a European merchant in the lower Casbah district, then shot and wounded three Europeans near the Algiers cathedral. The rebels also killed a pro-French Moslem and wounded a European cafe owner.

Crowds of Europeans formed, beginning with the mourners at the funeral for a young European killed by the rebels.

The demonstrators screamed for arms to fight the nationalists and marched toward the Casbah, chanting the "Marseillaise." They forced several police barriers.

Reinforced patrols finally broke up the riots, but incidents mounted. Tension continued high in the Casbah, which has many residents of Spanish and Italian origin as well as Arabs.

In the Bab-el-Oued district next to the Casbah, rebels shot down a young Frenchman and fought off several French police cars. Two French policemen were wounded.

A near tragedy was averted when a French paratrooper grabbed and disarmed a hand grenade tossed into a cafe where the proprietor was giving a wedding party for his daughter. Another grenade wounded four persons at a cafe nearby.

Shots continued to ring through the city after nightfall.

Robert Lacoste, French resident minister, issued a statement obviously intended for the Europeans saying: "The reply to terrorism requires conscientious and flawless discipline; it is a matter for the forces of order, guided by the responsible authorities."

Nerves of both Moslems and Europeans in this city of more than 500,000 were extremely tense.

'MACHINE GUN' WILLIAMS, HERO OF WORLD WAR I, DIES

MIAMI, Fla., June 23 (AP)— Col. Frank M. (Machine Gun) Williams, a World War I hero and member of Gen. John J. Pershing's staff, died today. He was 77 years old.

Williams participated in four major battles with the Eighty-Second Division of the American Expeditionary Forces. He received the Distinguished Service Cross with another heroic member of the same organization, Sgt. Alvin York.

MORE PARKING SPACE IS TERMED VITAL TO CHECK SHIFT TO COUNTY

Head of Civic Progress, Inc., Cites Possible Tax Loss — Alderman Urges Speed on Bills for Garages.

Provision of additional downtown parking facilities is essential to stop the movement of business firms into St. Louis county, Edwin M. Clark, president of Civil Progress, Inc., said yesterday.

Pointing out that no less than 20 per cent of the city's total assessed valuation for tax purposes is in the downtown area, Clark said a reduction in property values resulting from loss of business would mean lessened tax income to the city and resultant inability to obtain competent city workers.

Civic Progress, organization of downtown business interests, has thrown its support behind bills pending in the Board of Aldermen for two multiple-story municipal garages downtown.

Opposed by Lot Operators.

The measures, calling for structures in the Chestnut-Pine-Sixth-Broadway and Delmar-Lucas-Eighth-Ninth blocks, providing 1465 spaces, are opposed bitterly by parking lot operators, who contend there is no present demand for increased facilities and that when such demand does occur, private enterprise can supply it.

Clark, president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., said at a public hearing on the bills Friday that Civic Progress normally would be last to oppose private enterprise in connection with parking or anything else, but that the private operators had failed to give assurance that they intended to provide adequate facilities.

The Off-Street Parking Commission, in recommending the municipal garage program, has cited engineering surveys showing need for about 6400 more parking spaces.

Bills Pending.

Bills for the parking garages are pending in the aldermanic zoning committee. Need for their enactment has been discussed in a series of Post-Dispatch articles.

Alderman Anton Niemeyer, chairman of the committee, said after last Friday's public hearing that the committee would not act until it had received and studied a transcript of the four-hour meeting.

Donald Gunn, president of the Board of Alderman, told the Post-Dispatch he doubted the bills could be passed before the summer recess begins next Friday. He pointed out that a bill to authorize a revenue bond issue of $4,500,000 for building the facilities had not yet been introduced although it has been approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

"Even if it had been offered at last Friday's session, it could not be given three readings and passed at the next session," he said. "Without the money available, nothing could be done toward acquiring the sites."

Further Questions.

Gunn said he had some further questions he wanted to ask. He said the parking lot operators have been contending that sooner or later the municipal garages will get into financial difficulties and will have to be bailed out with parking meter funds after the Legislature authorizes their use.

"If this is in the picture, I want to know about it," he said.

Alderman Alfred I. Harris, Twenty-second Ward Democrat and a member of the zoning committee, in a statement yesterday urged the committee to report the bills out favorably "and as quickly as possible, so that the Board of Aldermen can act on them under a suspension of the rules next Friday, which is scheduled to be our last meeting before the summer recess.

"If for any reason other members of the committee feel they need more time to consider the merits of the bill the Board of Aldermen should delay their recess until these bills can be voted on so the city can embark on the program as quickly as possible."

COIN IN WINDPIPE BUMPED LOOSE IN AMBULANCE RIDE

A 50-cent piece lodged in 14-year-old Leo Kuntz's windpipe yesterday, but a good bump in the road, hit by the ambulance rushing the choking boy to the hospital, pushed the coin into his stomach.

Leo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Kuntz, 3711 Edwards road, Lemay, had dived for the coin at Franke's swimming pool, Telegraph road at the Meramec river, St. Louis county. He was gripping it between his teeth and dog-paddling along, when a companion shouted: "Take that out of your mouth. You'll choke!"

Leo opened his mouth and down went the large coin. Efforts of the lifeguard to shake the coin loose, holding Leo upside down, failed and the ambulance was summoned.

The combination of high speed and a sturdy bump at Weber road and the Frisco Railroad crossing solved the problem. At St. Louis County Hospital, Leo was chipper and breathing well. The prescribed cure: "Let nature take its course."

DR. JOSEPH HENSKE DIES IN OMAHA; EX-ST. LOUISAN

Dr. Joseph A. Henske, a pediatrician and former St. Louisan, died yesterday of a heart ailment at Omaha, Nebr., where he had lived since 1912. He was the first staff president of Children's Memorial Hospital at Omaha. He was 70 years old.

Dr. Henske was the son of the late Dr. Andrew A. Henske, who came to St. Louis from Germany in 1870. Dr. Joseph Henske was a graduate of the old Barnes Medical School here. He was a charter member of the American Academy of Pediatrics. For years he headed the department of pediatrics at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine.

Surviving are Dr. Henske's wife; two sons, Joseph Jr., Palo Alto, Calif., and John Henske, Midland, Mich.; a daughter, Mrs. Tom Walsh, Omaha; five brothers, Dr. William C. Henske, Chippewa Falls, Wis., Brother Norbert Henske of Notre Dame University, Dr. George W. Henske, St. Louis dentist, Edward A. Henske and Harry A. Henske of St. Louis; and three sisters, Miss Angela E. Henske, Mrs. Johanna H. Watson and Mrs. Maurice H. Blufston of St. Louis. The funeral will be Tuesday in Omaha.

CHARLES A. LEE URGES FULL SCHOOL FOUNDATION POLICY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 23—Charles A. Lee, of Webster Groves, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, yesterday advocated the state begin a four-year program to insure $160 is spent annually for each school pupil instead of the present figure of $110.

Lee, in a letter addressed to school officials, said the state should finance fully the new foundation plan for state aid to public schools. A recent study indicated the state fell between $10,000,000 and $18,000,000 short in financing this program of extended aid to education, he declared.

Other changes advocated by the former state superintendent of schools include a $75,000,000 five-year school building program and a state adult education program. He said higher local school taxes and a withholding plan for state income taxes could pay the cost of his proposals.

CITY TRUCK DRIVER KILLED IN ROW WITH HIS CO-WORKER

Luther Jones, a city garbage truck driver, 4011 Kennerly avenue, was shot to death yesterday in an alley at the rear of 3834 Forest Park avenue following an argument with a garbage collector assigned to his truck, Richard McNeal, of the 3000 block of Lawton boulevard, police reported.

McNeal, 53 years old, a Negro, fired a pistol at Jones after Jones, 72, also a Negro, said that McNeal was too drunk to perform his duties, officers said. Jones was shot four times in the head.

25TH ANNIVERSARY REUNION

The Beaumont High School class of 1931 will have its twenty-fifth anniversary reunion at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Forest Park Hotel.

V.P. BALL OCT. 2, WITH PARADE ON FOLLOWING NIGHT

The annaul Veiled Prophet ball will be held Oct. 2 in Kiel Auditorium and the parade will be the following night, Oct. 3, it was announced yesterday.

When the Veiled Prophet order was formed in 1878, the founders decreed the ball and parade should be held "on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in October."

That decree has been followed through the years except that the ball and parade are no longer held on the same night. Several years ago the custom of holding the ball the night before the parade was started so that the Veiled Prophet Queen and her special maids could occupy a float in the parade.

In the event of rain on the night of the parade, it will be postponed until the next night.

LACLEDE WORKERS TO TAKE VOTE ON AUTHORIZING STRIKE

Employes of Laclede Gas Co. will meet tomorrow night to vote on whether to authorize a strike against the company, it was learned last night. A meeting has been called for 8 p.m. at a hall at 6141 Etzel avenue, Wellston.

More than 2000 employes are involved. They are members of three locals of the AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, covering maintenance, service, and office workers and foremen.

The meeting was called after company and union officials failed to reach agreement Friday in negotiations for a new contract, which have been under way since June 5. The present contract expires at midnight next Saturday. Union officials said wages and continuation of certain work done by Laclede employes were involved in the dispute.

NEW GROUPS NAMED TO AID CITY-COUNTY CO-ORDINATION

Appointment of new petition and membership committees was announced today by the Citizen's Committee for City-County Coordination.

The petitions committee includes Miss Helen Manley, chairman, and Mrs. Claude M. Gray and the Rev. O. Walter Wagner, vice chairman. They are preparing plans for circulating additional petitions calling for appointment of a board of freeholders to draft a plan for city-county coordination.

Those on the membership committee are Harry L. Stocker, chairman, and George L. Stemmler, Henry C. Lowenhaupt and Mrs. Tobin Carlin, vice chairmen.

HENNINGS GETS AFL-CIO BACKING FOR RE-ELECTION

Senator Is One of 36 Indorsed by Union Organization — All But 4 Democrats.

United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. was indorsed for re-election by the AFL-CIO St. Louis Committee on Political Education, it was announced yesterday. He was among 36 candidates indorsed by the group.

All but four of those indorsed were Democrats, and the majority are incumbents. Candidates for office at the national, state and county levels were included.

Others Indorsed.

In addition to Hennings, those indorsed were:

For United States Representative, first district, Frank M. Karsten; third district, Leonor K. Sullivan, both Democratic incumbents. No indorsement was voted for the second district.

For governor, James T. Blair Jr.; for lieutenant governor, Edward V. Long; for attorney general, John M. Dalton. All are Democrats and Dalton is the incumbent.

For State Senator, first district, Robert Pentland; third district; William E. Hilsman; fifth district, Joseph L. Ames; seventh district, Edward J. Hogan Jr.; thirteenth district, Hartwell G. Crain; fifteenth district, E. Gary Davidson Jr. All are Democratic incumbents except Ames, a Democrat, and Crain and Davidson, Republican incumbents.

For State Representative from St. Louis, all Democratic incumbents except where noted: First district, Harry Raiffie; second district, Paul M. Berra; third district; William Siefert, Republican; fourth district, Francis M. O'Brien, Republican; sixth district, Daniel Curran, seventh district, Frank E. Kostron; eighth district, John W. Martino.

Others Supported.

Ninth district, Robert M. Uxa; tenth, Leroy Tyus; eleventh, James P. Troupe Sr.; twelfth, Thomas A. Walsh; thirteenth, John P. O'Reilly; fourteenth, William A. Geary, Democrat, not incumbent; fifteenth, John Griffin; sixteenth, John M. Lavin; eighteenth, Jennie S. Walsh. No indorsements were voted in the fifth and seventeenth districts.

For State Representative from St. Louis county, all Democratic incumbents: First district, William P. Donovan; second, Raymond B. Hopfinger; third, Edward F. Ford; fourth, Chaim H. Zimbalist. No indorsements were voted for the fifth through the ninth districts.

For St. Louis County Council, second district, James H. McNary, Democratic incumbent. For circuit judge in St. Louis county, Division 2, Michael J. Carroll, Democrat appointed to the bench last April; Division 5, Douglas L. C. Jones, Democratic incumbent; Division 6, Franklin E. Ferris, Republican incumbent.

The committee interviewed about 130 candidates for office before making its indorsements. A commtitee member said additional meetings would be held to permit others to appear for interviews or to examine records in office, adding that additional indorsements may be voted later.

John L. Reilly Dies.

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP) —John L. Reilly, industrial secretary of the National Postal Transport Association and editor of the Postal Transport Journal, died today at a local hospital following a long illness. He was 65 years old.

SCOOTER RACING STRIP STUDIED BY COUNTY TOWN

St. George Village Considers Supervised Program — Judge Gives View.

Supervised motor scooter racing is being considered in St. George, in south St. Louis county, because 16-year-olds speeding up to 40 miles an hour through the village are endangering lives, James Sullivan, city attorney, said last night.

He spoke over radio station KXOK in a panel on juvenile delinquency. When the question was raised whether motor scooters can go that fast, Edward T. Wright, Brentwood police judge, reported one youth in his court pleaded guilty of speeding 55 miles an hour on a scooter.

The plan considered in St. George, Sullivan explained, calls for racing on a course around the village's parent-supervised playground. He noted that one speed enthusiast on a motor scooter was later involved in a drag racing incident on U. S. Highway 40.

"As judges and lawyers," Wright said, "we become so familiar with the factor of speed in auto accidents that it's pretty hard to convince us we should encourage interest in speed."

He conceded that hot rod associations have been credited with "doing a wonderful job" in organizing youths who are mechanically inclined but repeated his reservations about speed for its own sake.

Meanwhile, Magistrate Raymond I. Harris of St. Louis county, who has been identified with strict policies regarding law violations by teenagers, has obtained a police permit to buy a pistol. He bought a .32-caliber revolver and explained that he wanted it for protection at his home.

Sgt. Maracel Bonzon, identification officer with county police, said inquiries from citizens concerning permits to purchase pistols had increased in the last two weeks. Many requests for purchase permits have been turned down, the officer said. He pointed out that it is against the law to have pistols concealed on the person or in automobiles.

Three young men were arrested early yesterday after a high-speed automobile chase in which, police said, they attempted to strike an automobile occupied by two youths and two girls with a length of gas pipe.

Detectives Charles Ruzicka and Gerard Weibrod, seeing the cars going south on Tower Grove avenue from Lafayette avenue at a high rate of speed at 1:30 a.m., followed in a police car and finally stopped the three youths at Sidney street and Tennessee avenue.

In the meantime, the automobile occupied by the four frightened boys and girls stopped at the Magnolia Avenue Police Station, where they fled for protection.

Those arrested said they were John Gross Jr., 21 years old, a laborer; Leon Joseph Koester, 18, machine operator, both living in the 1800 block of Dolman street, and Joseph Phillips, 20, laborer, 1000 block of Dillon court.

They were booked suspected of assault and peace disturbance. Koester, the driver, was charged with speeding 70 miles an hour.

A warrant charging Gross with flourishing a deadly and dangerous weapon was issued by the circuit attorney's office.

In the other automobile were Frank Schembre, 4426 Russell boulevard; Thomas May, 4058A Flad avenue; Joan Mazzola, 2926 Dodier street, and Jean Carenza, 5728 Milentz avenue.

They told police the car occupied by the three youths stopped beside their automobile at Manchester avenue and Kingshighway, where one of the youths waved the pipe at them in a threatening manner after another yelled: "Do you want to fight?"

Attempts were made to strike Schembre's car during the ensuing pursuit as the youths' automobile at times caught up with the one they were chasing, police were told. Gross was identified by the two girls and two boys as the pipe-wielder.

7 St. Louisans to Visit Russia In August on Organized Tour

5-Day Stay in Moscow Planned—3 in Group Hope to Extend Trip.

Seven St. Louisans have signed up for an air tour to Russia in August, including a five-day visit in Moscow.

They will be among the first tourists from the Midwest to be permitted to enter the Soviet Union in an organized group since the start of the "cold war" period.

The basic plan of the trip, which will leave New York Aug. 2, calls for two days in Leningrad, as well as the five days in Moscow. There will be stopovers at Copenhagen, Helsinki, and East and West Berlin.

Cost of the tour, one of eight in the Midwest being organized by a travel agency, is $1750 for each person.

3 Hope to Stay Longer.

At least three of the St. Louisans hope to be able to extend their stay in Russia, beyond the seven days in the basic plan, in order to visit additional cities and see more of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony E. Niedt, 14 Princeton avenue, University City, want to travel to Odessa, Kiev, Stalingrad and other cities in southern Russia. Niedt, president of the Steelcote paint manufacturing company, said he and his wife have visited most other parts of the world and have been anxious to include Russia in their travels.

Mrs. Merna C. Lazier, who writes the "favorite dish" weekly food feature in the Post-Dispatch PICTURES section, said she wanted to stay an additional 10 days in Russia.

"I've always wanted to go to Russia," she remarked. She likes Russian dishes, she said, and hopes to find out more about them.

Other St. Louisans in the group are Mrs. Thomas M. Sayman, 5399 Lindell boulevard; Bruce Hayward, who is news director of television station KTVI and who has a record program on radio station KXOK; Samuel Jacobs, president of Custom Furs, Inc., 1307 Washington avenue, and Sidney Grossman, 6 Glen Creek lane, Ladue, who is president of Grossman Metals Corp.

Mrs. Sayman, a civic and social leader here, has traveled widely in other parts of the world. "I've always sort of wanted to get a glimpse of Russia," she said.

Hayward Is Tour Leader.

Hayward, who has been designated tour leader by promoters of the trip, said he will make tape-recordings of interviews with Russians and take movies for his news programs.

Jacobs was born in the Polish part of Czarist Russia and emigrated to the United States in 1927, when he was 36 years old. He said he hopes to locate a sister, who was living in Moscow when he last heard from her in 1938.

"I still speak a bit of Russian," Jacobs said, "and in the old days I used to travel in Russia on business."

Once, in 1917 during the revolutionary period, he went on what was to have been a short business trip. "I got stuck there for nine months," he recalled.

The St. Louisans will travel with eight persons from Wichita, Kan., on Sabena Belgian World Airlines, one of four concerns which have signed agreements with Aeroflot, the Russian airline, and obtained the approval of the Russian Government.

PRESERVE RIGHTS IN FIGHT ON REDS, HENNINGS URGES

Senator Receives Jewish War Veterans Award for Service to Americanism.

Care must be taken not to abrogate the constitutional rights of any American citizen in the fight against Communism, United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. told the Missouri Jewish War Veterans last night in receiving the organization's annual award for conspicuous service to Americanism.

Speaking at a dinner at Hotel Chase, Senator Hennings said:

"One of the great strains that is being placed upon our country's citizens and their government today is our conflict with an alien revolution that is known as Communism.

"I have too much faith in the revolution of Washington and Jefferson to believe our own ever can be beaten."

Pointing out that he was a member of the Senate's subcommittee on internal security, Hennings asserted: "It is our firm and absolute determination to see to it that Communist agents play no part in American government.

"At the same time we intend that no constitutional right of an American citizen shall be abrogated."

He also said that the Senate's subcommittee on constitutional rights, of which he is chairman, is "particularly sensitive" to preserving rights of minority groups.

"Our whole people is made up of many minorities," Hennings stated. "If injustice is wrought against one minority today, another injustice will be wrought against another minority tomorrow."

He paid tribute to Jewish contributions to American life, saying that "the continued progress and prosperity of the new republic of Israel, hemmed in as it is by Arab enemies, should be a matter of concern to the American people as a whole."

Appointment of Richard C. Muckerman, president of B-I Bottling Co., as head of the Greater St. Louis Citizens for Hennings Committee was announced yesterday. Hennings is seeking renomination as the Democratic candidate in his campaign for a second term as Senator.

Nationalist Bomber Downed.

HONG KONG, June 23 (AP) —The Peiping radio said Communist Chinese anti-aircraft fire brought down a Nationalist bomber early today in the Shangjao region of Kiangsi province.

BETHANY, MO., DESIGNATED AS DISASTER AREA

White House Decree Makes Drouth-Stricken Town Eligible for Federal Aid.

By SAM J. SHELTON JR.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23 — The drouth-stricken town of Bethany, in northwest Missouri, was declared a disaster area today, thus becoming eligible for federal aid.

The White House announcement said the potential health and fire hazard created by lack of water was sufficiently severe to warrant disaster assistance by the Government.

The action was taken by President Eisenhower at Walter Reed Army Hospital where he is recuperating. In a telegram in reply to a message from Donnelly he said, "I am deeply concerned by the distress caused to the residents of Bethany and I hope the situation can be rapidly alleviated."

The action provides for no immediate allocation of federal funds, but directs the Civil Defense administration to get in touch with Missouri officials to plan an aid program.

The office of Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), Missouri, said it had been informed an emergency supply of water probably would be trucked in by the Army.

Missouri Gov. Phil M. Donnelly appealed last Thursday to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker for aid. The Governor said Bethany, which has a population of 2714 and is seat of Harrison county, probably would exhaust its dwindling water supply within a week.

Donnelly asked that the Fifth Army be authorized to direct an engineer pipeline company at Fort Leonard Wood to construct a surface pipeline from the Bethany reservoir to the Grand river, 20 miles away.

Bethany has practically emptied its treasury in an effort to develop emergency sources of water, the Governor said.

The acute water shortage has resulted from lack of rainfall and rains which fell this week did little to help Bethany since the water just soaked into the parched ground, it was reported.

In a telegram to President Eisenhower last Thursday, Senator Hennings called for emergency drouth assistance for the northwest part of the state.

Hennings said an "inadequate and too hasty" earlier inspection of the area had led to refusal of federal aid and called for a new inspection.

Mayor Expects Emergency Pipeline to Be Laid Next Week.

BETHANY, Mo., June 23 (AP) — Mayor Raymond K. Wheeler said today he was pleased that Bethany has been made eligible for federal aid and that he expects an emergency pipeline to be laid next week to bring water to the drouth-stricken town.

Commenting on President Eisenhower's designation of this northwestern Missouri town as a major disaster area, the Mayor added, "I'm sorry the whole area hasn't been so proclaimed because I know the farmers in the 11 northwestern counties of the state also need help."

"I feel that the Army Engineers probably will install a pipeline for us," Wheeler said. "We would be responsible for transportation costs and installation of the pipeline."

The proposed line of six-inch steel pipe would run to the Grand river about 22 miles south of Bethany.

"I would say it will take until Monday or Tuesday to get the materials," Wheeler said. "They might possibly string the pipe by Wednesday or Thursday. Meanwhile we have arrangements to haul water from various wells up to 18 miles away."

The mayor said water consumption was cut to 151,000 gallons in the last 24 hours—the lowest since the shortage became acute.

"Most public toilets are shut off," Wheeler said. "So are automatic hot water heaters, automatic dishwashers and garbage disposers. We are holding down on our use of water for bathing, and we are making strict fire inspections."

In Jefferson City, Gov. Donnelly expressed satisfaction that something will be done to help Bethany.

He said he would be absent from the state when federal officials arrive in Missouri to work out a relief program, but that Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr., would be available to represent Missouri.

Donnelly plans to leave by National Guard plane tomorrow to attend the national governors' conference in Atlantic City.

SOUTH AMERICAN TOUR BY TRAVELING SEMINAR

Miss A. Gwendolyn Drew, professor of physical education at Washington University, and Miss Helen Manley, director of health, physical education and safety in the University City public schools, will lead a two-month traveling seminar through South America, departing Tuesday.

The seminar leaders, who headed similar projects to Europe and Finland and around the world in 1952 and 1954, will sail with a group of 14 persons from New York Thursday. They will return at the end of August.

The group will visit health centers and schools in 13 Latin American countries. Members of the traveling seminar include a physician, school nurse, librarian and elementary, high school and college teachers from Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, Illinois, Wisconsin and the St. Louis area.

BOY, 2, RESCUED FROM LEDGE IN ELEVATOR SHAFT

BALA, Pa., June 23 (UP)—Two-year-old Eugene Deangelis Jr. teetered on an eight-inch-wide ledge of an elevator shaft five floors above the ground for six minutes yesterday until rescuers reached him.

Eugene was about to enter the automatic elevator on the fifth floor of the Bala apartments where he lives when someone on the first floor pushed the button and the car started down.

As the elevator car moved down past him, the outer door of the shaft closed and locked, leaving Eugene on the ledge overlooking a 50-foot drop down the shaft.

His father heard his sobs and raced to the elevator shaft. He looked through the glass in the door and saw his son.

"Just stand still and keep quiet and I'll help you," Deangelis shouted.

The father raced down the steps to the first floor in time to stop two delivery men from taking the elevator to the top of the building.

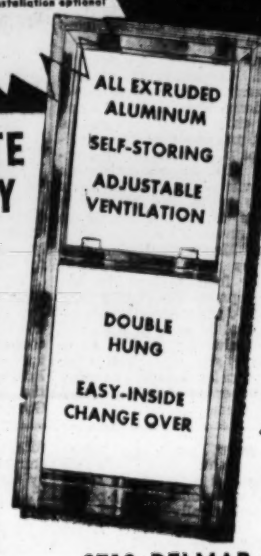

Deangelis, the delivery men and the building superintendent then took the elevator up to the fourth floor and rescued the boy through a trap door in the top of the car.

MISUNDERSTOOD ON 'PHONY' TERM, WILSON EXPLAINS

fied, however. Democrats have sponsored a pending proposal to increase Air Force appropriations by $1,160,000,000, and in a counter-move Republicans have proposed a boost of only $500,000,000. Both of these proposals grew out of concern over official admissions that Russia was forging ahead of the United States in long-range, heavy bomber production.

(The New York Herald Tribune News Service said it was learned today that President Eisenhower has specifically informed Senate Republican leaders that the Defense Department will "go along with" the $500,000,000 Air Force budget increase to which the Republican leadership is committed. It said the President has transmitted that word to the Senate Republican leadership by Wilton B. Persons, his chief assistant on congressional affairs.)

Wilson has said he is opposed to either of the proposed increases as being unnecessary. He explained today the Defense Department planned to use $2,700,000,000 carried over from other years in addition to the pending appropriation bill.

At Odds With LeMay's Views.

The focus of the dispute is on speedier production of the B-52 Boeing intercontinental bomber. The defense chief insisted again today that its production "is being accelerated to the point that present facilities can be used economically and to a level approved by the joint chiefs of staff."

Wilson has maintained this position in spite of testimony by Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of the Strategic Air Command. Several weeks ago Gen. LeMay told a Senate subcommittee that, even with B-52 production spurred to a future peak of 20 a month planned by Wilson, Russia would stay ahead with its production of the comparable Soviet Bison.

Wilson said that he has sometimes been criticized for having too much carryover funds from other years. He repeated, however, that if extra money is voted he will regard it as extra credit in the bank and consider what to do with it when the situation confronts him.

Talk With Reporters.

Wilson discussed the controversy with reporters after the morning session of defense officials and leaders of the armed forces.

"Between us," he said, "we stirred up quite a controversy. And when I say between us, I mean it."

Wilson went on to explain he had read carefully the transcript of his press conference. He told a press service reporter his question had really started it off.

"The reason I called it a phony," he continued, "was the conception that I didn't have to think about the cost and the money."

He referred to a discussion of Prime Minister Eden's plan to reduce British defense spending by about two billion dollars and what effect this might have on United States and Allied defense plans.

Wilson did not answer directly, merely saying he had great sympathy for Eden because "I don't believe his problems are too different from mine."

The official transcript referred to by Wilson then shows this exchange:

Reporter — "Yours are to stave off more money, aren't they?"

Wilson — "I think that's a phony."

Reporter—"Do you?"

Wilson—"Yes, I do."

Reporter—"What does that mean, sir?"

Wilson — "Well, maybe I shouldn't have said it, but the people of our country quite properly want to make sure that we have a strong defense and we are taking care of the security of the nation, but when it comes to paying the taxes to do it, some people take a little different slant on that, and I would just like to see the people take the record, that vote for the expenditures, that vote for the taxes to produce the money to pay for it—same people—stand up and be counted."

His Explanation.

Today Wilson commented:

"I get a blast that I insulted our fellow citizens and I know and you know I wouldn't do that."

He went on to express sympathy for Eden and members of Congress who have to vote for money and also the taxes for national defense.

"I like to leave it with you to straighten it out," he added.

"Does the word phony apply to any of the maneuvers in the Senate," a reporter asked.

"No, no, I didn't intend it that way," said Wilson.

"Why didn't you say so when you talked with us yesterday?" was another question.

"Didn't realize it was such a blow," Wilson answered. "Thought it would die out."

Wilson is an amiable, mild-mannered man who has been startled before by the sharp effect that his off-the-cuff remarks have in cold print. Yesterday in chatting with reporters he was rueful about the "phony" remark, but the fury in the Senate had not reached him yet.

Recalls Bird-Dog Furore.

He recalled with a wry smile another time he got in trouble with his remark that bird dogs were better than kennel fed dogs. The bird dog "was one who'll get out and hunt for food rather than sit on his fanny and yell."

In the context of the unemployment problem during the 1954 congressional campaign his bird dog-kennel dog remark roused opponents of the Administration.

Continuing today, Wilson said the Senators had reacted on "a bunch of misinformation."

"You aren't saying you were misquoted," he was asked.

"Yes, partly," replied Wilson. Later, however, he was asked, "Would you say you were not misquoted but misinterpreted?"

"That's right," he replied. "I'm not blaming you men too much. I blame myself. If you blame somebody else, you can't do a damn thing about it. When you blame yourself, you can do better next time."

In seeking to make his peace with the Senate, Wilson said the "majority of Congress has supported this bill."

"Don't want to quarrel with Senators," he added. "They have a tough job."

Wilson said he certainly had no intention to impugn Congress's constitutional authority to "raise or lower" the defense program.

Cloud Over Conference.

The controversy has overshadowed the proceedings at this fourth annual conference of defense chiefs and leaders, of which Wilson said today: "It's been a very good conference. It's been a very worthwhile thing."

The sessions have been held behind a door labeled "top secret" and only censored summaries of the talks have been released to the press. Wilson said that nothing that had occurred would change the present defense program.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reported that in the past year "a number of planning problems have been hammered out," and decisions reached. Then he referred to the underlying cause of the recent outbreak of interservice rivalries as follows:

"But it is quite evident, too, that we still have a long way to go to reach a common understanding on a certain few problems. These few are the ones which currently consume a great deal of time."

But these interservice disputes over roles and missions run deep and they were dealt with in only passing fashion before this comparatively large gathering of more than 160 uniformed and civilian leaders.

Two Services Sound Warnings.

By the United Press.

Americans got two grim warnings today:

From the Air Force—Russia may have "significant" numbers of intercontinental missiles in four years.

From the Navy—Russia soon will have missile-launching submarines that could devastate "even our inland cities."

Status of United States defenses against these threats: lagging.

In the final round of briefings for the civilian and defense leaders here, there were these highlights:

1. Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force vice chief of staff, said United States intelligence clearly indicates "the enemy could possess a significant ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile) capability within the next four to five years." He said "we have not made adequate progress" toward ICBM defenses.

2. With the possibility of new army manpower cuts at the forefront, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, said "material increases" in money are needed "if" the present force is to be maintained. Secretary Wilson indicated yesterday he is studying possible new manpower cuts for next year.

3. Air Secretary Donald A. Quarles said his service needs "substantially higher" budgets in coming years.

4. Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations, described enemy submarines as the Navy's "biggest problem." He said the Russians are "hard at work" to get control of European and Asian areas beyond their satellite ring.

BROMWICH NEW G.O.P. NATIONAL COMMITTEEMAN

vinced Missouri Republicans that he intended to run the state organization with a firm hand, insisting that a slate of 10 delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention that he favored be named by the convention.

In addition to the seven St. Louisans on his slate of delegates-at-large, there were two persons from Kansas City and only one from outstate Missouri. When rural party members tried to get hm to drop some of the St. Louisans in favor of outstate Republicans, he flatly refused.

He said he had the support of the White House for these delegates, and that the President's advisers told him to "remain firm and run the show."

St. Louisans on his slate are Edgar M. Queeny, board chairman of Monsanto Chemical Co.; Roscoe C. Hobbs, former state Republican finance chairman; Carl Stifel, real estate dealer and the 1953 G.O.P. candidate for mayor of St. Louis; John O. Price, assistant to the president of Sunnen Products Co.; Lawrence K. Roos, banker and chairman of the St. Louis county Republican finance committee; Ira Wight, broker and former state G.O.P. treasurer, and Bromwich.

Bromwich told reporters he did not want to be one of the delegates-at-large, but that his backers insisted that he be and that he serve as chairman of the Missouri delegation to the Republican presidential nominating convention.

Others on his slate are former Congressman Jeffrey P. Hillelson and Wentworth Griffin, an attorney, both of Kansas City, and Charles Basche of Cassville, Barry county collector.

Some opposition to this bloc of candidates was voiced at the state convention on the ground that it contained too many St. Louisans. An attempt was made to amend the convention rules, so that the election of delegates at large would precede and not follow the election of the national committee members.

The motion to amend the rules, made by John J. Robison of Maysville, was defeated 1002 to 524.

Alternates-at-large are Edwin Putzell, Mrs. Aloys P. Kaufmann and Arthur Atkinson of St. Louis; Mrs. Emily Gallagher of St. Louis county; Mrs. Rosemary Ginn of Columbia; Mrs. Allen Bowsher and Mrs. Kissie Brooks of Kansas City; Mrs. Gladys Stivers of Cape Girardeau; Joe M. Roberts of Gallatin, and Don Lee of Lawrence county.

State Delegation Complete.

The election of the delegates-at-large completed the selection of Missouri's delegation to the Republican national convention. There will be 32 delegates, each with a full vote, including 22 delegates previously named at party meetings in each of the state's 11 congressional districts. St. Louis and St. Louis county will have 13 delegates and 13 votes in the San Francisco convention.

Both Welsh and Mrs. Tanner, the retiring national committee members, had been involved in the bitter intra-party feuding in Missouri.

They had joined together in fighting the faction headed by State Republican Chairman Perry Compton of Montgomery City and Barak T. Mattingly of St. Louis. Mattingly was a member of the so-called "Commodore Hotel group," headed by former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, which persuaded Mr. Eisenhower to seek the presidency in 1952.

Bromwich was acceptable as the new national committeeman because he was not closely identified with either the Mattingly or anti-Mattingly factions. He was originally backed by a group of top level St. Louis party leaders and fund-raisers, headed by Ethan A. H. Shepley, chancellor of Washington University, Wight and Stifel.

Long an active Republican, Bromwich had served as Missouri campaign manager for Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor, in his 1948 bid for the G.O.P. presidential nomination.

President Eisenhower, in a telegram to the convention, wished the party in Missouri every success. The message, received by Congressman Thomas B. Curtis, Webster Groves, and read by him to the meeting, stated:

"On the occasion of your state convention, I am delighted to extend to you my warm greetings. All of you have my best wishes for a highly productive meeting, one which will fortify your endeavors to support the Republican program for peace, prosperity and good government in the months and years ahead. In these endeavors I wish you every success."

Unity Theme in Speeches.

Opposing candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination urged party unity to assure a G.O.P. victory in Missouri in the November general election in speeches at the opening of the convention.

"The citizens of Missouri look to us Republicans with hopeful eyes," Lon Hocker, St. Louis attorney and leading candidate for the nomination, said. "They have lost hope of accomplishing needed progress under Democrat leadership. We can afford them that leadership, but it is impossible of attainment without unity in our own ranks.

"The job is far too great to be done with the efforts of one candidate, one group, or one faction of the party. If we are to win in November (which, as God loves Missouri, we shall), we must have a majority of the votes, with enough to spare to make sure we cannot be counted out."

Joseph M. Whealen, Hocker's principal opponent for the nomination, told the convention that the Republican party in the state can meet the challenge of the Democratic administration "through new leadership which this convention will give us."

Among other candidates who addressed the convention was Albert E. Schoenbeck, St. Louis lawyer, who is seeking the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

Herbert Douglas, Neosho attorney and Schoenbeck's principal opponent for the nomination, told the delegates that President Eisenhower "is a better President sick than anything the Democrats have."

President's Aid Speaks.

J. William Barba, assistant special counsel to President Eisenhower, said in a keynote address to the convention that the year 1956 "will determine the future of America and possibly the fate of the world."

"It is the year of crucial decision for the American people," he said. If they know the policies and program of the Republican Administration and realize that the peace, prosperity and progress they currently are enjoying is not a coincidence but the result of Republican leadership, the future of our country is secure and the Republican party will be the majority party of America."

He told delegates that the party this year has a "great opportunity" to increase the number of Missouri Republican Representatives in Congress from two to five and he assured the delegates that "the hopes of the national leadership are with you and ready to help at any time."

Praising the program of President Eisenhower's Administration, Barba asserted that the average weekly earnings of factory workers increased from $56.41 at the end of the previous Democratic Administration to $74.35 under the Republican Administration of the past three years. Total labor income increased 40 per cent under the Republicans, he said.

"Ask the man on the street," he said. "He'll tell you he never had it so good."

Yankee on Way in Station Wagon To Pick Up His Covered Wagon

Connecticut Man With Yen for Nebraska Plains Had to Leave Prairie Schooner When Mule Went Lame.

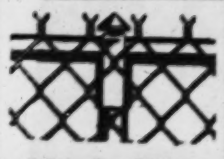

A Connecticut Yankee with an abiding desire to become a Nebraska farmer was on his way to Illinois in an up-to-date station wagon to pick up a prairie schooner he had to leave behind last August when a mule went lame.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest T. Elfgren and their six children made a new start yesterday from East Killingly, Conn., where he raised chinchillas and manufactured airplane parts. When last year's journey bogged down near Godfrey, Ill., they had a relative drive out and take them back.

The wagon was left at Pere Marquette Park, near Grafton, the mules with a mule trader, and the harness with Raymond Joehl, a Godfrey farmer. Elfgren said hold everything, they'd be back.

Everything but the mules is waiting for them. The trader has sold them for Elfgren, but hopes to have three others ready in time—two for the wagon and one in reserve.

Last year the indefinite destination was somewhere in Missouri. Now it is the plains of Nebraska, which Elfgren hopes to reach at a clip of about 20 miles a day when he gets going again from Godfrey.

POLICEMAN, SHOT BY HOLDUP MAN, IS OPERATED ON

Off-Duty Officer in Serious Condition Following Fight With Two in Tavern.

Cpl. Joseph Moose, who was shot Friday night in a revolver fight with robbers in Michaleb's Tavern, 3122 South Kingshighway, was reported in serious condition last night at City Hospital, where he underwent surgery.

An intensive search is being conducted for the robbers, one of whom is reported to have been wounded. A second man fled with about $100 from a cash register.

Moose, who lives at 4806 Arsenal street, entered the tavern shortly before 11 o'clock, on an evening off duty, with his wife, Rita. They sat at the bar chatting with Robert Stealey, the bartender, and several friends. There were about six customers in the place.

A few minutes later the robbers entered. One produced a revolver and announced "a stickup."

The second man went behind the bar and began emptying the cash register.

Moose, drawing his service revolver, turned and fired at the armed robber, who fell to the floor. The second man dashed toward the rear and Moose fired at him.

The first robber, firing from the floor, shot Moose in the abdomen. The robber then stood up and was struck on the head by Moose, who swung at the man with his revolver.

Clutching his side, the robber staggered out a side door into Juniata street and got into an automobile in which a third person waited. The machine was driven rapidly east.

The second robber, unable to find a rear exit, drew a revolver and started toward the side door. Stealey grappled with him, and was cut on the hand in grasping the revolver. The robber fled on foot.

Cpl. Moose, 57 years old, was taken to City Hospital. Assigned to the Inspector's office at police headquarters, Moose had a day off Friday.

The robber who shot the officer was described as 25 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighing about 175 pounds. He has blond hair and a large mole on his temple. The second man, about 28 years old, is more than 6 feet tall, and has dark hair and a small mustache.

TWINING ARRIVES IN MOSCOW, WILL LOOK AND LISTEN

taches lined up to the right. Bohlen made the introductions and translated both into Russian and English.

There was no police cordon. Reporters and photographers surrounded the groups. There were no objections to any photography, either official or amateur.

A schedule has been set up for Twining that will keep him in the Soviet Union until July 4. It is believed that he will ask that it be curtailed to permit him to leave July 1.

The air show will be held at Tushin airfield. The field is of grass and beside the Moscow river.

It is anticipated that some new Soviet experimental fighters will be shown and possibly that something startling will be unveiled. The show will open with a group of planes carrying flags of the 16 Soviet republics and of the Soviet Union. Another plane will carry a portrait of V. I. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state. A group of women pilots will demonstrate their skill flying.

Clubs will perform in sports planes and gliders and there will be formation and acrobatic flying of jet fighters. At the end of the show, there will be a mass parachute landing from 36 IL-12 aircraft followed by 40 helicopters which will land a detachment on the airfield equipped with cannon and their tractor haulers.

Soviet propaganda pictures the visit of the American Air Chief merely as an extension of the visits of different cultural groups started about a year ago.

Let us hope, the Moscow radio said, that the meeting in Moscow of the American and Soviet military men will contribute to a further improvement of American-Soviet relations and to a general betterment of the world climate.

Regardless of how it is described it is a curious event. It is reminiscent of the days before World War I when German, French and British senior military commanders and their staffs were invited to view each other's annual military maneuvers. This was not much help in keeping peace, but all the senior military officers thought they gained some benefit from seeing the performance of a prospective enemy.

By the Associated Press.

The Americans arrived in hot sunshine with temperatures in the nineties. "A fine day, fine weather," Twining said to Konev.

A Russian interpreted his remarks and Konev replied in Russian. "Washington weather."

Brief Reception.

Twining and his group attended a brief informal reception at the American Ambassador's residence, then dined by themselves at the Sovietskaja hotel. A planned meeting with Soviet Defense Minister Marshal Georgi Zhukov was called off.

Earlier Konev, while awaiting Twining's plane, was asked whether such visits could help lessen international tension.

"Absolutely," the marshal replied.

The 10-man French delegation was met by Soviet Col. Gen. I. V. Sokolov, deputy chief of the foreign liaison section of the Soviet Ministry of Defense. Sokolov said:

"We welcome you to our capital and we are very glad to see you."

"I htank you on behalf of the French delegation," the French General replied. "We are happy to be here."

Caruso Lullabies.

DETROIT (UP) — Enrico Caruso, 26, not related to the late opera singer, confines his singing to lullabies and he gets plenty of practice. His wife has presented him with a second set of twins.

H. HADLEY GRIMM NAMED TO WASHINGTON U. POST

H. Hadley Grimm, former director of agency operations for the Greater St. Louis Community Chest, has been appointed director of industrial liaison at Washington University, Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley announced yesterday. The appointment is effective Aug. 1.

Grimm, who will serve as a member of the university's development program staff, succeeds H. Russell Bintzer. Bintzer has been named director of the university's Second Century Fund.

Grimm, 47 years old, lives at 8130 Gannon avenue, University City. He is married and has two sons and a daughter.

60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wehmeyer, 5527 Pershing avenue, will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary today with a party at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Alfred W. Laumann, 1625 June drive, Spanish Lake. Their anniversary was June 10.

Wehmeyer is an elevator operator at the Municipal Courts building. Formerly he was a guard at City Jail. He is 86 years old and his wife 84. They have four other children, seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

The sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Weller, 4131 Lee avenue, was celebrated last week by relatives and friends at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nolte, 7105 Canton avenue, University City. The Wellers were married here June 17, 1896.

Weller, 89 years old, was vice president of Brown Machinery Co. before retiring about 20 years ago. His wife is 81. They have four other daughters, a son, nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

TWO NEW STAFF MEMBERS OF SOCIAL PLANNING COUNCIL

Two new members have been appointed to the staff of the Social Planning Council, a United Fund agency, Rudolph T. Danstedt, executive director, announced yesterday. They are Richard E. Edgar and George Pratt.

Edgar, former instructor in the department of sociology at the University of Illinois, will serve as executive secretary of special assignments and will be responsible for area council work and the council's Conference Group on Aging.

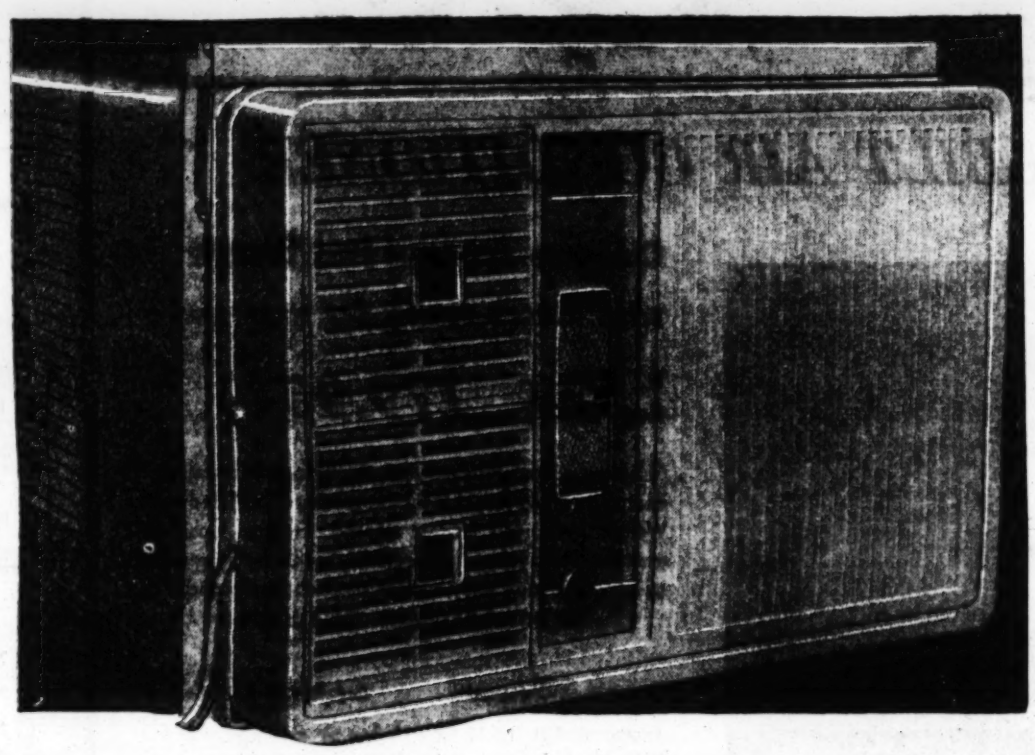

Pratt, formerly a social worker on the staff of a residential treatment center in Wisconsin, was named executive secretary of the social service exchange and information service. He previously was employed by the Wisconsin State Department of Public Welfare.

CONGREGATIONALISTS APPROVE MERGER

Two Resolutions Are Voted After Night-Long Session.

OMAHA, Nebr., June 23 (UP) —The General Council of the Congregational Christian churches of America voted this afternoon to merge with the Evangelical and Refromed Church to form a new denomination—the United Church of Christ.

The delegates—weary after a slam-bang battle over the merger — gave overwhelming approval to the two necessary enabling resolutions. The Evangelical and Reformed Church still has not approved the merger, but a vote will be taken this year at the general synod meeting.

The minority fighting the merger was bitter. Benjamin Powers, Kansas City (Mo.) attorney, commented, "they (the majority) are gloating over a supposed victory, but this is a day of tragedy."

One church publicly announced it would not go along with the merger, and several others indicated similar intentions. Karl W. Ostberg, Weston, Conn., said he does not hink those churches remaining in the new denomination are "un-Christian," but explained that his church would not merge. "We just can't do it," he said.

The delegates first voted 1314 to 101 in favor of a resolution approving the report of the executive committee on plans for the proposed union, which in effect meant approval of everything the committee had done toward bringing about the merger.

Then, by vote of 1310 to 179, with 11 abstaining, they adopted a resolution authorizing the call of the first general synod of the United Church of Christ at Cleveland June 25-27, 1957, and electing those nominated as delegates to that meeting.

The voting followed a night-long reading of the minutes of executive council meetings during the last two years.

Sixteen ministers took turns droning through the voluminous reports during the nine and one-half hour reading session.

The reading of the minutes was ordered when opponents of the merger claimed that a summary of the executive council meetings did not reveal all the facts.

ELECTRICAL UNION PICKETS SEARS-ROEBUCK BUILDINGS

Sears-Roebuck & Co.'s St. Louis-area buildings were picketed yesterday by Local 1, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, in protest against dismissal of 70 electrical service repairmen. Some of their jobs have been taken by members of the Teamsters organization. Both unions are AFL-CIO.

The repairmen were dismissed Friday with the explanation that the work was being let to a private concern, under a new company policy. The dismissals took place as the company and the Electrical Workers were negotiating a new wage contract. The union then filed unfair labor charges against Sears Roebuck with the National Labor Relations Board.

A spokesman for the company said service men now are hired by the Dependable Appliance Service, Inc., a recently-organized concern. The company added it had decided against direct hiring of servicemen as "uneconomic."

Army Renews Controversy With Air Force on Strategy

of enemy power have been neutralized. . . .

"To execute this (Air Force) air-atomic doctrine to the extent that a 'decision' can be achieved, requires total destruction of an enemy nation.

"Rather than concur with the 'decisiveness' of thermonuclear destruction as a desirable course of action, the Army takes the position that this type of decision is morally, politically, and practically unjustifiable when the application of graduated, selective politico-military force can achieve the desired national security objective without unduly risking enemy nuclear reaction. . . ."

Gen. Taylor's Position.

It is known that before Gen. Maxwell Taylor took over his present job as Army Chief of Staff, he made a careful study of the likely role of the United States Army in the next 10 years. On the basis of this, he came to the conclusion, which is widely shared by the civilian heads of this government, that the chances of a big war, fought out with long-range bombers and nuclear weapons, was not nearly so great as the prospect of smaller wars fought with conventional weapons.

Since then, however, the emphasis has been placed more and more on the nuclear weapons and long-range aircraft, while the Army and conventional weapons have been cut. This has jeopardized the careers of many officers, since a smaller army naturally needs fewer general officers, but aside from this narrow personal consideration, there is a basic fight within the Pentagon over the dangers of reducing the conventional arms to the point where any war inevitably becomes an atomic or thermonuclear war.

This has happened to a certain extent already, for it is generally agreed here that the United States is not in a position today to defend the Quemoy and Matsu islands and Formosa by conventional weapons but would have to resort to nuclear attack to wipe out any large concentrations of attacking Chinese on the China mainland.

Rivalry Over Missiles.

The Army staff paper not only criticizes the Air Force's reliance on atomic retaliation but suggests that the Air Force is trying to get "control" of the guided missile program in order to maintain its power when these missiles replace manned combat aircraft now in use.

This is another point of conflict, for the Army sees guided missiles, not as a replacement for manned aircraft but as an extension of the Army's artillery arm.

"Thus," says the Army staff paper, "the internal stresses within the military establishment, which tend to divert rather than integrate the armed services, have their root in unservice doctrines considered essential to the prosecution of individual service roles and missions.

"It is where these functions overlap, bringing divergent doctrine onto the same battlefield, that interservice divergencies become most evident. It is doubtful if true integration of the military establishment can be accomplished unless these fundamental differences can be reconciled or otherwise eliminated. . . ."

The staff paper analyzes several ways in which improvement can be achieved, but comes out with the conclusion that the joint chiefs of staff, as presently constituted, should be abandoned and replaced by a single chief of staff.

Advantages of Single Chief.

The staff paper sees these advantages in such a reorganization:

1. It would "marry" the joint planning, direction, and operation of the miltary services so that doctrinal divergencies would of necessity be submerged or dissolved.
2. It would achieve the Army's traditional unification objective of sufficient military control of strategic planning and direction so as to insure effective operation of the armed forces during warfare.
3. It would eliminate the joint chiefs of staff concept "which has never been wholly satisfactory."
4. It would facilitate efficient joint operation under presently assigned roles and missions.
5. Finally, it would provide for thoroughly integrated operations of the military establishment, although the services themselves will remain separate forces. To this extent, this course of action accomplishes this army unification objective.

Difficulties Conceded.

The Army conceded, however, that this course of action would not be politically popular, particularly within the civilian echelons of the military establishment and would be difficult to execute organizationally.

At his May 23 news conference the President said that he had no objection to "a good strong argument among the services," and that he would be disturbed if there were none. Let the services fight it out by exhausting "every atom of logic and fact," he said, without alarming the people.

But once a decision of national policy had been taken, the President warned, he would insist that everyone support it loyally.

Any officer who balked at supporting such a decision was not fit to command troops, Mr. Eisenhower said.

The Army view was that since the problems its staff paper dealt with had not been settled, but were still under active debate in the Pentagon, there was nothing wrong with making its views known to the public.

MORE YOUTHS, CHILDREN USE LIBRARY IN KIRKWOOD

The young adult department and the children's room of Kirkwood Public Library have shown a marked increase in the number of books used in the past year, it was announced yesterday following the annual meeting of the library board.

The young adult department, under the direction of Mrs. Dorothy Edwards, started with 818 books last August and now has 1739 books and subscribers to 23 magazines.

The children's room, under the guidance of Mrs. Gladys Young, recorded a circulation for the last year of 81,605 books, an increase of 6579 over the previous year.

PRESIDENT'S UNIT GETS PHONE JOBS FOR NEGRO GIRLS

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23 —A presidential committee has persuaded Washington's telephone company to hire Negro operators for the first time.

This quiet accomplishment—it has never been publicly announced—is the work of the President's Committee on Government Contracts. The group, set up by President Eisenhower in August, 1953, seeks to end racial discrimination in companies which have contracts with the government.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., which owns all the telephone systems of Washington and its suburbs, has never had Negro employes except in lower-paying jobs, largely custodial. Two years ago, after some conferences with the President's committee, the company announced that it accepted "in principle" the idea of hiring operators without regard to race. But no Negro operators were actually employed.

Last month, after further conferences, Negro organizations were asked to bring in some applicants for operators' jobs. Several were hired. The company has told the committee that from now on it will hire operators on their qualifications only, without regard to race.

EISENHOWER HAS A BUSY DAY, MAY GO HOME IN WEEK

medical bulletin. It was issued after the political conference.

Text of Bulletin.

The bulletin was signed by Maj. Gen. Heaton, Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, and Dr. Isidor Ravdin, an Army reserve major general. It said:

"It is now two weeks since the President's operation. He has made steady, satisfactory progress.

"The President inquired of his physicians as to when he would be discharged from the hospital. His physicians informed him that if his recovery continues as it has to date, he would be able to leave the hospital in about a week.

"Pertinent blood chemistry determinations made this morning are within normal limits. His temperature at noon today was 98.2, his pulse 72, his blood pressure 118 over 70, and his resepiration 18—all of which are normal.

"The retention wire sutures were cut this morning and will be removed within 24 hours."

The President today made his first telephone call since entering the hospital. He discussed diplomatic matters for 10 minutes with Secretary Dulles.

Nehru Visit Not Discussed.

Hagerty said the talk concerned "something" brought up during a staff conference. He said it was not about the July 7-10 visit of Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru or the postponed meeting of the Presidents of the American Republic at Panama.

Hagerty disclosed also that Mr. Eisenhower and his staff discussed the bipartisan furor stirred up in the Senate when Secretary Wilson allegedly accused that body of making "phony" attempts to increase the Air Force budget. Hagerty said the controversy "was discussed and that's all I can say."

Wilson claimed today that he was partly misquoted or misunderstood. It was not made clear whether Hagerty had been in touch with him.

During his working period, Mr. Eisenhower also declared Bethany, Mo., a major disaster area because of an acute water shortage. This makes the town eligible for federal aid.

URGES VETERANS TO FIGHT EFFORTS TO END BENEFITS

Veterans must defeat current efforts being made "to deprive them of the benefits they have earned," William M. P. Smith, Edwardsville attorney and a member of the Illinois Veterans Commission, told the thirty-fourth annual state convention of the Disabled American Veterans yesterday at the Broadview Hotel in East St. Louis.

Smith criticized a recent report by Gen. Omar Bradley which called for a reduction in benefits to veterans. The objectives of the report, if realized, "would wipe out every advantage the veteran has gained," Smith said.

"So long as the country's solvency is not in danger by carrying on all the programs we carry on for industry, we have not reached a time for retrenchment and therefore have not reached a time for eliminating veterans' benefits in order to maintain other benefits various groups are interested in," he asserted.

ILLINOIS GIRL ELECTROCUTED

STEWARDSON, Ill., June 23 (AP)—A two-year-old girl rode her tricycle into a puddle charged by a fallen live wire and was electrocuted today. The wire had been felled by heavy rains.

The victim was Barbara Ann Bauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bauer.

GUEST VIOLIN SOLOIST

Prof. Robert Bergt, choir director of Glendale Lutheran Church, 1365 North Sappington road, will be guest violin soloist of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra Wednesday in a special concert at the convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod in St. Paul, Minn.

G.O.P. Keynoter Langlie Led Eisenhower's '52 Delegate Fight

Three-Term Governor Served on Several of President's Study Groups.

GOVERNOR ARTHUR B. LANGLIE

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 23 (AP)—Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, chosen as the keynoter for the Republican national convention which opens in San Francisco Aug. 20, played a leading part in the party's 1952 convention.

The Washington Governor victoriously spearheaded the Eisenhower drive for a "fair play" amendment over seating of contested delegates at the Chicago convention four years ago.

An ardent supporter of President Eisenhower, Langlie has served on several of the President's study groups. Three years ago he represented the Administration at an international labor conference in Switzerland.

The Minnesota-born son of Norwegian immigrants, Langlie usually speaks off the cuff. He gestures effectively but not extensively.

As chairman of the National Governor's Conference, Langlie will appear on the NBC television show, "Meet the Press," tomorrow.

Opposing Magnuson.

Langlie, a 55-year-old attorney and the state's only three-term Governor, has announced his candidacy for the Senate seat held by Warren G. Magnuson, a Democrat.

Throughout his political career, Langlie has advocated keeping government close to the people at the state and local level. Ever since President Eisenhower's election, Langlie has been one of the strongest supporters of the President's partnership program for power development.

Langlie was in West Orange, N.J., attending a meeting of one of the President's committees when word came he had been selected to keynote the 1956 convention.

He will preside over the annual meeting of the governors of the 48 states at Atlantic City, N.J., beginning Monday.

Career Began in 1935.

Langlie began his political career 21 years ago, winning election to the Seattle City Council in 1935 as a leader in a young men's "good government" organization.

Within five years, he was twice elected Mayor of Seattle and became Governor. He is now serving his third, but not successive, term as chief executive.

He was defeated for re-election in 1944, by Senator Mon C. Wallgren, a Democrat, but in turn defeated Wallgren four years later.

He was elected Mayor of Seattle in 1938, the youngest man to be elected to that office. When he first assumed his post as Governor in January of 1941, he was 40, the youngest Governor in the state's history.

EX-POLICE LT. SHOULDERS RELEASED FROM HOSPITAL

Former Police Lt. Louis Shoulders has returned to his apartment from St. John's Hospital, where he went for an examination June 17 following his release from prison after serving a term for perjury in the Greenlease ransom inquiry.

Shoulders, who left the hospital Friday after a six-day stay, was reported sufficiently improved so that he does not have to remain in bed. He suffered a coronary occlusion five weeks before his release from the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo.

He and his wife, the former June Marie George, live at the Convent Garden Apartments, 4497 Pershing avenue. Shoulders served a little more than two years of a three-year sentence imposed for lying under oath to a federal grand jury looking into the disappearance of $303,720 of the $600,000 ransom paid the kidnap-killers of Bobby Greenlease.

HEARINGS ON SITE FOR U.S. LABORATORY TO OPEN HERE

Hearings on suggested locations for a site for the proposed federal animal disease laboratory will be opened at Hotel Statler tomorrow by a committee headed by Don Collins of Colorado.

Advantages of Missouri as a site for the laboratory were stressed by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly in a letter sent to the committee.

Missouri's geographical position makes it "desirable as a location for any project which might attract people or resources from over the nation," Donnelly said in a letter to Collins.

3 Score and 10 For Marriage.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 23 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. James M. Watson, celebrating their seventieth wedding anniversary today, said they "never thought we would live to see the day." The couple received congratulations from Queen Elizabeth II. Mrs. Watson is 96, her husband 94. They have two children.

Agriculture Aid Who Lampooned Office Security Chief Is Cleared

Department Announcement Says Case Against John C. Baker of Chicago Is Closed.

(The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23 — The Department of Agriculture cleared yesterday the employe who denounced the methods of the department's security officer, J. Glen Cassity.

A brief announcement by the department said:

"Acting Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse said yesterday that responses to interrogatories in the case of John C. Baker were satisfactory to the department and the case has been closed."

Baker, Midwest information chief of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service in Chicago, lampooned Cassity in a letter to the security officer who sent him security questionnaires bearing on what Baker said eight years ago.

The letter gained wide circulation in Administration circles. The matter has been before Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson but he has made no statements on the case.

Various officials have said privately that Cassity should be relieved of his duties before he causes the Administration further embarrassment. They have declined to say publicly what, if any, recommendations have been made to Benson.

Cassity was a central figure in the case of Wolf Ladejinsky, who was branded a security risk late in 1953 by Secretary Benson on Cassity's recommendation. Benson withdrew the label last year after the White House stepped into the conflict. Ladejinsky was hired by the International Co-operation Administration and sent to South Viet Nam.

As a result of the Ladejinsky case, the Administration's security review procedure was revamped. The Agriculture Department set up a three-member security committee headed by Morse, a St. Louisan, who is acting secretary in the absence of Benson, who is on a trip to Iowa.

GEMS VALUED AT $8300 MISSING FROM LADUE HOME

Jewelry valued at $8300 was reported missing from the home of Samuel G. Duke, real estate dealer, by Ladue police yesterday. The home is at 2 Twin Springs lane.

The jewelry, missing from a drawer in a dressing room, was last seen by Mrs. Duke last Sunday, police said. Included are a diamond and sapphire brooch, watch and bracelet, dinner ring and other articles.

Police said there was no indication of a burglary. Duke said he believes the jewelry was only misplaced.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William Heritage, 39 Arundel place, Clayton, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary tomorrow with a family dinner at Hotel Chase.

BODY OF DROWNED BOY, 12, IS RECOVERED FROM RIVER

The body of Edward B. Plotner Jr., of Roxana, Ill., was found floating below the area where he drowned Thursday at the confluence of the Mississippi and Illinois rivers at Grafton, it was reported yesterday. It was recovered by two cousins, Ronald Harrison and James Beeler.

Harrison and Beeler, who with a friend were dragging the river, discovered the body after emerging from a duck blind where they sought shelter from the rain.

The Plotner boy, 12 years old, and his father were swimming near a sandbar when they suddenly were caught by an undertow in the current. Plotner reached his son and held him, but the boy slipped from his grasp. The Plotners and Mrs. Plotner's brother, Fred Harrison, his wife and their daughter, Sharon, 9 had gone to the sandbar for a swimming party after dinner.

ICELAND TO ELECT PARLIAMENT TODAY

Real Issue, However, Is Whether U.S. Will Retain Air Base.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 23 (AP) — Iceland will elect a new Parliament Sunday. But in effect what the 98,000 voters are deciding is whether this vital North Atlantic island will continue to function as a warning post for the armed forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Iceland is one of NATO'S 15 members, but has no army and so furnishes no troops, only bases.

The issue was forced March 27 when the old Parliament resolved that the United States should withdraw from Keflavik air base, where radar and fighter interceptors are on a 24-hour alert as part of a chain of anti-Soviet defenses stretching from the coast of Norway across Iceland and into Canada.

In last-minute campaign appeals, the Progressives, who initiated the troops withdrawal demand, declared tonight through party leader Hermann Jonasson that this course is necessary for Iceland to regain its traditional neutrality, "independence and self respect."

The biggest party—the Independence (Conservative)—led by Prime Minister Olafur Thors appealed to voters to realize that "political isolation and insecurity" face the nation if they back forces which want the Americans to go home. Thors says he will review Parliament's March decision if his party wins a majority tomorrow.

The Progressives lined up with the Social Democrats for campaign purposes and on the sidelines the weak Communist party cheered the fact somebody else was doing their work for them. Regardless of the wide diffeernces of opinion on retention of American troops here the three top parties had one thing in common: Opposition to the Communists.

Tomorrow's balloting is for 52 members of the Althing. These 52 will select 17 of their number to sit as the upper house, with the remainder making up the lower chamber.

ROBERT HARRIS ARRESTED, BROTHER OF POLICY 'KING'

Robert Harris, of the 4700 block of Lewis place, was held by police yesterday after he was arrested by two members of the police gambling squad Friday night and booked on suspicion of establishing a lottery. Harris, a Negro, is a brother of Ezra Harris, widely regarded as the "king" of the policy racket here.

Robert Harris, 46 years old, was arrested as he approached his home. Detectives Thomas McInerny and Edward Davis identified themselves to him and he ran. They ordered him to halt, but before doing so he threw six bundles to the roof of a one-story building, the officers reported.

The bundles were found to contain policy tabs and other paraphernalia.

SENATORS MAY CALL BENSON ON FARM LOAN UNIT

Committee Wants to Hear Secretary's Version of Agency's Operations.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23 — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson may soon be called to testify on alleged irregularities in the operations of the Farmers Home Administration.

Robert B. McLeaish, administrator of the agency, resigned suddenly Wednesday after the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee heard witnesses testify that he had indulged in excessive drinking. He told the committee that Benson had "strongly suggested" to him that he quit.

Sources close to the committee indicated a strong probability that the Secretary will be called to give his version of the incident, and also to testify on other charges of alleged irregularities that have been brought against the FHA by former employes.

These sources also raised the possibility that "several women secretaries" in the Washington headquarters may be called to testify on alleged high living by top officials.

It was understood the Administration is making every attempt to head off an appearance by Benson.

The committee is reported to wish to explore further into earlier testimony that state FHA directors were requested to fill local FHA farmer-committees with appointees drawn from lists of politically acceptable persons sent out from Washington.

Several of the lists were signed by Malcom H. Holliday, an assistant administrator of FHA. It was indicated Holliday and Deputy Administrator Henry C. Smith might be called to testify.

In addition the committee is understood to want to explore charges that the FHA tried to reduce its staff of Democratic employes in Oklahoma by arbitrarily ordering transfer from office to office. The committee is known to feel that the purpose of this was to force resignations.

The committee indicated its new series of public hearings may begin in a week or 10 days.

FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW FOR MRS. JAMES L. NELSON

Funeral services for Mrs. James L. Nelson, wife of the chairman of the board of C. Nelson Manufacturing Co., ice cream refrigeration equipment firm, will be at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Annunziata Catholic Church, 921 Cella road, Ladue. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Nelson, 73 years old, died of complications Thursday at her home, 781 Cella. She was the former Winifred Ursula Keilty. Surviving, beside her husband, are a son, Charles W. Nelson, and a daughter, Miss Hortense Nelson.

SITE COMMISSION TO VISIT PRISONS IN OTHER STATES

The commission named to select a site for the proposed $10,000,000 medium security penitentiary will leave here by plane tomorrow to inspect prisons of that type in Indiana and Ohio.

James D. Carter, director of the Department of Corrections, a member of the commission, said the group plans to visit a new medium security penitentiary at Marion, O., tomorrow, and the federal medium security prison at Terre Haute, Ind., on Tuesday.

State Senator Floyd R. Gibson of Kansas City is chairman of the commission. Other members, in addition to Carter, are Senators John W. Joynt of St. Louis and Jack S. Curtis of Springfield; Curtis Broston of St. Louis, special advisers to Gov. Phil M. Donnelly on prison matters; Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Truman, (Ret.) of Springfield, and State Representatives Joseph M. Tanner of Kansas City, Luther Arnold of Reed's Spring and Richard Decoster of Canton.

GET NATURAL COMFORT—WEAR DR. LEYDECKER'S SHOES
FIRST TIME IN 2000 YEARS
Since Demetrius, a wealthy Greek put a wooden block under his sandal to make him look taller, people have been walking on their toes. This unnatural position has made us a nation of foot-weary people. Watch old people walk. The older, the worse you walk.
Now with the cooperation of the International Shoe Co., largest in the world, Dr. Leydecker's Shoes are being made and offered to the public at a new low price, within reach of all. Clinically tested thru 20 years of research on thousands of feet.
RESULT: Dr. Leydecker's shoes for men and women could be sold for $20 to $30 a pair . . . but Dr. Leydecker offers these shoes for the amazing low price of $9.95 to $14.95, including Men's Safety Toe Shoes.
Never before have these Basic Patented Build-up Shoes been offered to the public. You are entitled to natural comfort—you can get with these shoes—Try a pair—today.

U.S. FUNDS SOUGHT FOR SAARINEN ARCH

Resolution Urges Repeal of Bar on Using Federal Money for Project.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23—A resolution calling for repeal of the law prohibiting use of federal money for the Saarinen arch on the St. Louis riverfront will be sent to members of the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission for their approval or disapproval, it was reported today.

Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), St. Louis, said United States Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), of New Mexico, acting chairman of the commission, had agreed to send copies of the resolution to commission members.

Karsten noted that while the commission had no power to report legislation, he believed adoption of a formal resolution would carry considerable weight in Congress.

In a letter to Anderson, he said there may be time to secure House and Senate action before adjournment.

"If not," Karsten went on, "the adoption of such a resolution would probably make it possible to bring about consideration of the matter early in the next Congress."

Congress, in 1954, authorized a federal contribution up to $5,000,000 for construction of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, but it specified that no federal funds could be used for the 590-foot stainless steel arch.

DOLL-MAKING CONTEST OPENS TOMORROW FOR TEEN-AGERS

A doll-making contest to provide dolls for distribution to indigent children in the United States and foreign countries will open tomorrow at Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney department store.

Girls between the ages of 13 and 19 are eligible to compete by purchasing the basic doll-making kit for 25 cents at the store. From this packet they can make a doll and dress it for entry in one of the three contest catagories.

Entries must be returned to the store by Sept. 7. The handiwork of the top three local winners then will be forwarded to New York City for national competition. The winner of the nation-wide contest will receive a 16-day trip to Europe to distribute dolls in orphanages, refugee camps and schools.

GROUND-BREAKING TUESDAY FOR NEW ST. VINCENT CLINIC

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the Laboure Clinic addition to St. Vincent Hospital, 7301 St. Charles road, Pagedale, will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday. Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter will officiate.

The 75-bed clinic will specialize in prevention, early diagnosis and treatment of nervous diseases. Estimated construction cost is $1,123,186. A public fund-raising drive raised more than $700,000.

The clinic is part of a $2,400,000 development program being conducted by the hospital. Other parts include restoration of the present 61-year-old hospital; a therapeutic activities center; enlarged professional staff; training of more psychiatric nurses; a research program, and subsidized care for indigents.

JOHN F. KREY RE-ELECTED

John F. Krey, president of Krey Packing Co., has been re-elected chairman of the board of directors of the National Live Stock & Meat Board, at the conclusion of the group's thirty-third annual meeting, in Chicago.

The organization, composed of livestock and meat industry leaders, promotes meat consumption. Krey lives at 10505 Ladue road, Creve Coeur.

URGES U.S. TO HEAD OFF STEEL STRIKE

Senator Bender Calls for All 'Possible Steps' to Avert Walkout.

NEW YORK, June 23 (UP)—A Senator urged Federal Government action today to head off a threatened strike by 650,000 steelworkers next Saturday.

Senator George H. Bender, (Rep.), Ohio, asked the Administration to take "all possible steps" to ward off a steel walkout. Bender's home state would be one of those hardest hit. He called on the Government to "summon the parties for decisive conferences," adding that a steel strike would be seized on by the Communists as an indictment of the American economic system.

Bender's plea came as representatives of the Big Three of the industry met with union representatives here in another negotiating session aimed at providing a new contract for the United Steelworkers which would avert a strike. The union has prepared for strike action at midnight next Saturday if no agreement is reached.

The first hint of a crack in the negotiations came at the close of the 90-minute bargaining talks this afternoon when David J. McDonald, president of the union, announced he had canceled an appearance scheduled for Monday in Washington. "These collective bargaining sessions are more important," he said. "We can do more here than in Washington."

McDonald's decision to remain here for the negotiations which will be resumed Monday caused hopes that a move may have been made to break the stalemate.

In a television appearance, McDonald said the employes are entitled to a pay increase of 27.5 cents an hour "on the basis of their record production."

"This is in sharp contrast to the steel industry's shameful offer of a nickel increase in net pay," he said.

The big three, United States Steel, Republic, and Bethlehem, have offered the union a five-year contract with pay boosts which they said would average 7.3 cents an hour each year.

McDonald's speech was the first union mention of a specific figure in its wage demands. Previously, the union had announced only that it was seeking a "substantial" pay increase.

ST. LOUIS U. REGISTRATION UP

Registration for the six-week summer session at St. Louis University is 5 per cent above that for the same period last year. There are 1984 students enrolled in six schools of the university as compared with a total of 1899 last year.

The highest enrollments for the session, which began last Tuesday, are 1022 students in the Graduate School and 583 in the College of Arts and Sciences. The last summer session this year will start July 28 and continue for five weeks.

SOCIALIST-RED UNITY IN ITALY IS DEALT BLOW

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

ROME, June 23—Unity of action between Italian Communists and the left-wing Socialists received a jarring blow today. Pietro Nenni, secretary of the left-wing Socialist party, wrote a long article for Mondo Operaio, the party magazine, in which he attacks Nikita S. Khrushchev.

The Socialist leader also says the Soviet system must be profoundly transformed and he comes out for a Western democratic type of Socialism in Italy.

Nenni's expressed determination to carry his party into the democratic camp showed that in doctrine he was no longer divided from the right-wing Italian Social Democrats. It is his link to the Communists that split Italian Socialism and today's article showed that a wedge was being driven between them.

Nenni said the great need now, not only in the Soviet Union but also in the other "popular democracies," is "political liberty, a need suppressed in Soviet society for many years."

U.S. COAST GUARD APPOINTEE

Terrence M. Sexton, 10062 Denness drive, has received an appointment to the United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., as the result of a competitive examination, it was announced yesterday.

Sexton, 18 years old, was graduated from Christian Brothers College May 27. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sexton. He reports at the academy July 3.

EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCES SCHEDULED AT ST. LOUIS U.

A Latin teachers' institute, a religious institute and an educational conference will be open to the public without charge this week at St. Louis University. A five-week clinic for slow-reading pupils will begin tomorrow at St. Francis Xavier School, 3741 West Pine boulevard.

The seventeenth annual Latin teachers' institute will consist of lectures tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. and Tuesday at 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. It is sponsored by the department of classical languages. The religious institute will be conducted by the Rev. Edward E. Finn, S.J., assistant professor of religion, from 2 to 4 p.m. tomorrow through Thursday.

"Trends on the Elementary Level" will be discussed by a panel of speakers at the educational conference at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The clinic for slow readers, sponsored by St. Louis University's department of education, will be held for pupils from the third to twelfth grades.

ST. LOUISAN IS AGAIN LUTHERAN OFFICER

Walter H. Schlueter Re-elected Treasurer at St. Paul.

By JOHN T. STEWART
Church Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 23—Walter H. Schlueter of St. Louis was re-elected treasurer of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod today.

The Rev. Dr. Walter C. Birkner of Fort Wayne, Ind., was elected secretary, to succeed the Rev. Dr. Martin F. Kretzmann of Danville, Ind., who had served since 1920.

Elections were held at the forty-third convention of the synod, which opened here Wednesday.

"Because of a growing necessity to serve underprivileged people in this country and abroad," the synod today adopted a measure to recruit and train more young persons as social welfare workers. The Department of Social Welfare also urged local congregations to establish welfare committees to promote this work on local levels.

The synod urged its districts and parishes to recognize the need for a specialized program of Christian education for mentally retarded children. It asked local congregations to make the mentally retarded children "their spiritual concern, and provide necessary help for the parents of such children."

Y.W. WORKSHOP PROGRAM FOR CHILDREN AGED 7 TO 14

The summer fun workshop of St. Louis County Branch Y.W.C.A., now open at 140 North Brentwood boulevard, Clayton, is available for children 7 to 14 years old on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, it was announced yesterday. Director is Miss Joan Welch, Clayton.

The Kinloch Community Center Y.W.C.A. Summer Day Camp is open to boys and girls 6 to 12 years old Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon. Miss Hattie Knox, is program director.

Teen-age girls from several county communities who have special skills in arts and crafts are assisting in the County Branch program. About 12 men and women have volunteered to assist in the Kinloch camp program.

FERGUSON TO VOTE TUESDAY ON $485,000 BOND PROGRAM

A $485,000 public improvement bond program will be submitted to Ferguson voters at a special election Tuesday. Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The program will be submitted in five propositions, each requiring a two-thirds majority for approval. Proposals are as follows: $133,000 for three new parks and improvement of an existing park; $225,000 for a revolving fund for local street improvements; $45,000 for a city garage; $42,000 for a library addition, and $40,000 for traffic signals at six intersections.

BERKELEY VOTERS TO NAME CHIEF OF POLICE TUESDAY

Berkeley will hold a special election Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of Marshal-Chief of Police James H. Webber, who resigned April 30 on health grounds. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Term of the winner will expire in April 1958. Of the five candidates who have filed, four of them, John L. Hughes, Robert J. Stark, William J. Staff and Edward F. Bray, are members of the present police department. The fifth is Leo J. Foy.

Although Webber's name is not on the ballot, a campaign to obtain write-in votes for his re-election was started last week. At the time of his resignation, Webber was under criticism as the result of an incident last March when he fired 14 or more pistol shots in the door and walls of the Berkeley police station.

Last April he was indicted on a charge of leaving the scene of a minor automobile accident.

RUSSIAN TOURISTS LEAVE FRANCE— GUIDES WORN OUT

PARIS, June 23 (UP)—Four hundred and thirty-seven Soviet tourists boarded a train here today for Holland, leaving exhausted French guides behind them.

Paris guides said they had never seen tourists pack in more sightseeing than did the Russians in two days of rubber-necking palaces, art galleries, and nightclub nudes.

About the only thing they missed was Paris's shrine of Communism — the "Federated Wall" in Pere Lachaise cemetery, where Communist troops of the 1871 commune made their last bloody stand.

The Soviet visitors, first non-official tourists from Russia to visit France since czarist days, showed more interest in economics — shops, prices, traffic, housing. The Russians commented on the high prices, but left loaded with presents for relatives back home.

Everywhere they went the Russians carried large notebooks, putting down carefully prices and wages.

"Our neighbors will ask many questions when we return home," they explained.

AMERICANS SPENT RECORD SUM IN EUROPE LAST YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 23 (UP) — Americans traveling in Europe and the Mediterranean area spent a record $427,000,000 last year and probably will spend more this year, the Commerce Department reported today.

They spent another $315,000,000 to get there and back.

The department said 482,000 United States residents went to European and Mediterranean countries last year—for pleasure and business—and the average trip cost $1530. Of this, $650 went for the airplane or steamship ticket, and $880 was spent in the countries visited.

MICHAEL ARLEN DIES; WROTE 'GREEN HAT'

Novelist One of Few Men to Become Millionaire By Writing.

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Michael Arlen, popular novelist of the roaring 20's who made his mark with "The Green Hat," died tonight after a long illness. He was 61 years old.

Mr. Arlen was said to have been one of the few men to become a millionaire by writing. In his later years he lived quietly and wrote little, but retained a lively interest in the intellectual life of New York City.

He was born at Rustchuk, Bulgaria, of Armenian parents. His name was Dikran Kuyumjian. He picked Michael Arlen as a pen-name and made it a byword when "The Green Hat," a sensational best seller, was published in 1924.

Mr. Arlen entertained a select circle of friends drawn from the literary and art worlds at regular luncheons in recent years.

He went to England as a boy and became a British subject in 1922. He was educated at Malvern College and studied medicine briefly at the University of Edinburgh. He lived on the French Riviera until World War II, when he came to New York. He published his first book at the age of 18, but it was "The Green Hat" that shot him to fame in 1924.

Mr. Arlen, who died at his home on Park Avenue, leaves his widow, Countess Atalanta Mercati, whom he married in 1928; a son, Michael John Arlen, and a daughter, Venetia.

ST. LOUIS CANOEISTS COVER THIRD OF 900-MILE VOYAGE

A Maplewood canoeist and his son reached Panama City, Fla., last night, completing 300 miles of a projected 900-mile canoe trip from New Orleans to Jacksonville, Fla.

Frank Mason, 7615 Marion court, and his son, Richard Mason, 14 years old, left New Orleans Monday for their two-week trip through the Intercoastal Inland Waterway. Their canoe is powered by a 5½-horsepower motor and is weighted down with camping equipment and three 6-gallon gasoline tanks.

They hope to finish their excursion next week and return to St. Louis by train, Mrs. Mason reported. She said her husband, a clerk at the Terminal Railroad Association, became attached to boating when he piloted a barge on the Illinois river.

ARCHBISHOP BARS CHURCH BACKING IN LOTTERY DRIVE

All priests of the St. Louis Catholic Archdiocese were reminded in a letter from Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter last week that none of the church organizations should support a current campaign to make lotteries legal for certain purposes.

Opposition to the campaign also was expressed by the St. Louis Lutheran Pastoral Conference.

The campaign was started at Jefferson City recently, the purpose beling to obtain signatures to submit a proposed constitutional amendment to Missouri voters to permit lotteries to be operated by civic, religious, fraternal and other organizations for fund-raising purposes.

Archbishop Ritter cited a Synodal regulation which says: "We strictly prohibit gambling devices and games promoted ostensibly for the benefit of churches, schools, institutions or Catholic societies, where cash prizes or valuable prizes with a cash equivalent are offered."

The campaign is called The Crusade for Civil Liberty and was started by a committee led by Ernest L. Schneider, head of a Jefferson City printing company.

NATIONAL CHAIRMAN FOR PIUS XII LIBRARY

Thomas F. O'Neil Accepts Leadership in Drive for St. Louis U. Project.

Thomas F. O'Neil, chairman of the board and president of RKO Teleradio Pictures, has accepted the national chairmanship of the Pius XII Library to be erected at St. Louis University, Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter announced yesterday.

O'Neil, chairman of the Mutual Broadcasting System and a vice president and director of the General Tire & Rubber Co., succeeds George W. Strake of Houston. Strake, who will continue in an advisory capacity, was the national leader of the Pius XII Library project and led the campaign to the midpoint of the effort to raise $4,500,000.

The library will make available to scholars the microfilmed reproductions of the Vatican manuscript collection in a city other than Rome for the first time. It will house the 600,000 microfilmed manuscripts that have been reproduced in the last three years.

The new center of research also will house the vast printed properties of more than 600,000 volumes that constitute the library of the 138-year-old St. Louis University.

O'Neil said he plans to create a national organization to secure the funds that will be sought outside the St. Louis area. He has invited Morton D. May, chairman of the St. Louis committee for the Pius XII Library, to join him as a national vice chairman with the specific responsibility of leadership of 80 committeemen in St. Louis who have accepted a goal of $2,300,000.

ASSISTANT CIRCUIT ATTORNEY PAYS FINES ON FOUR TICKETS

Henry J. Fredericks, an assistant circuit attorney, paid fines on an accumulation of three parking violations after he appeared on the scene as a fourth ticket was being issued to him, it was reported yesterday.

Frederick's car was spotted by Patrolman John Adragna of the traffic division parked overtime in the 500 block of North Ninth street. The license was included on the police list of vehicles to be towed away because of failure to pay fines for previous parking violations.

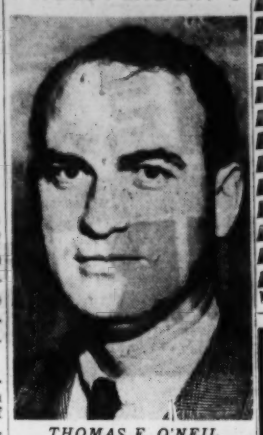

When Fredericks appeared, Adragna offered him the usual privilege of going at once to the traffic bureau at police headquarters to pay his fines. Fredericks accepted and paid $4 in fines, $1 for each ticket.

JUSTICE IN THE U. S. S. R.

WASHINGTON, June 23 (UP) —A 1954 defector from Russia told the State Department how the U.S.S.R. maintains "high standards of justice."

An old Communist spent 12 years in prison, the defector said, and on being released "was paid the entire salary he would have earned . . . and given a complete set of false teeth to replace those knocked out by the secret police."

REV. ALBERT MUNTSCH S.J. OBSERVING GOLDEN JUBILEE

The Rev. Albert Muntsch S.J., professor of sociology at St. Louis University, will observe his fiftieth anniversary as a priest and his sixty-fifth in the Jesuit Order by offering mass Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in St. Francis Xavier (College) Church, Grand and Lindell boulevards. Following mass, a breakfast will be held at Chouteau House, 3673 West Pine boulevard.

Father Muntsch, 82 years old, entered the university as a student in 1886 and became a faculty member in 1907. His 49 years of teaching at the university is uninterrupted except for a year spent at the University of California.

Father Muntsch now serves as instructor in psychology and psychiatry at the Nursing School, St. Mary's Infirmary. He founded the department of sociology at St. Louis University in 1921. He published the first Catholic textbooks in English on sociology and anthropology.

BRITAIN MAY ASK U.S. AID TO SELL PLAN ON CYPRUS

London Wants Turks to Realize That Their Interests Will Be Protected.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, June 23 (AP)—Britain is preparing "generous" new proposals to Greek Cypriots to settle their demands for self-government and may ask the United States to help sell the plan to the Turks, an informed source said today.

This indication of the direction Britain is taking in moves toward a showdown in the 14-month old rebellion by Greek Cypriots came as Sir John Harding, the British governor, returned from nearly three weesk of consultation in London.

The informed source said Britain was approaching the problem "generously, from the Greek point of view" but the Turkish minority on the island was a stumbling block to a solution because of its resistance to the idea of a Greek majority in a Cypriot parliament.

Both NATO Allies.

Therefore, he said, "Britain may ask the United States to help sell the plan to the Turks, for there is a delicate question in balance. Both Greece and Turkey are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Obviously Britain does not want to alienate a NATO ally and it could conceivably do so if it tried to force its point. Thus Britain may ask the United States to act as a sort of middle man in convincing the Turks that their interests will not be neglected."

Of Cyprus's population, about 400,000 are Greeks and 100,000 Turkish. The island, only 40 miles from the coast of Turkey, was turkish from 1571 until 1878 when it was signed over to the British.

The Turkish minority is demanding that any new constitution giving the island self government include educational and religious guarantees for its Moslem people. The Turkish government also wants guarantees that Cyprus will not become an eventual military threat to its security.

Observers do not doubt that if the constitution guaranteed the Greeks a permanent majority in the island parliament it would mean eventual union with Greece.

Negotiations between Harding and Archbishop Makarios, the Greek Orthodox religious and civilian leader of Enosis (union with Greece movement), collapsed last March on this point and over Makarios's refusal to condemn the violent campaign of bombing and assassination by Eoka, the strong arm branch of Enosis. Makarios was deported to the Seychelles islands in the Indian ocean.

No Official Contact Yet.

Thus far there has been no official contact between Britain and either the Greek or Turkish governments or with Makarios. But informed sources said a statement on new proposals may be made in the British House of Commons Wednesday.

The governor said on his return from London he had had "ample opportunity to express my views" in talks with Prime Minister Eden and other ministers and "we are in agreement on all points." He said he had been encouraged by much support he had received in London.

Field Marshal Sir Gerald Templer, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, is to visit Ankara early next month and stop off here for talks. It is assumed that Templer is being sent to convince the Turks that Britain is aware of their position and is taking it into consideration.

One question which the British will have to deal with in any final Cyprus solution is what to do with Makarios. The archbishop probably will have to be brought back, though Harding has declared he never would negotiate with him.

Meanwhile, an immediate impediment to a settlement is the constant activity of Eoka guerrillas, who continue a nightly campaign of bombings, shootings and ambushes, despite Harding's feeling last March that the terrorist activity would be wiped out in six months.

In an effort to stamp out the activity collective fines totaling $296,000 have been levied against towns, for the townspeople's failure to co-operate with the authorities.

Why Is The Steel Industry Forcing Another Crisis?

WHAT ARE THE TERMS OF THE "TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT" OFFER?

Our Union has been handed a "Take it or leave it" ultimatum by the Steel Industry. Because the daily life of every American may be affected by its consequences, let me answer a few questions.

First of all they offer us a take-home pay increase of a nickel an hour. With that we must accept the industry's demand for a five-year contract which provides less benefits each year than we have negotiated in the past from year to year. Also, the industry would require each worker to contribute one-and-one-half cents per hour more for insurance. One paid holiday is offered, but not until 1957. An additional half week of vacation for a minority of workers—but not until 1958. One penny an hour more is offered for work on the late shifts—but not until 1958. Instead of double time for Sunday work, which is now general practice in American industry, they offer eighty cents extra for Sunday work—but not until July 1959. Believe it or not, to a retiring Steelworker of thirty years service, they offer in 1987, a pension not quite equal to pensions now being paid in the Can Industry.

CAN THE STEEL INDUSTRY AFFORD THE BENEFITS WE ASK?

The industry's attitude surely cannot be due to its financial position. Let's take a look at the profits in steel for 1955. After taxes, the profit of the steel industry was over 1 BILLION DOLLARS for the year. This amounts to $21,000,000.00 every week of the year, or, over $3,000,000.00 every day of the year. Remember, after taxes, profits hit an all time high.

WHY DOES THE INDUSTRY FAIL TO CONSIDER GREATER OUTPUT PER-EMPLOYEE?

Even the Steel Companies do not deny the validity of the Government's figures which reveal a year by year growth in the form of greater production per employee. Because of this consistent growth in production, higher wages and salaries are not a luxury. They are a necessity. Without rising earnings people cannot buy increased quantities of goods. If the American people cannot buy what is produced, the outcome is obvious. It is precisely to avoid this situation which we have faced in the past, that a steady rise in wages is an absolute necessity if we are to keep our nation prosperous. In the Steel Industry last year, the rise in productivity broke all previous records. It was a startling 11 percent. For every one hundred tons of steel produced by the average Steelworker in 1954, he produced one hundred and eleven tons in 1955. This is in sharp contrast to the Steel Industry's shameful offer of a five cent increase in net wages or about 2 percent.

WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

I do not know why the industry chooses to reward it's employees' record-breaking production with a trifling wage offer, a substandard contract and insistence that its employees gamble on an unknown future for five long years. But this I do know. The proposals made to the industry by the union on behalf of the steelworkers are reasonable. The industry can well afford them—and still leave profits at a record level. Once again I call upon the leaders of the steel industry to measure up to their responsibilities to the steelworkers and to the nation. I want the nation to know that the United Steelworkers of America stand ready to negotiate, through genuine collective bargaining, a fair and reasonable settlement before the expiration of our current agreements on June 30.

New Book Reopens Dispute Over Secrecy of Presidential Papers

Reporter's Volume Indicates He Had Access to Confidential Cabinet Minutes, Other Documents.

By ELIE ABEL
The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23—A new book on the first three years of the Eisenhower Administration reopened today the unsettled question of congressional access to Executive branch papers, promising a showdown between the White House and the Capitol.

The book, "The Inside Story," was written by Robert J. Donovan of the New York Herald Tribune Washington bureau. It is scheduled for publication July 2.

Donovan's narrative, interspersed with dated entries on important Cabinet meetings and White House staff conferences, suggests that he had access to confidential Cabinet minutes and other presidential papers.

Not "Official," He Says.

The author, in a brief preface, contends that "there is nothing official about this volume." But some members of Congress and the Washington press corps profess to see in it clear evidence of White House co-operation.

Representative John E. Moss (Dem.), California, chairman of the House Information subcommittee, was the first to register a public complaint. Commenting on the published suggestions that confidential White House papers had been turned over to a single reporter, he said:

"I think that if the records were available on that basis to an individual, from here on out any claim of privilege by the Executive for those same records is outrageous."

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, declined to comment on the Donovan book, or on an article in the current issue of the New Yorker magazine that questions the propriety of granting any reporter "the privilege of examining the minutes of all . . . Cabinet meetings and a large number of other documents involving confidential proceedings within the Executive branch."

Hagerty Noncommital.

Asked if the book was an "authorized version of the Eisenhower years," Hagerty replied, "I wouldn't think so."

"It's Donovan's book," he added.

Hagerty refused to say who in the White House had decided to make the papers available to the author, or whether he had approved the decision.

Would he "find out" who had made the decision? Hagerty was asked. His answer, delivered with a smile, was "No."

Donovan himself denied that he had been granted access to highly classified National Security Council papers.

"There is no NSC material in the book," he said. "I have not looked at NSC papers."

He acknowledged, however, that he had been granted a Q clearance while working on his book. This is the clearance even Government officials must have to see classified information in the atomic energy field.

Donovan did not deny that he might have seen confidential Cabinet papers.

"You'll have to draw your own conclusions about that," he said.

Unresolved Issue.

The issue of congressional access to information that the Executive regards as privileged has not been resolved. But the Eisenhower Administration has stubbornly resisted turning over information of this kind on congressional demand.

This was true when the President in 1954 forbade John G. Adams, then Army counselor, to tell a Senate committee about discussions within the Administration on the best means of dealing with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy in the Army-McCarthy dispute.

Although the Donovan book contains no disclosures of major importance in surveying the foreign policy crises over Korea, Indochina and Taiwan (Formosa), it adds detail and color to the widely published accounts of President Eisenhower's heart attack last September and other domestic happenings of the last three years.

CLINIC FOR SLOW READERS

A five-week clinic for slow readers, sponsored by St. Louis University Department of Education, will begin tomorrow at St. Francis Xavier Elementary School, 3741 West Pine boulevard.

Classes, for students from the third through twelfth grades, will be for one hour each weekday through July 27.

G.I.S CAN WEAR SHORTS, WACS NOT INCLUDED

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, June 23—The United States Army will permit its men to wear shorts on post throughout the world beginning July 1.

Last March 22, the Army sent out an order to all six continental armies and theater commanders overseas giving permission to allow shorts on garrison as of July 1.

The new shorts are 8.2-ounce, khaki, cotton suntans, hemmed just above the knee. With them must be worn a suntan shirt of the same material, but with half-sleeves; knee-length tan cotton socks and tan, low quarter shoes. No ties are permitted, the shirt being worn open-necked.

Officers must put on long pants to go to their club in the evenings, and nobody may wear the shorts off post. After July 1, 1958, shorts and half-sleeve shirts will be the mandatory summer uniform everywhere for all male personnel.

As of now, however, shorts are not for Wacs.

EVERETT A. TOSH DIES IN SLEEP OF HEART ATTACK

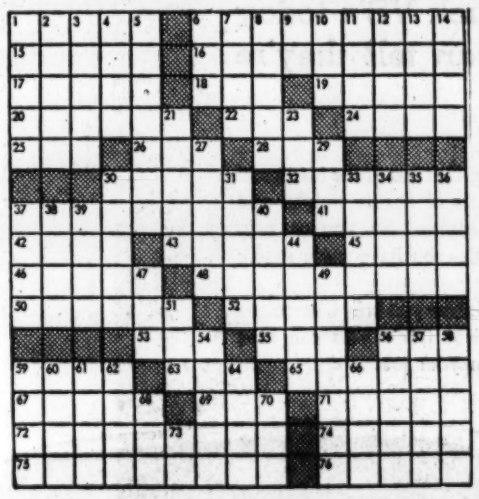

Everett A. Tosh, manager of the stationery and printing department for International Shoe Co., died early yesterday in his sleep of a heart attack at his home, 1013 Sanford avenue. He was 61 years old.

Mr. Tosh had been associated with the shoe company for 40 years and had managed the stationery and printing department since 1938. Previously, he was office manager of the auditing department.

He is survived by his wife, of the Sanford avenue address, and two daughters, Mrs. N. J. Butler of Hot Springs, Ark., and Mrs. Leo Robbins of St. Louis. Funeral services will be tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, with burial in Oak Grove Cemetery.

SHRINE CIRCUS TO BE PRECEDED BY PARADE

11 Bands, 14 Giant Balloons Included in Downtown Procession Thursday.

Uniformed drill groups, Blue Lancers, Indians, bands and clowns will participate Thursday in a downtown parade of 2000 persons. The parade will be held the night before the fourteenth annual Moolah Temple Shrine circus and fireworks display opens at Public Schools Stadium.

Starting at 8:30 p.m. at Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue, the procession will include 100 clowns, 11 bands, 24 Indians from Tulsa, circus performers and nine floats decorated to portray nursery rhyme themes.

There will be 14 balloons, some in the shape of monsters. Largest will be a 150-foot representation of a train which requires 30 men for its handling. There also will be balloons representing a 125-foot long Chinese dragon, a Dachshund character 100 feet and a dinosaur about 90 feet.

Four thousand orphans from Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Negro homes in this area, outstate Missouri and southern Illinois will be guests at the opening performance of the circus. They will be taken in Public Service Co. busses provided by Moolah Temple, and supplied refreshments by the Shriners.

The circus will begin at 8:15 p.m., Friday, continuing through July 4, with 100 acts. Each performance will be climaxed by a fireworks display. Tickets for the circus, given for the benefit of Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, can be purchased at the Arcade building and Moolah Temple, 3821 Lindell boulevard.

SPECIAL INSTITUTIONS URGED FOR RETARDED

Report to State Senate Group Outlines Need for Child Aid.

Special institutional facilities are "urgently needed" for care and treatment of mentally ill, emotionally disturbed and physically handicapped children, a report from the Social Planning Council of Greater St. Louis said yesterday.

The report has been presented to the State Senate subcommittee on the education and training of deficient children, which is considering new legislation in this field.

Separate, specialized treatment facilities for children should be provided at state hospitals for the mentally ill, the report stated. A bond issue is needed to relieve "serious handicaps" resulting from overcrowding at the state's two training schools for the mentally deficient, the report added.

The need for state-supported, residential treatment centers for emotionally disturbed children was stressed. Further study should be made of the kind of facilities needed for the care of youngsters with severe physical handicaps, the report urged.

The study also recommended expanded financial aid for handicapped children and improved educational opportunities for them through recruitment and training of specialized teachers and increased state aid to schools.

Other recommendations were for improved vocational rehabilitation services and the possible establishment of a state commission to co-ordinate the work of all agencies serving the handicapped.

Heads Dental Academy.

DETROIT, June 23 (AP)—Dr. William M. Greenhut of New York City was elected president of the American Academy of Dental Medicine today at the group's annual meeting.

31 IN CRESTWOOD DECLARE MAYOR'S POOL IS A HAZARD

A swimming pool built by Mayor Oliver J. Wilkins of Crestwood at his home, 1021 Ayers drive, may cost him some future votes. The recently opened pool has aroused the ire of a group of Wilkins's neighbors and constituents.

In a letter signed by 31 residents of Diversey drive, the lack of a fence to inclose the pool was called an "attractive hazard" to 40 children under 10 years of age who live in the neighborhood. A suggestion that Wilkins erect a fence was rejected, the letter stated.

Wilkins told the Post-Dispatch he has obtained a heavy, plastic cover that is to be stretched across the pool when it is not in use. As a result of his neighbors' complaint, he said he intended to start using the device yesterday without waiting for construction of a concrete apron that will include permanent hooks for anchoring the cover. It will hold 12 adults, he said.

Wilkins acknowledged an unprotected pool might be hazardous, but minimized his neighbors' complaint. "That's just sour grapes because they haven't been invited to swim in the pool," he said.

BLAIR BACKED FOR GOVERNOR BY TENTH WARD DEMOCRATS

Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. has been indorsed for the Democratic nomination for Governor by the Tenth Ward Regular and Jefferson Democratic Club, it was announced yesterday by Louis W. Buckowitz and Mrs. Emma Roesch, committeeman and committeewoman of the ward.

Other indorsements voted by the club were: United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. for re-election; State Senator Edward V. Long for Lieutenant Governor; Attorney General John M. Dalton for re-election; Secretary of State Walter H. Toberman for re-election and M. E. Morris for State Treasurer.

CHILD KILLED, BLOWOUT CAUSES AUTO TO OVERTURN

Robert E. Hedrick Jr., 2 years old, whose parents live at 2330 Albion place, was killed Friday night when the automobile which his father was driving overturned on Missouri Highway 32 about 15 miles west of Belleview, Mo., the Highway Patrol reported.

The accident occurred when a tire blew out on a curve, the patrol said.

Mrs. Hedrick was injured and was taken to a hospital in Ironton, Mo.

MISSOURI LIFTS AGE RULES ON USE OF POLIO VACCINE

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23 (UP)—The State Division of Health today lifted age restrictions on the use of polio victims.

Dr. James R. Amos, state health director, said recent increases in supply of the vaccine justify the extended use. Previously health division rules restricted the vaccine to children from six months to 19 years old.

Dr. Amos stressed that the emphasis should remain on the younger group. He said a physician should use his judgment about going beyond the age of 19, depending on the supply of vaccine available locally after the younger persons have been immunized.

2 ST. LOUISANS ACCEPTED FOR U.S. NAVAL ACADEMY

Two St. Louis youths have been accepted for admission to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Congresswoman Leonor K. Sullivan announced yesterday. They are to appear tomorrow for enrollment.

They are: Joseph L. Sestric, 17 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Sestric, 2109 Russell boulevard, and Anthony C. Brennan, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Brennan, 6140 McPherson avenue. Sestric's father is city director of public safety.

Both youths were graduated from St. Louis University High School, Brennan in June 1954 and Sestric earlier this month.

Most modern truck V8's ...and the pounds prove it!

Pound for pound, the most powerful truck V8's today are Chevrolets. That's one way you can tell they're the most modern V8's going!

Any engineer will tell you that horsepower-per-pound is a good indication of efficient engine design. And Chevrolet's modern short-stroke V8 truck engines do more work for their weight than any other V8 in any truck today!

That means they carry around fewer pounds for power they develop. (They weigh up to 200 pounds less than other comparable engines!) It means, too, that less of the maximum truck G.V.W. consists of engine weight—and more is devoted to payload. So, you not only can haul bigger loads—you have more usable power to move them!

Stop by and let us show you how Chevrolet's compact, super-efficient truck V8's can save hours and dollars on your job.

Weigh the facts... and you'll choose today's most modern trucks

Wasted weight is engineered out of Chevrolet truck V8's!

The ultra short stroke of Chevrolet's truck V8's makes possible a rugged yet compact cylinder block. Modern design cuts down engine weight and increases engine efficiency!

More power per pound means more power for your payload!

Since less power is used in moving engine weight, a bigger proportion is available for moving your payloads. You get hour-saving performance on the job. And modern V8 power saves dollars, too!

There's a modern V8 for every Chevrolet Task-Force truck!

There's a powerful, deep-breathing V8—either standard, or optional at extra cost—in every Chevrolet truck model. Horsepower ranges as high as 195 for fast, efficient high-tonnage hauling.

E. M. CLARK TO HEAD BOY SCOUT CAMPAIGN

Drive Will Seek Financial Aid in Areas Not Covered by United Fund.

Edwin M. Clark, vice president of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council and president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., has been named chairman of the 1956 statewide Boy Scout finance campaign, it was announced yesterday.

The campaign organization will be developed in the eight state councils to solicit in areas where the United Fund or its agencies do not provide financial support for Scouting organizations.

Louis B. Eckelkamp, also a council vice president, has been named chairman of the St. Louis council area of the finance campaign, a post he held last year. Elmer A. Jones of Bonne Terre, will be vice chairman and chairman of the advanced gifts committee.

The local campaign will be conducted in Lincoln, Warren, Jefferson, Ste. Genevieve, St. Francois, Iron, Reynolds, Dent, Crawford and Washington counties. It will not be held in St. Louis or St. Charles counties, Festus, Crystal City or De Soto, where scouting is supported by United Fund.

Scouts and Explorers from 42 units in the council will start their annual week of long-term summer camping at three Scout camps beginning this afternoon.

Five members of the council will be awarded Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, in ceremonies to be held this week.

Sheridan Clark of Troop 306 will be given the rank in a ceremony today in Shrewsbury Park. Joe Kinker of Troy, Mo., will receive an Eagle badge at a Court of Honor Wednesday at Troy.

Bruce Stinchcomb and George Brand, members of Troop 64, will receive their rank at a Court of Honor to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Florissant, and Scoutmaster Marvin L. Cash of Bonne Terre will become an Eagle Scout in a ceremony to be held by Troop 415 Thursday at Irondale Scout Reservation.

Bert Ruler of Glendale was awarded Eagle rank at a Court of Honor held yesterday at Babler State Park.

A Cub Den, five Cub Packs and four Scout Troops and Explorer Posts joined the council last week. They are: Neighborhood Den 429; Packs 616, 663, 625, 171 and 157; Troops 616, 642, 116 and 580, and Explorer Posts 203, 107, 129 and 371.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Twenty-four Senior Girl Scouts were selected to represent the Girl Scout Council of Greater St. Louis at the first Girl Scout National Senior Roundup which will begin Friday and run through July 11 in Milford, Mich. The group will leave by a special train Wednesday.

The encampment, in which 5000 girls and adults from throughout the country will participate, will have as its theme "Americana" and will feature everything American in dance, song, cooking, crafts and history. Highlights of the Roundup will include a Fourth of July celebration in which 2000 girls will take part and presentation of "The Girl Scout Story," written by Dorothy Fields.

Three adults who will serve as Roundup troop leaders from this area are: Mrs. R. W. Chapman, Mrs. Thomas Stack and Mrs. Max Okenfuss.

The St. Louis Girl Scout Council will again offer a Family Camp Weekend over Labor day, Sept. 1-3, at Camp Cedarledge, Pevely, Mo. Camping is available to the family of any person registered in the Girl Scout organization.

The weekend program will include campfires, square dancing and swimming. The fee is $4 for each adult and child more than 12 years of age and $2.50 for children. Registrations will be accepted between July 2 and Aug. 15.

Senior Scout Sally Hopkins, Troop 86 in University City, will leave Friday to attend the Girl Scout Archaeological Mobile Camp near Santa Fe, N.M., from June 30 to July 14.

Joyce Jones, Nor-Co District, and Meredith Michaels, Pioneer District, have been awarded scholarships to the American Youth Foundation Camp Miniwanca, Shelby, Mich., from July 30 through Aug. 12. Scholarships were offered by the Downtown Kiwanis Club and are for a non-denominational Christian leadership training course.

ARTIST PRESENTATION GROUP TO DISCUSS RECITAL SERIES

The executive committee of the Artist Presentation Society and four musicians who will appear in the society's 1956-57 recital series will discuss the recital schedule at a meeting at 4 p.m. Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Madlinger, 18 Williow Hill road, Ladue.

The musicians, who were selected by judges in auditions June 11, are: Miss Vivian Wilkerson, 4141 Page boulevard, pianist; Miss Naomi Blake, 814 Clarendon avenue, coloratura soprano; Miss Doris Vogt, 24 Country Club place, Belleville, pianist, and Mrs. Marion D. Flagherty, Scott Air Force Base.

The recitals will be given on Sunday afternoons at the Wednesday Club Auditorium, 4504 Westminster place. Exact dates have not been determined. The society aids young musicians who want a professional career by arranging a public recital for each.

'NO ABSTRACTION' ART RULE DROPPED BY ILLINOIS FAIR

The Illinois State Fair's Professional Art Exhibit, to be held at Springfield Aug. 10-19, has eliminated its controversial rule excluding "non-objective abstractions," Herbert W. Georg, director, told the Post-Dispatch last week.

Georg, a Springfield commercial photographer, said artists were invited to submit what they liked. Two paintings may be submitted, and the deadline is July 15. There is no entry fee. Artists pay the freight both ways.

The Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union congratulated Georg on getting rid of the "no abstraction" rule. Some artists in St. Louis and elsewhere refused to send work to the exhibit in former years, regarding the rule as distasteful.

"It all makes a good show," Georg commented. He said he saw no reason to continue the restriction and would have cut it out last year, his first as director, if there had been time. He said he removed the restriction himself.

SISTER MARY LORGIA BERGER FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for Sister Mary Lorgia Berger, a member of School Sisters of Notre Dame for 74 years, will be at 9 a.m. tomorrow at Villa Gesu chapel. Burial will be in Villa Gesu Cemetery.

Sister Mary, 88 years old, died yesterday at Villa Gesu where she had been retired for the last five years. She formerly was a teacher in the lower and intermediate grades. She entered the order of School Sister of Notre Dame in 1882 and professed her vows in 1889. She had no immediate survivors.

50 TO VISIT TEMPLE ISRAEL

About 50 Bible class students from Trinity Evangelical and Reformed Church, 4700 South Grand boulevard, will visit Temple Israel, Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, at 9 a.m. tomorrow as part of their study of the Old Testament.

RECEPTION FRIDAY TO HONOR DR. LAMPE; HE IS RETIRING

A reception honoring the Rev. Dr. William B. Lampe, pastor of West Presbyterian Church, 5872 Maple avenue, and his wife, will be held at the church Friday at 8 p.m.

Dr. Lampe announced early this year that he planned to retire from the ministry. His retirement will be effective Aug. 31. He will preach his last sermon in the church he has served for 35 years on July 8.

City officials have been invited to the reception, sponsored by the congregation. Dr. Lampe is a former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, highest position in the church.

Another Honor For Author.

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP) —Miss Rachel Carson, marine biologist and author of the best-seller "The Sea Around Us," received another honor last night—the 1956 achievement award of the American Association of University Women. Miss Carson said she would use the $2000 which goes with the award to further studies now under way for a new book on "The Basic Problems of Life."

OLD FOE ENTERS RACE AGAINST TALMADGE

Former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson Seeking Georgia Seat in Senate.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 23 (INS)—Former acting Gov. M. E. Thompson qualified today as a candidate for the United States Senate against his long-time political foe, Herman E. Talmadge.

Thompson announced his candidacy in a blast at "big money," then strode into the offices of the Democratic party and paid his $500 filing fee for the Sept. 12 primary.

Talmadge and D. Talmadge Bowers of Canon, Ga., had previously qualified for the race to win the Senate seat being given up by the retirement of Senator Walter F. George.

Talmadge commented, "The N.A.A.C.P. has a perfect right to sponsor and finance any candidate it so desires."

Thompson, who tangled with Talmadge in the famous "double Governors" fight of 1947, told reporters that he had decided to run "after it became evident that no other strong candidate would offer to oppose the choice of big money, Herman E. Talmadge.

Thompson won a court decision making him Acting Governor for two years in 1947, when both he and Herman Talmadge claimed the office after the death of the Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge.

Since that time Thompson has run three times for Governor, and always lost, twice to Herman Talmadge himself and then to Talmadge's favored candidate, now Gov. Marvin Griffin.

LIBRARY EXTENDING TIME, BOOK LIMIT FOR SUMMER

More books may be borrowed and they can be kept out longer during the summer, the St. Louis Public Library announced yesterday. The expanded schedule will remain until Oct. 10.

Under a "long-term loan" program, readers may take out as many as nine books for a period up to three months. Only exceptions are certain new and popular titles and books on the required reading lists of universities and colleges in the St. Louis area. Usually books may be taken out for a maximum period of 28 days.

Special lists of suggested summer reading are available at Central Library, 1301 Olive street, or will be mailed upon request to the Readers' Advisory Service there.

REVOLT OF 1000 RED CHINA SLAVE LABORERS REPORTED

TAIPEI, Formosa, June 23 (UP) — More than 1000 slave laborers revolted in Red China, killed their Communist supervisors and fled to the mountains late last month, a Chinese Nationalist news agency reported today.

The unofficial Tatao agency, quoting unidentfied sources behind the "bamboo curtain," said the revolt took place May 25 among forced laborers working on a "reclamation team" in Nenkiang province, bordering on North Korea.

The agency said the laborers, after killing their guards, grabbed all available weapons and took to the hills. It reported the Communists have mobilized thousands of troops to prevent a recurrence of such incidents.

Candidates for Congress Facing 'Do-It-Yourself' Campaigns for Election

Illness of President Casts Doubt on Outlook—Both Democratic and Republican Aspirants May Have to Fend for Themselves—The Incumbents Have Advantage of Available Facilities.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 23.

FOR 435 members of the House and 35 members of the Senate the time is fast approaching when they must go out and ask for a new lease on the job. This makes for an uneasy restiveness in the last days of the Congress as Representatives and Senators try to keep one eye on the calendar and the other cocked in the direction of the hustings where they must shortly proclaim their sterling qualities.

Although it is scarcely more than three months away, the doubts that overshadow this congressional campaign are darker than at any time in recent history. They are doubts, both political and medical, that leave a great many congressmen in both parties with the sad conviction that the "do-it-yourself" movement is all that is left to them.

REPUBLICAN STRATEGY had been based largely on the theme of "give Ike a Congress of his own party." In the vernacular this is known as coattail riding and G.O.P. congressmen were all prepared to get a firm grip on the long coattails of the most popular Republican since Theodore Roosevelt. Letters signed by the President warmly indorsing Representative Zilch and Senator Doakes had been prepared for us this fall.

But the President's second serious illness in nine months has put those fine plans in jeopardy. The gloom is as thick as a London fog among those who had counted on an Eisenhower landslide to pull them through. They fear that the question of his fitness has already dimmed his popularity as a candidate for a second term.

The Democrats are afflicted by a palsy of uncertainty that owes something to the earlier uproar over campaign contributions and the sources of such contributions. The free spending by the natural gas lobby, with its political repercussions, has made Democrats leery of standing officially on the receiving end of the campaign pipeline.

Shortly before his death the Democrats persuaded Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky to be chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee. The genial, beloved Barkley specified, however, that he would not raise funds. After a long search with one candidate after another shieing away Senator George A. Smathers of Florida finally agreed to be chairman with Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota as vice chairman. Most of the hard work will be done by Leslie L. Biffle, for many years secretary-treasurer of the Campaign Committee and an institution in Washington nearly as familiar as the Capitol dome.

But the Democrats have little money and their national organization rumbles with discontent over the tactics of National Chairman Paul M. Butler. Personal feuding in critical states such as Kentucky, where two senators are to be elected, raises a further doubt about November.

All this tends to confirm the "do-it-yourself" pattern of getting elected or re-elected that has increasingly given the incumbent congressman a great advantage. If he is at all alert he has done a host of favors for the folks back home to whom he can turn for help. He can send his campaign literature out free under the congressional frank. He has a battery of assistants and secretaries, both in the Capitol and in a rent-free office in his home town, who are hard at work to return the distinguished ornament of our great democracy to Washington for another term.

That is the basis of the deep-seated Republican fear that while Mr. Eisenhower is likely to win re-election despite the deepening shadow of his ill health, both houses of Congress will stay Democratic by the present narrow majorities. Mr. Eisenhower would be the first President in history to fail to carry both Senate and House with him. A blow to the President's prestige, this would mean four more years of the division and confusion that have marked relations between the executive and the legislature in this Eighty-fourth Congress.

The advantage enjoyed by a member firmly placed in the seat is well illustrated in the case of Senator Warren G. Magnuson (Dem.), Washington. Magnuson's record is far from distinguished. But he, or, more accurately, his able staff, have worked day in and day out for favors for individuals and for the state—dams, roads, bridges, fish hatcheries, whatever carried on the gravy train. Furthermore, as a result of his seniority he is chairman of the influential Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee which has a lot to say about the routing of the gravy train.

So while Magnuson has the support of the unions he also has wide backing from business men and business organizations. That makes him a tough candidate to defeat and it presents Republicans with one of their major problems in many states—to find conspicuous and outstanding men to run for public office against powerful incumbents. After much pressure Gov. Arthur B. Langlie finally agreed to challenge Magnuson. He is popular with a good record as governor but it is generally acknowledged that he has an uphill fight.

In New York state the heat has been put on former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to leave his highly profitable law practice and run for the Senate against Senator Herbert H. Lehman. Dewey is being told that no ordinary candidate can defeat the widely popular Lehman and, therefore it is up to him to give up the big money and do or die for his party.

Thus far Dewey has resisted this draft but if the President himself were to call him to duty he might yield. Another possibility under discussion is Nelson Rockefeller who made an excellent reputation in various administrative posts in Washington. Rockefeller, the argument is, would also appeal to independent voters and marginal Democrats with no interest in a Republican wheel horse.

Lehman's own dilemma is typical of that of many Democrats. He is confident he can run 500,000 votes ahead of the national ticket. But would that be enough to overcome the effect of an Eisenhower landslide? Moreover, the Senator is 78 years old and his wife is bringing great pressure on him to avoid a strenuous political campaign by retiring.

INTERNECINE WARFARE plagues both parties. In Kentucky Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler is feuding with Senator Earle C. Clements who is up for re-election. This is an important state since two seats are to be filled, one left vacant by Barkley's death. A recent effort to make peace failed with angry repercussions and Happy, whose vote-getting proclivities are matched only by his inordinate ambition which does not stop short of the White House, may sit on his hands in the fall.

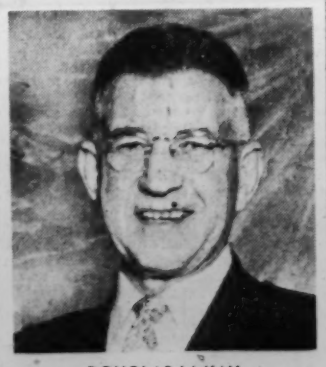

In Pennsylvania the Republicans are divided between the Old Guard machine of Joseph P. Grundy and the faction led by Senator James H. Duff, who is running for a second term at the age of 73. Duff's opponent will be former Mayor Joseph F. Clark Jr. of Philadelphia. Clark has had a lot to do with revitalizing the Democrats in Pennsylvania. They now are in power in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton and a young Democratic Governor, George M. Leader, is in the State House in Harrisburg. All this adds up to a tough go-round for Duff who has not made an outstanding Senate record.

Ohio is a state in which the Republicans will perforce concentrate their efforts. Senator George H. Bender, elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Robert A. Taft, is up for re-election. His opponent is Gov. Frank J. Lausche, who has been described as the Liberace of politics, shedding his charm on Democrats and Republicans alike with such success that he has been five times elected Governor. Lausche is the odds-on favorite.

But it is in Oregon that both parties are preparing to put money and energy. Senator Wayne Morse, a Republican turned Democrat, is running for re-election against Douglas McKay, until recently Secretary of the Interior. The issue of public power and conservation is sharply focused between these two and the contest is warming up. Morse has already been the beneficiary of part of the relatively small amount of money raised by the senate campaign group. McKay will have unlimited funds from the Republican treasure chest.

Faced with the ordeal of a campaign, and in most states it is a gruelling grind, the Senator or the Representative is often overcome with despair. Is it worth it, he is likely to ask, thinking of the days and nights of speech-making, handshaking, baby-kissing that lie ahead.

A fortunate minority in the South and in safe Republican states such as Maine and Vermont can look at all this fussin' and feudin' with calm detachment. If they have no opposition in the primaries they can go fishing. Once the final filing date for the primary was past with no opponent in sight, Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas could take a quite disinterested view of the sordid political struggle. Even in a border state such as Oklahoma, Senator A. S. Mike Monroney will have only token Republican opposition in November. One reason for growing Republican concern over capturing the Senate is that the Democrats hold more of these seats than the G.O.P.

The Fund for the Republic Turning to Race Relations

ROBERT M. HUTCHINS
"To defend and advance . . ."

Largest Single Project, However, Is the Study of Communism in the United States—Fund Set Up by Ford Foundation; Under Constant Criticism.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.

THE Fund for the Republic, created by the Ford Foundation at the height of "McCarthyism," is expending more and more of its millions for the betterment of race relations. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Fund organization, reported yesterday that during the past three years $5,414,201 had been spent to support activities designed to "defend and advance the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution." The largest single contribution was for a study of Communism in the United States and the largest cumulative expenditure has been in race relations.

The Ford Foundation, established by the automobile family in 1952, donated $15,000,000 for an independent and separate entity which originally had two immediate projects: "A clear statement in contemporary terms of the legacy of American liberty" and "research into the extent and nature of the internal Communist menace and its effect on our community and institutions."

FROM THE START of its operations in February 1953, the Fund has been under almost constant criticism by small but vocal groups in and out of Congress which opposed its directors, staff, activities and tax-exempt status for a variety of reasons. The critics usually implied that the organization was "unpatriotic," "political," or "socialistic."

The most recently scheduled congressional investigation of its activities was postponed indefinitely this week by Chairman Francis E. Walter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, of the House Un-American Activities Committee, who announced two weeks ago he would call witnesses to determine whether "this fund, with its vast reservoir of funds and power, is a friend or foe in our nation's death struggle against the Communist conspiracy."

He said Congress and the American people were entitled to know the answer to these questions:

"Are its extensive activities strengthening or weakening our security structures in the Communist cold war?

"Are the leaders of this force which enjoys the benefit of tax immunity serving an interest inimical to our basic American traditions?"

Walter said the inquiry had not been abandoned although a new hearing date had not been set for the meeting scheduled for next Wednesday. He said preliminary staff work had gone slower than expected.

Replying to Walter, H. Rowan Gaither Jr., president and chairman of the board of the Ford Foundation, said the trustees of the Foundation had "named a group of eminent, able and patriotic men as the original board of the Fund and gave them the power to name additional members, their successors and staff.

"The Foundation has full confidence in the integrity and patriotism of the members of the board of the Fund."

Hutchins, a subject of as much controversy as the Fund itself, said "any judgment of the Fund should be based on a careful examination of its three-year record of activity."

After the Fund had been investigated by a House committee headed by Republican Representative Brazilla Carroll Reece of Tennessee, in 1954, Hutchins attacked the majority finding that the Fund was "socialistic" as "wild and squalid." Hutchins has also been in controversy with Seaborn P. Collins, then national commander of the American Legion, with radio commentator Fulton Lewis Jr. and members of Congress who criticised the Fund for its defense of congressional witnesses who invoked the Fifth Amendment.

Paul G. Hoffman, a close friend of President Eisenhower and the first administrator of the Marshall Plan, has also been attacked by these and other persons. He is one of the originators of the Fund and chairman of the Fund's board of directors. He incurred Reece's enmity when he was in the small group that engineered the presidential nomination of Gen. Eisenhower over the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Reece's candidate. Hoffman recently testified in favor of the revision of the Walter-McCarran immigration act but whether this testimony was responsible for Walter's hostility to the Fund cannot be ascertained.

The directors of the Fund are men of national prominence and divided about 60 per cent Republican and 40 per cent Democratic. The vice chairman is George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York, and the St. Louis member is Russell L. Dearmont. Others include Charles W. Cole, president of Amherst College; Chester Bowles, former American Ambassador to India; Erwin N. Griswold, dean of the Harvard Law School; Oscar Hammerstein II, song writer and theatrical producer; Meyer Kestnbaum, president of Hart, Schaffner & Marx now serving as a special assistant to President Eisenhower on government reorganization matters; Roger D. Lapham, former Mayor of San Francisco; John Lord O'Brian, Washington attorney, and Elmo Roper, advertising consultant.

Hoffman told reporters this week the Fund was prepared for any factual study by the Un-American Activities Committee or other congressional groups. He pointed out that the Fund is the only foundation of considerable size working exclusively in the area of civil liberties and that "it is a pioneer venture in uncharted and dangerous territory." He said all directors, when appointed, were warned that attempts at smears were inevitable.

THE CONTROVERSY between the Fund and its critics has many facets. Part of the criticism is personal and political against the Fund's officers, notably Hoffman and Hutchins; part is isolationism versus international co-operation; part is caused by different concepts of a citizen's constitutional rights and obligations, part—this is likely to increase in the future—to different approaches to the Negro question. Basically the controversy appears to be between those who want the people to have as much objective information as possible for working out current and future problems and those who believe their individual experiences and judgment are sufficient to determine what should and should not be done.

Hoffman said his work abroad and the apparent intolerance current in the early 1950s convinced him such a fund was needed.

"The struggle between the free world and the Communist world," he said, "is the most important fact of modern time.

"What has given America its strength, its greater material progress than any other nation in the past 175 years, has been the climate of freedom, created by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, which has given us more leaders in all fields than any other system of government. This environment has given our people a chance to grow and it must be kept for all our people. It is trite but true to say that we can only keep the United States strong by keeping it free. That means freedom for all of us—there can be, as President Eisenhower has said—no second-class citizens.

"This freedom includes freedom for an individual to discuss whatever he pleases. Too many subjects have been taboo because they are 'controversial.'

"Personally, I do not believe that Red China should be admitted into the United Nations but I do believe the subject should be discussed.

"We were shocked when one of the Fund's questionnaires revealed that one-third of the persons interviewed said they would deny the use of local halls for a discussion of Government operation of the railroads; one-half of them said they would not want a speaker to use a local hall for the discussion of atheism. The Fund believes in Justice Holmes's statement that the Constitution calls for the principle of free thought, including 'freedom for the thought that we hate'."

In following this philosophy, the Fund almost immediately aroused the ire of congressional "loyalty" investigators, especially for a $5000 award to the Friends Society for resisting local pressures to dismiss a librarian who had pleaded the Fifth Amendment in a congressional hearing. Another controversial issue was payment to Earl Browder, former head of the Communist party in the United States, for information to be used in a comprehensive study of Communist influences in major segments of American society. Within the next few years the Fund expects to publish a history of the Com-

Laws on 'Right to Work' Under Attack by Labor, But Backed by Business

State Statutes Are Aimed at Curbing Union Shop—Authorized by Taft-Hartley Act—Repeal Is Favored by Stevenson, Harriman and Kefauver—Hot Election Issue Seems to Be Shaping Up.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.

POWERFUL forces in the business community call them right-to-work laws. Organized labor calls them right-to-wreck laws. Regardless of terminology, state statutes which outlaw any form of labor-management contracts providing for compulsory union membership are shaping up as a major issue in the 1956 election.

Under the Taft-Hartley act of 1947 the closed shop contract, under which only union members could be hired, was banned, but the act permitted employers and unions to sign agreements under which new employes, not members of the union, could be required to join within a specified period or be dismissed.

The act went further, however, to provide that states, if they so elected, could enact laws banning even the union shop contracts. Seventeen states now have such statutes on their books.

ORGANIZED LABOR wants to get rid of these and fortify itself against any new ones. Trade and commerce associations representing employers are battling to save the existing statutes from repeal and extend the union shop ban to more states.

At a glance, the individual states would appear to be the battlefields. The fight, however, is spilling over into the field of national legislation. More than 20 bills were introduced in this session of Congress, at the behest of organized labor, to kill off the Taft-Hartley provision which authorizes the states to outlaw the union shop. Nothing has come of these bills this session and nothing will. The fight will be resumed vigorously, however, at the next session of Congress.

Hence, candidates for every office this year, from state legislatures right up to the presidency, will be caught in a pincer movement executed by the unions on the one hand and the union shop foes on the other. Candidates of both parties, as well as the national convention platform framers, will be subject to a virtual roll call on where they stand on the issue, a situation most candidates will not relish.

The opposing forces are politically and financially powerful. Organized labor is pushing its campaign through its myriad of state and local unions with the combined might of the AFL and CIO supplying brains, money and direction from the shiny new AFL-CIO headquarters in Washington.

A block away, in an equally shiny building, is located the nerve center of the anti-union-shop movement. It is the headquarters of the National Right-to-Work Committee, which has the support of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Farm Bureau Federation and other organizations of similar persuasion with respect to curbing union activity.

Fred A. Hartley Jr. was until recently president of the Right-to-Work Committee. He now is chairman of the advisory board. Hartley's association with the movement is understandable. As a Republican member of the House of Representatives from New Jersey he was co-author with the late Senator Robert A. Taft of the Taft-Hartley law. Hartley proposed curbs on unions much more drastic than those contained in the finished product.

The committee is reported to have about 5000 members—individual business men, business firms and workers, some of the latter being described as having been the victims of gross discrimination because of rebellion against union practices.

Individual contributions to the committee range from $1 to $400, while firms may kick in from $200 to $3000. Unlike the big national unions, which have their lobbyists registered under the law on Capitol Hill, neither the right-to-work group nor any of its officers is registered. Immunity from registering is based on the committee's contention that it is an educational group whose purpose is to "educate the people of America to the evils and dangers of a citizen's being forced to belong to any private organization to earn his or her living."

Candidates will be confronted with two diametrically opposed views on the real meaning of the state statutes against union shop contracts.

The Right-to-Work Committee, in its literature, through speakers and slick paper "information kits," propounds the doctrine that any form of contract which compels an employe to join a union in order to keep his job is "compulsory unionism" which is destructive of the individual's freedom.

The committee contends that unless such compulsion is banned by law, the nation's 160,000,000 workers—of whom two-thirds are non-union, eventually will be confronted with a situation in which they can hold a job only by sufferance of union leaders. Such a situation, the committee says, will constitute a socialist labor dictatorship, with political and economic domination of the country exercised by union officers.

In support of its contention that the statutes are right-to-wreck, not right-to-work laws, organized labor spokesmen state that the real purpose of the legislation is not to protect individual freedom but to impede union efforts to organize new industries and to deny unions the security of status which goes with a union shop contract.

They point out that unlike other voluntary organizations unions are required by law to represent all the workers in a given unit of employes, including those who are not members.

These latter they call the "free riders" who get all the union benefits but accept none of the obligations of membership.

They rely upon a statement of the late Samuel Gompers back in 1905 that "the union shop, in agreement with employers, is the application of the principle that those who enjoy the benefits and advantages resulting from an agreement shall also equally bear the moral and financial responsibilities involved."

The unions point to long-standing support for their position from such varied sources as Harry S. Truman, Alf M. Landon, Catholic Archbishop Rummel of New Orleans, and Rabbi E. J. Lipman, social action director for the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

In the upcoming campaign, the position of the Democrats on the issue will be considerably more discernible than that of the Republicans.

Among the active contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination—Adlai E. Stevenson, Senator Estes Kefauver and Gov. Averell Harriman—hostility to the union shop ban is unmuted.

According to Stevenson, "Labor laws must be fair to all: To the workers, to the employer and to the public; the mis-named and undemocratic state 'right-to-work' laws do not meet these tests."

Kefauver states bluntly: "These laws are not designed to protect the right to work. Far from it, their only purpose is to cripple and weaken labor's right to bargain collectively. These laws breed strife and confusion. They ought to go."

Harriman, advocating repeal of the Taft-Hartley provision authorizing the state bans, asserts that "the states are turning out union-busting laws wherever they can."

President Eisenhower has spoken directly on the state laws only once, on Dec. 15, 1954. He said he hadn't reached an "irrevocable decision" on whether he was for or against the right of the states to enact such laws.

"It is one that has been argued in front of me and until finally the revision of the Taft-Hartley act is taken up seriously by Congress and this thing exhaustively and completely argued out, I just don't know exactly what my decision will be," he said.

Mr. Eisenhower's secretary of Labor, James P. Mitchell, has spoken out against the anti-union shop laws and the late Martin Durkin, a Democrat, resigned as Labor Secretary reportedly because Mr. Eisenhower went back on a promise made at the time of his appointment that he would support legislation to take away state authority in the union shop field.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who as a Representative voted for the Taft-Hartley law, has been silent on the state statutes.

IN THIS FIGHT the unions recognize they must rely more on deeds of their own than the words of others. Hence, they plunged several months ago into a bitter political campaign in Louisiana. They used sweat and money in behalf of candidates for the legislature who promised to repeal Louisiana's anti-union shop law.

The pay-off came last week when union-supported legislators rammed a repealer bill through the legislature. Gov. Earl K. Long signed the bill yesterday.

States with "right-to-work" laws on their books are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

Maine, New Hampshire and Delaware had such laws but they were repealed in 1948 and 1949. Nevada will conduct a referendum in November on repealing its statute. But Washington and Montana will vote in the same month on passing such a law.

In Indiana and in Kansas, where Republican Gov. Fred Hall last year vetoed a "right-to-work" statute passed by the legislature, pressure from both sides is being applied in the Republican gubernatorial nomination campaigns, for forthright stands on the question by candidates.

Hence, the warning signals are up to candidates all over to start [illegible] their minds.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Way to Get Action

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

If the writer who signs herself "Mother" and others experiencing the same problem will telephone or write this citizens' Crime Commission and give the location of any establishment suspected of selling liquor to minors, said information will be funneled to the proper law-enforcement agencies and the establishment will be placed under surveillance so that successful criminal prosecution may be had.

JAMES W. CONNOR,
Operating Director,
St. Louis Crime Commission.

Only 2 Per Cent

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A resident of St. Louis has called our attention to a recent letter in this column. In it a reader asks why the banks of St. Louis pay so little interest on money in savings accounts and makes comparison with rates of interest paid in some other cities. The last paragraph of that letter states:

"A member of our family took all her money and transferred it to the Bank of America in California where she gets 4 per cent. How can they pay that?"

We feel that your subscriber has been misinformed, because Bank of America pays 2 per cent on regular savings deposits and has done so for several years. In fact, by regulation of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, national banks and all other members of the Federal Reserve system are limited to a maximum of 2½ per cent.

This is considered by the Federal Reserve Board to be the highest rate consistent with the safety provided by sound savings bank investment policy.

HARRY R. SMITH,
Vice President,
Bank of America.
San Francisco.

Medicine and Politics

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The surgeon who wrote anonymously as "St. Louis M.D." for professional reasons, to clarify certain aspects of the ailment for which President Eisenhower recently underwent an operation, submitted some interesting details and opinions.

Although this surgeon neither attended the President nor was present at the operation, he ventures to dispute the findings and opinions of the eminent medical doctors who have been attending the President.

Our local M.D. has made some unfavorable predictions concerning Mr. Eisenhower's future health and life expectancy which might raise a grave doubt regarding Mr. Eisenhower's physical competency to serve another term as President.

Could it be, perchance, this learned surgeon is a Democrat, with the coming election in mind?

BERT A. DOERING.

Perhaps President Eisenhower would be more interested in promoting federal health insurance legislation if he had to pay for medical care at the same rate as the rest of us.

Recently two members of our family went to the doctor's office for routine check-ups. Bill: $85.

President Eisenhower has just had an operation for a non-service connected illness. Five doctors were in attendance. He occupied a five-room hospital suite; his wife, a two-room suite. Total bill: For 15 days hospitalization, including all medical expenses, $39. C.W.S.

Tried and Condemned

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have come to Missouri to study theater and related arts at one of your famous universities.

Shortly after my arrival, I was surprised to learn that the State Board of Education has decreed that the drama is no longer to be considered a fine art in the curriculum of the schools in this state.

Perhaps there are reasons for such an arbitrary exclusion which are not evident to those outside the jurisdiction of the board.

However weighty those reasons may be, it would appear to a stranger that Missouri has taken a stand which neither history nor experience warrants.

If drama be not a fine art, let us destroy the Greek tragedies, burn our copies of Shakespeare, and consign Moliere to a similar end.

Let all contemporary playwrights and actors prepare their work for the oblivion of mediocrity, at least in Missouri. For within the confines of this fair state, the members of the Board of Education have tried and condemned dramatic art as unfit for association with other branches of the fine arts.

A DRAMA TEACHER FROM BOSTON.

How the Other Half Lives

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I could hardly believe my eyes when I read of the serious drouth conditions in 11 counties in northwest Missouri.

I live in Washington county and have seven acres of good hay, and can't even get it cut by giving it away.

We have had so much rain that the farmers can't get the hay off the ground. When you tell these people about reading of the drouth in those counties they think you are having a brainstorm.

It just goes to show that one half of Missouri doesn't know how the other half lives. HELEN TATE.

Losing the Peaceful Atom?

Congress is completing an agonizing reappraisal of an atomic-power policy that has collapsed. It left the development of commercial atomic power up to private enterprise when it enacted the Atomic Energy Act after long debate two years ago. Since then the fruits of that policy have been nil. Worse still, there are no firm prospects.

This would not be so bad if the development of atomic electricity were entirely a matter of business and economics. It is far more than that. There must be commercially-feasible atomic reactors, as yet nonexistent, before the proposed 12-nation U.N. nuclear-power pact can take on any practical meaning. This pact is an outcome of a project initiated by President Eisenhower three years ago with the ideal of spreading the benefits of peaceful atomic power world-wide.

In what country will a commercially practicable atomic reactor first be developed? Whatever country it is, it will thus take the leadership of the world in the production of atomic-electric power. Other countries will look to it for their reactors. If the world market for atomic reactors were lost to the Soviet Union it would be a catastrophe to the free world, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, Dr. Willard Libby, warned three months ago.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union has announced a commercial-scale atomic power plant to be put into operation this year. Great Britain will place its first large atomic power plant in operation in October. France expects to have its first large reactor running next year. Not a single commercial-scale atomic power plant is being built in the United States by private enterprise, which insisted so vociferously two years ago, and with such glowing promises, that the job should be left up to it. There is not even any such plant directly in sight. The only large reactor going up in this country is Government-financed. It is expected to be completed about the same time as the French reactor.

In this dilemma of our nation—and of the entire free world—Senator Gore of Tennessee has been doing the same kind of statesmanlike yeoman work that Senator Douglas of Illinois did earlier on the natural gas issue. He has introduced a bill for the construction of six commercial-scale atomic reactors by a combination of private and Federal enterprise. The task is so great, he says, that the labors of all will be required.

Why does not the sound sense of this approach commend itself to all members of Congress? It has been shown that private enterprise alone cannot—indeed Senator Gore says that in fairness to its investors it should not—carry out so tremendous and speculative a venture.

That the venture should and must be pushed to success is generally recognized. Standing in the way are only a prejudice and a fear. A prejudice against participation by the Federal Government in the development of any kind of electric energy, atomic or otherwise—a fear of an "atomic TVA."

To allay this fear Commissioner Thomas E. Murray of the AEC has proposed that the reactors should be placed at the commission's production plants to supply them with power, "thus eliminating the issue of public versus private power." But whether or not some such compromise is agreed upon, the counsels of inaction cannot long continue to be allowed to prevail.

As Senator Potter of Michigan has observed in the Senate debate, the very industrial survival of the United States may depend upon what is done toward putting atomic energy to work now. It is not pleasant to contemplate the possibility that, as inventive ingenuity progressively lowers the costs of atomic power, this country may find itself unable to hold its own in power costs with competing industrial countries. But we must realize that we have marked far too much time already.

Fine Tradition to Carry On

For the second time in less than a year the 10-state Mississippi River Scenic Highway Commission must seek a new head.

Albert P. Greensfelder, of St. Louis, who was long the chief sponsor of the idea of a scenic route from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico, died a year ago. Last fall Dr. Howard W. Trovillion of Godfrey, Ill., was elected "pilot" to succeed Mr. Greensfelder. That Dr. Trovillion would carry on the work as it should be done was clear from his successful labors for the McAdams highway along Alton Lake and his persistent efforts in behalf of the scheduled Illinois State Park opposite the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

With Dr. Trovillion's recent death at the age of 57 still other hands will need to take up the reins for this worthy regional project. In this group of lovers of the Mississippi Valley and its potentialities as an attraction for visitors surely there are others ready to carry on the work.

The examples of Albert Greensfelder and Howard Trovillion ought to be enough to assure fullest success.

Softly Along the Road

Walter de la Mare made a wonderful lot of magic with words in his 83 years. As long as the English language is spoken, or read, or even delved into by scholarly antiquarians, the world will be the richer for his poetry.

His life should be an inspiration for all slow starters. Young Walter did not go to college, and from 17 to 35 he worked as a bookkeeper in the London office of an oil company. At that point, with his three score and ten half spent, he received a small grant and annual pension from the British Government. It was public money well employed. With that meager but adequate aid, Walter de la Mare embarked on a literary career productive of more than a score of books—poetry, short stories, novels, retold fairy tales, a play. Three years ago Queen Elizabeth named him a member of the Order of Merit, an honor reserved for no more than 24 living persons of special eminence.

De la Mare was by nature a mystic, by technique a symbolist. "Haunted by questions no man answered yet," he followed a "stubborn, desperate quest to conjure life, love, wonder into words." There is music, bewitching and other-worldly, to all his best poems. Few poets have ever used the rhythms of English as flexibly, with almost unbelievable effect, as did de la Mare in "The Listeners," a mood-evoking fragment akin to Coleridge's "In Xanadu did Kubla Khan. . . ."

One of his great loves was for children, and many of his poems and tales were written expressly for them. Observing a few years ago that children were astonishingly kind to the old, he said: "Catch a good specimen alone, an intelligent, imaginative one, and you won't pine for other company."

The loveliest of all his poems for children, to our taste, out of a book entrancingly entitled "Peacock Pie," is "Nod." It tells about the old shepherd going "softly along the road of evening, in a twilight dim with rose," while "his drowsy flock streams on before him, their fleeces charged with gold." It is a lullaby song, though it never says so, and even a middle-aged eyelid must grow a little heavy along about the second stanza. And as it ends, it might be speaking of the man who wrote it, now that his life is done:

His are the quiet steeps of dreamland,
The waters of no-more-pain;
His ram's bell rings 'neath an arch of stars,
"Rest, rest, and rest again."

That Geographical Balance

People who speculate about such things are beginning to conjure up vice presidential possibilities for various possible presidential candidates. And as always they lay heavy stress on geographical "balance" as a qualification. The No. 2 man by tradition is supposed to strengthen the ticket if he comes from a different part of the country from the No. 1 man.

But does he? The history of presidential elections since 1900 contains little to support the theory. During this period 28 vice presidential candidates have made the race, but only three of them could boast that their party had carried their own states while it was losing nationally. These three were Sparkman in 1952, Bricker in 1944, and Robinson in 1928. Since Sparkman and Robinson were Democrats from states which have never voted Republican anyway, it is highly unlikely that their states voted Democratic in 1928 and 1952 just out of local pride in the No. 2 candidate.

In effect, then, only one case out of 28 can be cited to show that a vice presidential candidate may help to carry a particular state or section which the presidential candidate would not have carried anyway. On the other hand, there have been two cases—Wallace in 1940 and Marshall in 1916—where the ticket won nationally but failed to carry the vice presidential candidate's state.

It is true that in 16 cases, the ticket did carry the vice presidential nominee's state, and in 12 cases it did not. But the decisive factor appears to have been not so much the identity of the vice presidential nominee as the No. 1 man's national appeal. Who would say, for example, that Mr. Nixon, rather than Gen. Eisenhower, carried California in 1952? Experience shows that it is not geographical "balance" between the two candidates which makes winning tickets, but something else entirely.

By and large, people vote for or against the head of the ticket, and their decision on that score is affected very little by where the second man comes from.

All of which suggests that one of these days one of the parties might work up its courage to make a vice presidential selection on one basis only—that is, on the basis of the nominee's fitness to succeed to the presidency. Perhaps this, far more than geographical "availability," would persuade voters to give weight to the qualifications of the No. 2 men as they made up their minds between the No. 1 men.

It Was Not a Parade

If you thought you saw a parade the other day and are worried that you missed the proclamation of some new holiday, be at ease. You just happened to see a pair of touring Russians. Of course, they were followed by FBI agents, and the agents were followed by reporters—and for all we know, the reporters were followed by investigators for a few congressional committees, and these may have been followed by the "private eyes" of tip-sheet and "inside dope" publishers.

These things can go on and on. But it is our firm position that no procession is a parade without flags, bands and drum majorettes—especially not without drum majorettes. The Russians are not of a rank to call for a parade. They are two of the lesser attaches of the Soviet embassy who were on an ordinary sightseeing tour of Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Missouri with the full blessing of the State Department.

But an eye was kept on them. After all, their interest in parking meters may have been feigned. They may have been trying to get the low-down on how to start dust storms and heat waves. Anyway, they were pretty testy by the time they reached St. Louis—and probably good facsimiles of American tourists in Russia.

Task for the Youth Commission

The most sensible approach to the increase in youthful crime here is to search for the causes and remedies, and that is what the city and county are doing in creating a metropolitan youth commission. An aldermanic committee has approved a bill authorizing the Mayor to name nine commissioners. St. Louis county will do the same.

Mayor Tucker has said that the kind of young hoodlums who attack innocent people and commit highway outrages should be given no more consideration than ordinary criminals. The law is plain on that point and it is also plain in dividing juvenile and adult offenders at the age of 17.

But as the Mayor also observed, only a small segment of the population is involved in youthful crimes. The public's greatest responsibility now is to prevent criminality or delinquency from spreading among that great majority of young people who have not been involved in either. This is not principally a task for police or courts. It is the task which the youth commission should undertake.

St. Louis naturally is outraged by the series of vicious beatings and other crimes committed by young toughs. But neither angry reprisals nor a Pollyanna approach will solve the problem. Let law enforcement be stern against youthful outrages, but let the youth commission and the grand juries search for a constructive approach to better youth training.

CIA Outside Its Mission

As head of the Central Intelligence Agency, Allen W. Dulles has consistently declined to give estimates to Congress on developments in Soviet Russia. Mr. Dulles's position has been that the CIA should stick to its business of collecting intelligence data for the State and Defense Departments.

Yet Mr. Dulles has now breached his own rule by giving out a TV interview on Russia's capabilities with Representative Ostertag of New York. Senators Anderson of New Mexico and Jackson of Washington want to know why. The inquiry is entirely fair. If Mr. Dulles cannot give estimates to Congress, he ought to keep his agency off the air. If he is going to comment publicly on developments in Soviet Russia, he should have no hesitation in reporting to Congress.

However it is viewed, this was a slip from the standpoint of CIA.

Allegory for a Small World

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Americans cannot hide all their interests within their borders on a rapidly shrinking planet, says former Ambassador to India; he argues for foreign policy of new enlightenment, and tells an allegory of the Red Death to illustrate his appeal.

Chester Bowles in 'American Politics in a Revolutionary World,' Godkin Lectures Published by Harvard University Press, 1956

The majority in both parties which has supported our foreign policies over the past fifteen years has thus far largely conceived of them as a series of arrangements which will fend off the aggressive and intrusive forces in the world outside and leave us free to work out our own American destiny in our own way. Implicit in such a concept is the persistent conviction that foreign affairs, except when war is imminent, are largely a marginal consideration.

Now on this rapidly shrinking planet, which we share with the Russians, Chinese, and others, the traditional quick, total solutions which we Americans have always demanded in foreign affairs are simply not available.

Chester Bowles

If we are to strengthen our national security, expand our influence, and play the role in world affairs for which our history has prepared us, in the face of the political, economic, and ideological challenge which is now being generated by Moscow, we shall need to consider our relations with the world from a far broader perspective.

The World as a Community

Out of this broader perspective we must hope that a new majority consensus will emerge which recognizes the fact that we live in a world that is a community and which is prepared responsibly to support policies from that premise. If this consensus fails to develop for want of communication, or effective leadership, or inadequate political organization, or for whatever reason, or if it develops too late to be effective, the implications for our own and for future generations of Americans are not pleasant to contemplate.

The following allegory may highlight my meaning:

When plague threatens a community, its more fortunate members, like Boccaccio's lords and ladies, or those of Poe in his tale of the Red Death, are easily persuaded to retire to the manor house. They can provision it as for a siege, strengthen the walls, deepen the moat, station retainers at the gates, and reach agreements with others of a similar mind to join in keeping the contaminated at a distance. Within the castle the lords and ladies may pleasurably and even usefully employ their time for a while in savoring the concentrated riches of their little world or in improving its arts and sciences.

Quandary of the Manor House

Yet the community will find itself facing some difficult questions. How many will be admitted to the manor house and who are they to be? How high are the walls to be built and how fast? How many retainers are to be mounted at the gates? What kind of arrangement with and what compensation for those who man the outer barriers?

Each of these decisions is a difficult one, involving not only conflicting pressures on the emotions and sympathies of the decision-makers but nice calculations of risk against gain. For as the company is expanded, as more workmen are hired, as more retainers are armed, and more allies contracted for, the possibility grows that some of them may themselves become infected.

Moreover, each new person is a charge upon the limited resources which can be stored in the manor house, and if there are too many mouths to feed, the provisions may not outlast the course of the plague in the countryside. And may not the workmen and retainers, if they become sufficiently numerous and assured, turn upon the lords and ladies and destroy them?

Since the original decision as to how best to achieve security against the plague was itself irresponsible, these subsidiary decisions needed to implement the plan will become steadily more difficult. No doubt there will be repeated assertions within the castle walls about the necessity of "preserving our way of life." But these cannot supply the overriding sense of moral purpose which alone can bring ordinary men consistently to subordinate their personal, short-run wants to the demands of a larger end.

'Dirty, Costly Work to Be Done'

Ultimately this program for survival will almost certainly prove self-defeating. The Red Death may himself appear at the feast, as he did in Poe's story, despite the care that was taken to exclude him. Even if he does not, the lords and ladies, upon their return to the wasted countryside, will find that the plague has eroded the substance and energy of the community upon which they had assumed their more favored position rested securely.

The second possible course of action is to seek to improve the public health standards of the community as a whole. This is by far the more arduous path. Pleasures and immediate advantages must be foregone in some part. There is hard, dirty, costly work to be done.

The first thing to be noted is that this cannot be done to the community or even for the community by the lords and ladies, operating from a position of lofty privilege. It must be a common effort undertaken by most of the community's members with all of the vision and vigor of a truly creative endeavor.

To Usher in a New Society

From the very outset the lords and ladies must face the fact that no matter how inspired their leadership or generous their contribution, they can expect little or no gratitude from the community as a whole. Indeed, as its wealthiest members, they will be looked upon for some time with continuing, although perhaps diminishing distrust. Nor do they even have the assurance that their enterprise will succeed, for the plague may yet come in spite of all they can do.

They and their associates can only know that in this community effort lies whatever chance there may be for life, health and vigor; the other way, none. However, if the chance pays off, they may find that they have achieved far more than survival. They will have forged the beginnings of a society in which everyone can live with pride and good hope. And they will find, too, that they have begun to create the machinery, the loyalties, and the confidence for attacking with some success the new and perhaps even more subtle and difficult problems that are sure to face the community in the future.

LOCOMOTIVE ON SLED RUNNERS.

A locomotive on sled runners, one of the curiosities of railroad history, was built many years ago in Scotland for use over ice in Russia between St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) and Kronstadt. The front part of the engine rested on double runners which could be swiveled right or left. In the rear were two driving wheels studded with sharp spikes. The engine is reputed to have run over the ice at a speed of 18 miles an hour.

Lincoln Kirstein in The Nation

By here, where once we came Along this selfsame road
Back to our base and field
Perennial pollens yield
A rugged rusty fame.

Burdock, hard burr and rose,
Sweet wildrose, dusty burr,
Thistle and aster wild,—
Past here, the waiting child
Ambushed some noisy boys

To ask: Where are you bound?
Where bound indeed: where, where?
They did not know, nor we
Who know more than they knew
Have lost more than they found.

This chapel scarce a church
They could ignore and did.
To them—old heap of stones,
Odd shelter for some bones
Or pigeons on a perch.

Thin and unshadowed shone
Poor panes of window-glass;
But color? No, nor glint
Of richness, gleam or tint,
No texture and no tone.

Why should they stop to pray?
They had their way to win
And flew far, headlong fast
Reckless and randy past
Broad daylight and bright day.

All gone. Some gone for good.
Some bad, some still alive
And those alive, with grace
Have not forgot this place:
We've done the least we could.

We've stuck a window here:
Pure color for clear flesh,
All penetrating fire
To glorify the choir
Or sanctify our fear.

What are these colors fine
That strain the sun, shine clean
In citron, rosy ice,
Mulberry paradise,
Sharp wintergreen or wine?

Their fire is all our air
That was our airman all.
Our window claims he's here
In warm translucent cheer
And gilt, translucent hair.

Blond as the licking sun,
Rosy for leather cheek,
Frank mirror-eye, and green
The candid earth and keen
His fury in his fun.

Glass is sand, sun and lead
Fixed in a shattered sheet.
All day our star is sight;
At sunset, shuttered night
All dull, dust-shot and dead.

In four fierce sheaves of fire
An elemental shock
Has compassed every air
Boxed cardinal to square
Sky, ocean, flame and mire.

Fuse us our triune saint
Who is boy, bomb and blast,
Brittle his every arm;
Tense still our hard alarm,
Our strenuous complaint.

For glass, send us some sun,
Blend blood and bone a hymn
To salve our doubled nerve
Preserving us to serve
The wonder in a one.

Democrats Straining to Force Hell's Canyon Bill Through to Provide Major Campaign Issue

Fight Over Dam Sites Gives Party a Strong 'Give-Away' Argument and Will Be Important Factor in Congress Races in Columbia Basin States.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, June 23.

HELL'S CANYON emerged this week as a major election-year campaign issue. The proposal for a huge federal dam to block off the nation's biggest remaining natural reservoir suddenly has become a real and imminent possibility after lying dormant nearly a year.

Democratic strategists forced the Hell's Canyon dam bill out of committee in the Senate. They hope to clear it next week for debate in the House also, although a Republican walk-out blocked their effort to do so last Tuesday.

Behind these maneuvers is an apparent decision by Democratic leadership to make an all-out fight to enact the bill before Congress goes home next month.

When Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, introduced the bill in March 1955, one of his aids was asked what were its chances. He replied that the bill had a good chance if the Democrats decided to make it a party issue and marshal their full strength behind it. That decision now appears to have been made.

Much to Gain.

The Democrats have much to gain by making a strong fight for a high federal dam in place of the three small private dams which the Federal Power Commission has authorized the Idaho Power Co. to build on the same stretch of the Snake river between Oregon and Washington.

Most obviously, they can give a strong boost to Morse's campaign for re-election. His Republican opponent is Douglas McKay, Salem Cadillac dealer and former Secretary of the Interior, who reversed the Department's position in May 1953, withdrawing its long-standing opposition to the private power company's application before the FPC.

Oregon's other Senator, Richard L. Neuberger (Dem.), made McKay one of his chief targets in his successful campaign two years ago. He regards conservation and public power issues as decisive in his unexpected and narrow victory.

Morse is using the same issues, but he wants to be able to point to a strong Democratic record on Hell's Canyon as proof that the Democrats mean what they say about full development of the nation's resources.

Issue in Washington, Too.

With control of the Senate one of the chief prizes at stake in the 1956 elections, the outcome in a single state or two could be decisive. In Washington state, Senator Warren G. Magnuson (Dem.), also is up for re-election. He, too, is a strong supporter of federal development of Hell's Canyon, and his opponent is Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, who has identified himself with the Idaho Power Co. side of the controversy.

Through the nation as a whole, the Democrats see Hell's Canyon as an issue on which they can portray themselves as the friends of the consumer and the protectors of posterity, and label the Republicans as the advocates of more profits for the big corporations.

Democratic "give-away" charges were canceled out to some extent when President Eisenhower vetoed the natural gas bill last February. His veto saved federal rate control over natural gas producers, even though he explained he favored the bill's basic objectives and rejected it because of "arrogant" lobbying for its passage. Significantly, Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson and Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn both backed the natural gas bill, although some other Democrats condemned it as one of the worst of the "give-aways."

Appeal by Butler.

Democratic Chairman Paul M. Butler emphasized the importance of Hell's Canyon in letters last August to Johnson, Rayburn and other party leaders in both houses.

"Our campaign attack on the Administration giveaway at Hell's Canyon is meaningless if the Democratic Congress has not moved in the Eighty-Fourth Congress to stop it," he wrote. "This action is vital in the election of Democratic Senators and Representatives in the four Columbia basin states (Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho) and will be an effective issue in other sections of the country . . . This issue is hot in Oregon and will be a vital factor in the re-election of Senator Morse and Representative Edith Green (Dem.), Oregon."

Last November, Johnson included Hell's Canyon in his 13-point "program with a heart" for adoption by Congress in 1956 and said the list was the result of talks with Democratic leaders including practically all of the men being considered for the Democratic presidential nomination. Rayburn announced his general acceptance of the program the next day.

Stressed By Stevenson.

Adlai E. Stevenson, who had mentioned Hell's Canyon only casually in the 1952 presidential campaign, gave it great emphasis in his speeches before the Oregon primary election last month. He quoted approvingly Senator Morse's statement that Hell's Canyon "is a symbol of the clearcut difference between the Democratic and Republican parties in this election year." Stevenson said it was symbolic of what he called the fundamental issue in the 1956 campaign: "Whether the Federal Government shall be run by a single interest for the benefit of that single interest — Big Business — or whether it shall be run by the people and for the good of all people."

In a speech at St. Helens, Ore., Stevenson said Hell's Canyon was perhaps the best example of the Eisenhower Administration's so-called "partnership" policy in action. He went on:

"There the Eisenhower Administration has turned over to a private utility the last great dam site on the North American continent—a dam site that is the keystone to the program to develop the whole of the Columbia basin.

Three Dams or One.

"'Partnership' in this case means three small dams to be built by the Idaho Power Co.—which takes its name from your neighboring state but sends its profits back to its owners in New England.

"Federal development would mean a single high dam that would triple the hydro-electric output and at the same time provide additional irrigation, flood control, downstream power production and protection for wildlife. And it would do something else, too—it would provide power at far lower cost to the farmers, manufacturers and home-owners of the area."

The Hell's Canyon bill had been approved by Senate and House subcommittees last summer, but it had been stymied in this session until Democratic leaders took two actions:

1. In the Senate, they transferred Senator Russell B. Long (Dem.), Louisiana, who had opposed the bill, off the Senate Interior Committee and replaced him with Senator W. Kerr Scott (Dem.), North Carolina, one of the bill's 30 sponsors. This gave the committee a pro-Hell's Canyon majority for the first time and enabled it to report the bill out.

2. In the House, they saw to it that Representative J. Edgar Chenoweth (Rep.), Colorado, was persuaded to come out in favor of Hell's Canyon in the Interior Committee in return for assurance of favorable Rules Committee action on the Frying Pan-Arkansas project in Colorado.

Republicans Walk Out.

Five Republicans walked out of the House Interior Committee room last Tuesday, when the bill was up for consideration, and prevented a quorum from being obtained. But the Democrats believe they have enough votes, even without the Republicans, to make a quorum next Tuesday and clear the measure for debate on the floor.

Whether the measure can be pushed through both houses in this session depends largely on how much pressure is brought to bear. Backers of Hell's Canyon believe conservationist and public power groups throughout the country are sufficiently aroused to bring the necessary pressure.

Fund for Republic Turns to Race Relations

munist party in the United States, to make studies on Communism and anti-Communism, and Communism in the labor movement, in religion, in government, education, literature, mass media and in opinion-making groups.

With "McCarthyism" in an eclipse, the Fund in granting more money than ever before to the field it calls "equality before the law and equality of opportunity." This is the racial and minority group problem, in the North as well as in the South. In this field the Fund has made its largest cumulative grant, $455,000, to the Southern Regional Council, with headquarters in Atlanta and interracial boards and staffs in 12 states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Hoffman said the Fund started its school desegregation studies before the Supreme Court decisions in 1954. The Fund's first president was Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, who resigned from the House to take the position, and, according to Hoffman, he anticipated the Court's decisions.

Case resigned from the Fund to run for the Senate. After a close contest, he was elected. Hutchins succeeded him.

Report.

The report made public this week by Hutchins showed the amounts allotted to various groups for racial studies. Many of the awards were to church groups. Hoffman told reporters that any such group that could produce a practicable program for betterment of race relations could get a grant from the Fund. Typical of the way the funds have been allotted were: $176,500 to the American Friends Service, for educational work in the District of Columbia and for job opportunities for Negroes in North Carolina and Texas and for an Indian program in the southwest; $50,000 to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's legal defense and education fund; $100,000 to Vanderbilt University for a bi-monthly race relations law reporter publication; $50,000 to the National Urban League to expand employment opportunities for Negroes in the South; $23,000 to the Catholic Interracial Council of Chicago to reduce racial discord—mostly over housing—in Chicago, and lesser amounts to other religious organizations to support interracial conferences.

The Fund has expended $195,221 during the past three years on television and radio programs. One of these projects is a documentary film in preparation for television use showing how St. Louis has met the problem of segregation in its schools. Another project is a film "A Date With Liberty," based on Justice William O. Douglas's book, "An Almanac of Liberty." The Fund continues to distribute prints of Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" interview with J. Robert Oppenheimer, the atomic physicist who was dismissed from Government service as a "security risk."

Achievements.

Hoffman said that it was impossible to point to specific achievements by the Fund through its millions during the past years. He say there have been many intangible benefits, a change in local and even national climates for greater freedom of discussion, more intelligent drafting of Government regulations on loyalty procedures, more interest by the public, especially church people, in racial questions.

The Fund was originally set up as a self-liquidating corporation which would go out of existence when the $15,000,000 Ford Foundation grant has been expended. Within the past three years it has made outlays of almost $5,500,000 and expenditures are becoming greater as the plans made during the past years are being put into operation. The recent report by Hutchins concedes that some mistakes were made but Hoffman, in his foreword, summing up the three-year record of this controversial organization, concluded: "Despite the occasional and inevitable mistake or failure, the board believes that the work of the Fund has been urgently needed and well done."

Soviet Political Jolts Compared With a Continuing Earthquake

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW
(Copyright, 1956, by the London Observer.)
LONDON, June 23.

ANY COMMENT on the state of the Soviet Union and international Communism at this moment can be nothing more than a hastily scrawled footnote to history on the run.

To attempt at this stage a reasoned analysis of what will happen next and why is impossible, because nobody has the least idea of what will happen next, not even the chief actors in this drama, the Soviet leaders themselves.

We find ourselves in the middle of an earthquake. We do not know how long the earthquake will continue, how far it will spread, or how violent its convulsions will become. All we know is that the ground that seemed so firm a short time ago is heaving. Lofty edifices and colossal monuments have toppled. But as soon as the situation appears to be stabilizing itself the movement starts off again.

Shows in the Upheaval.

Thus, the Stalinist leader of the largest Communist party in Western Europe, Palmiro Togliatti, reproaches the Moscow leaders with insufficiency and declares that the Soviet system can no longer serve as a model for the Communist parties of other lands.

The Daily Worker in New York querulously demands proper explanation of what is going on from the great men in Moscow; the Daily Worker in London apologizes to its readers for not being able to print the Khrushchev indictment before that "useful service" had been performed by the London Observer. Howard Fast, the American novelist who went to jail for his Stalinish convictions, has broken into an impassioned repudiation of his own past uttered in tones of bitter self-reproach.

"Where is Howard Fast?" I member so well how at cultural and peace congresses in Stalin's lifetime this question would be boomed out by speaker after speaker in tones of menace, until it became a monotonous chant symbolizing the gulf between the two sides.

"Where is Howard Fast?" the retort would come automatically, and the thought of Mr. Fast in prison in America was supposed to erase from your mind the thought of millions in the labor camps of Siberia.

"Where is Howard Fast?" Where indeed . . . ? Does Fast himself know now? Does anybody know? And where, if it comes to that, is Nikita Khrushchev?

There, at the very center of the phantasmagoric upheaval, he stands, the so familiar, garrulous, adroit and astonishingly tough little figure. To all appearances it was he who started the convulsion and still, I suppose, millions all over the world, believe that he can put an end to it at will, when the political landscape has rearranged itself to his liking. But to my mind one thing is certain; and that is that the man who still stands, sturdily upright and defiant at the heart of it all, is no more in control of the situation than King Canute was in control of the tides.

He cannot control that upheaval. He cannot tell it when to stop. He did not even start it. His celebrated speech, his denunciation of Stalin, was not a cause but a response.

Masses Beginning to Stir.

To change the metaphor, history, its forward march pent up for too long by the legendary Georgian, has broken loose in Russia. The most that any Soviet leader can do is to seek to ride the great wave which has its origin in a profound upheaval—the slow, blind, unco-ordinated, irresistible pressure of the inarticulate Russian people stretching themselves, half incredulously, and beginning to find their strength.

Khrushchev is not seeking to dam that wave. He is trying to ride it until its first impulse is extended. It is very much in question whether he will succeed. I believe that we are only at the beginning of a drama and a historical process whose end nobody can guess.

Neutralism Has Various Causes In Different Asian Countries

Fear, Self-Interest, Religious Scruples, Yearning for Self-Improvement All Contribute—Neutrals Are Democratic.

By KEYES BEECH
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1956.)
HONG KONG, June 23.

THERE SEEMS to be considerable confusion on both sides of the Pacific on the subject of neutrality or, as it is sometimes called, neutralism.

America's slow and painful adjustment to the fact that not everybody is willing to "stand up and be counted" has been welcomed by Asian neutrals, condemned by out and out anti-Communists.

At the same time, contradictory statements by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles on whether neutrality is good or bad, has left many Asians wondering where the United States really stands.

Whether neutrality is good or bad in United States eyes is beside the point so far as the Asian neutrals are concerned. They are more interested in what is good for them.

Another thing frequently overlooked is that Asian neutrality is compounded of many things that have no direct relation to the basic struggle between Communism and democracy.

Factors That Influence Asians.

Among the factors that influence Asian neutrals are fear, self-interest, suspicion, religious scruples against war, and a yearning for self-improvement in which war has no place.

Some countries are neutral for different reasons. India, for example, is big but weak and divided. Therefore, rather than invite the enmity of either East or West, India has chosen to remain neutral. If India seems pro-Communist, it may be because the Communists have embraced Indian neutrality while the United States has only grudgingly accepted it.

India's small neutralist neighbor, Burma, is motivated by the sound instinct of self-preservation. Burma, whose political sympathies lie with the West, still lives next door to Red China. There are 18,000,000 Burmese, 600,000,000 Chinese.

As a simple matter of arithmetic, it behooves Burma to get along with China. For Burma to join a Western military alliance would be about as foolish as for South Viet Nam to reject American military help when it is faced with the constant threat of Communist aggression from the North.

Some Oppose Alliances.

Some neutrals, like Indonesia, are simply suspicious of any kind of alliance. In no Asian country do the fires of anti-colonialism still burn so fiercely as Indonesia.

Cambodia's neutrality has two motivating factors. One is a desire to maintain its independence from any kind of foreign domination, Western or Communist. The other is selfish, to extract as much foreign aid as possible from both the West and the Communist bloc.

Asian leaders listen politely to American warnings that Communist peace avowals are not to be trusted, but they are more polite than interested. It is hard to find a responsible Japanese official who really believes that his country is in danger of Communist invasion, despite the presence of Russian bases only a few miles away.

And there is a strong belief in Japan, which the Communists and leftwing Socialists are careful to cultivate, that American military bases there do more to provoke attack than to safeguard Japan.

Burma, despite its long, unguarded border on Red China, does not fear a Chinese armed invasion. Besides, if such an invasion did come there is very little Burma could do about it except appeal to the United Nations.

Two Developments.

Two historic developments have contributed immeasurably to the growth of neutralism in the under-developed countries of Asia.

One is the "smiles" technique of Soviet Russia. True or false, the Russians are telling Asians what they want to hear and to believe—that they need not fear war. The United States tries to tell them what they don't want to hear—that they must fear war.

The second development is the H-bomb. Nehru's cry that in the atomic age the world must choose between "coexistence or codestruction" has a great appeal to many Asians. Even President Eisenhower, Asians will tell you, has said that in the age of the H-bomb war is unthinkable.

If that is the case, Asian neutralists argue, what is the use of military alliances?"

Perhaps unconsciously yielding to the inevitable, the United States has done much to undermine its own system of military alliances in Asia.

It did this by granting economic aid to Ceylon, which has been selling rubber, a highly strategic commodity, to Red China since 1953. India, the world's leading champion of neutrality, has received nearly half a billion dollars worth of American aid in the last five years.

In view of this, Pakistan, a member of both the Southeast Asia alliance and the Baghdad pact, may logically inquire what it has to gain by risking Communist wrath by lining up with the West. Especially since Pakistan wasn't mad at either the Russians or the Chinese to begin with.

When all the sound and fury on the subject of neutrality has subsided, two things are worth noting. One is that the United States, which today objects so strenuously to neutrality, officially legislated itself into a state of neutrality between two world wars.

Another is that the Asian neutrals aren't really neutral after all. All the leading neutrals — India, Burma, Ceylon, Indonesia — chose democratic forms of government when they got independence from colonial rule.

MARSHAL JUIN RESIGNS NATO SUB-COMMAND

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1956.

PARIS, June 23—Marshal Alphonse-Pierre Juin, commander in chief of Allied forces in Central Europe, has informed Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther he will resign his functions in October.

Gen. Gruenther is supreme commander of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces in Europe and recently announced his own resignation.

Juin gave his notice in the course of a private conversation at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe, on the day Gen. Gruenther took off for Washington June 20. He gave no reason except "personal ones."

Juin has often been a target of criticism even among his SHAPE colleagues for meddling too much in his country's politics.

Besides his high military command at SHAPE, France's only living marshal is a member of the Supreme War Council and sits in the French Academy.

As a marshal of France, the 68-year-old Juin will remain on the list for active service as long as he lives.

Reading and Writing

Intimate Portrait of H. L. Mencken

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

H. L. MENCKEN: A PORTRAIT FROM MEMORY, by Charles Angoff. (Thomas Yoseloff, 236 pgs., $3.95.)

H. L. MENCKEN'S great reputation as a polemical writer owed much, if not everything to his mastery of the language. The written word with him had all the spontaneity and raciness of the best ad lib conversation but with none of the latter's imprecision, looseness of construction or frequent obscurity. He wrote lucidly, in short and he wrote vividly. The substance of what he wrote, however, was often flawed at the source by a heterodox dogmatism that he refused to qualify.

Much of this comes out in Charles Angoff's "H. L. Mencken" which is sub-titled "A Portrait From Memory." As managing editor of the American Mercury Angoff was in daily contact with Mencken for several years and what he has to say about his former boss bears all the marks of accurate and conscientious reporting. In fact the many off-the-cuff monologues that he attributes to Mencken could be inserted with scarcely a change into Mencken's written works without seeming out of character.

BECAUSE of the similarity between much of Mencken's writings and the spoken dialogue that Angoff has recorded the reader may feel, and with justification that he has heard it all before —the diatribes against the "booboisie," the contemptuous references to Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, Franklin Roosevelt, Hoover, the castigation of Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians, the sweeping dismissal of all poetry as adolescent moonshine and so on. In the context of Angoff's book, however, Mencken is frequently challenged, by Angoff or somebody else and in bringing up particulars to reinforce his sweeping generalities, he exposes more clearly the weakness of his position.

Mencken says, for instance, that superior people are always born of superior parents. When exceptions are cited he replies that they were all illegitimate. He refers to Spengler's "Decline of the West" as "swill" but on being questioned admits he hasn't read it and doesn't need to in order to assess its quality. The English, he says, are a pack of scoundrels and their literature is hogwash. Shakespeare? An aberration and probably a foreigner with a liberal infiltration of Central European blood.

Mencken in print was so addicted to flamboyant exaggeration that many readers assumed that his whole literary posture was just an "act." This conception is hardly compatible with the belief that he was guided by a well considered body of ideas. Moreover it appears from Angoff's text that his most hyperbolic utterance had a hard core of strong conviction. He believed what he said, in other words, even though he systematically exaggerated for the sake of effect.

In contrast to his contempt for the English, the French, the Italians and the Scandinavians (the Orientals simply didn't exist so far as he was concerned) he exalted the Germans to an eminence above all other peoples and in every department of life. Superficially it may have seemed that this was but a fanciful way of paying tribute to his favorite Teutonic trinity — Bach, Beethoven and Beer. Actually he was naively pro-German. When it came to the scratch he refused to admit that the German people could take Hitler seriously; and finally in order to save as much of his case as possible he contended that the Jews were partly responsible for their plight in Germany because they had "monopolized the professions."

MORE surprising than any of Angoff's disclosures about Mencken's network of prejudice is the fact that many of the writers that Mencken promoted did not regard him highly as a literary critic. Both Sinclair Lewis and Theodore Dreiser believed that Mencken had a poor understanding of the creative process in writing. Sherwood Anderson was aggrieved by Mencken's professed hatred of common people; Anderson felt that sympathy with all of humanity was indispensable to creative writers.

It may appear from the foregoing that Angoff's book is an attempt to deflate Mencken's reputation. This is not the case. It is merely a report from which a critical estimate can not be excluded. As a portrait of the man, however, it is unfailingly warm and appreciative. Mencken's stimulating companionship may be inferred from other sources. Angoff makes it clear that he was also a considerate friend and, for the short time that he was married, a devoted husband.

It would be a little wide of the mark to speak of Angoff's book as a "corrective." It does, however, put Mencken in a better perspective than most of the recent appraisals; and it reveals many interesting facts about his personal life that have not been published elsewhere.

Novel About Brooklyn in Native Style

STRICTLY FROM BROOKLYN, by William Heuman. (William Morrow, 192 pgs., $3.)

Reviewed by WILL WHARTON

ONLY good thing I ever heard about Brooklyn is that Thomas Wolfe lived there once and wrote a story called "Only the Dead Know Brooklyn," about a fellow trying to find Toity-Toid and Foity-Foist street, or something like that. I never could see the Dodgers, neither, because I always went for major league teams like the Browns.

So here comes a guy with a whole book, it's about Brooklyn, where I bet nobody reads any books anyway, at least the way they talk it seems like it. Actually it ain't too bad a book, as this central caricature in it, Manny Keefe, has got problems even like you and I. His wife is a little crazy, but that ain't by no means a unusual situation, and he has a obnoxious brother-in-law which he objects to buying beer for. Like Manny says, "It's not enough he eats my food and uses my house for a hangout. Luxuries, he gets."

With Manny maybe I'm sympathetic on things like that. Other times I don't dig him, like he's always talking up the Dodgers. Or like at one place he says, "The next day is Tuesday of my vacation, and right away in the morning Mabel says, 'Today we're going to the beach. You had your ball game yesterday.'"

Now me, on my vacation I'm getting, "Yesterday' you cut the grass, so today you'll please trimming the hedge. And if you don't stop for a beer every ten minutes, there'll be time to wash the windows." So what does Manny want, Eagle Stamps?

Actually Mr. Heuman's alleged novel is warm, homey and funny and, as you can perceive from the foregoing, its style or lack of it is very contagious.

Spell of the British Isles

SOVEREIGN BRITAIN, by James Reynolds. (Putnam, 368 pgs., $7.50.)

THE late E. H. Suydam was one of the few writers with an important talent for drawing in pictures what he described in words. This small company today includes James Reynolds who visited St. Louis last year and has produced art that hangs here.

Author of more than a dozen books, Mr. Reynolds, a horse-loving native of Ireland who pretty much divides his time between the United States and Italy, has developed "Sovereign Britain" in the light of the success of earlier travel books. Those who have seen "Fabulous Spain" and "Pageant of Italy" will know what to expect in a book on the British Isles.

The tourist lands with him, so to speak, at "the ancient port of Plymouth," and then heads around the magnificent Cornish coast to Somerset and Bath, Wiltshire's rolling downs and the Vale of the White Horse. The author's "characteristic ebullience" shows in his descriptive terms: "the golden Cotswolds," "deep-meadow Shropshire," "wild Northumberland," "lakeland mountains" and "through the highlands, the lonely lochs and seaward to the misty isles."

But James Reynolds cannot write long without sketching or painting and so his pages are decorated with vivid black-and-white relief drawings of Edinburgh Castle, Oxford, Yorkminster, St. Michael's Mount and white-girdled Hampshire pigs and Tudor chimneys.

This friend of baroque art and confidant of ghosts says he "winds" his way. So he does and while the pace is leisurely, it is never too slow. Anyone going to "sovereign Britain" will find this book worth its weight and space many times over.

The Presidency as Focus Of Leadership in America

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENCY, by Clinton Rossiter. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., 175 pgs., $2.95.)

Reviewed by ROBERT LASCH

WHEN Mr. Rossiter neared the end of his book he detected, as he puts it, "a deep note of satisfaction, although hardly of complacency, with the American Presidency as it stands today." His tract, readable and pleasant if not profound, does indeed celebrate rather than criticize.

Mr. Rossiter thinks the Presidency is just about right. He admires the men who have made it an office of great strength and power —Washington, Lincoln, Jackson, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is against efforts like the Bricker Amendment to narrow its authority, and against congressional forays like McCarthy's to usurp its responsibility.

While amenable to some small experimental adjustments in the office, such as an item veto and an improved staff organization, Mr. Rossiter is on the whole opposed to major changes, such as revision of the electoral college or abolition of the party convention system of nomination. The office, in Mr. Rossiter's words:

"Provides a steady focus of leadership—of administration, Congress, and people. In a constitutional system compounded of diversity and antagonism, the Presidency looms up as the countervailing force of unity and harmony. It is a priceless symbol of our continuity and destiny as a people. It has been tested sternly in the crucible of time. It is, finally, an office of freedom, a standing reproach to those petty doctrinaires who insist that executive power is inherently undemocratic; for, to the exact contrary, it has been more responsive to the needs and dreams of giant democracy than any other office or institution in the whole mosaic of American life."

If this view commands general agreement, as it probably does everywhere except on the far right, Mr. Rossiter assures himself of maximum disagreement by playing the game of "rank the Presidents" in the course of developing his deeper themes. Putting Washington and Lincoln alone in Class One might be defensible, but upgrading Theodore Roosevelt to Class Three and downgrading Jefferson to the same rank is incredible. He puts F.D.R. in Class Two, alongside Jackson and Wilson, and Harry S. Truman, tentatively, in Class Three, with T. R. and Jefferson.

And what of Mr. Eisenhower? The author thinks he is now about Class Four Plus, a little above Polk, Cleveland and Hayes, with a chance to move up to Class Three if peace and prosperity hold out.

In reaching this judgment, Mr. Rossiter is deeply impressed by the Eisenhower "program."

He considers the President a "master" of foreign affairs and says "he leaves no doubt in our minds that he is in command — except perhaps when Mr. Dulles speaks as sounding brass," an exception which just about covers the waterfront.

MR. ROSSITER also appears to base his judgment largely on the view that since the President promised peace, and we now have it, he must be its sole author—a view which historians may regard as underplaying the death of Stalin and a few other events. Says Mr. Rossiter:

"For all his bold talk in 1952 about a crusade, we knew — and if we did not know it then, we know it now—that his mission was to bring us peace at home and abroad. We were weary of reform in the one area and of adventure in the other, and we elected a President who would give us a breathing spell from both without taking us back over the ground we had already covered."

The same, after all, could have been said of Harding. I do not know where Harding ranks in Mr. Rossiter's scale. He doesn't say.

He's with General Twining in Russia

How does Russia's Air Force compare with ours? Do the Soviets have better strategic bombers? How about their jets?

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Nathan Twining and nine other officers have the opportunity to view Soviet air strength at first hand today at a Moscow Aviation Day demonstration which they are attending at the invitation of the Russians.

Accompanying Gen. Twining's party is Brig. Gen. Thomas R. Phillips, U.S.A. (Ret.), Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch. Gen. Phillips will report and interpret the results of Gen. Twining's visit for Post-Dispatch readers.

After leaving Russia, Gen. Phillips will go to West Germany to interview NATO Commander Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther and the man who will succeed him, Gen. Lauris Norstad. Gen. Phillips will complete his foreign assignment by investigating how American bases in Algeria are being affected by political disturbances between that country and France. Watch for Gen. Phillips' on-the-spot reports from Russia

Parents who complain that their sons aren't interested in getting a job during the summer months might have themselves to blame.

That's what Post-Dispatch columnist Ruth Millett believes. In her column Tuesday, Miss Millett points out that in many cases, Junior doesn't have an incentive. Some parents believe in giving their children everything. So why should they want to work?

But in case you're interested in how to spur Junior on to getting a vacation job, she tells of one good way that hardly ever fails. For details, read Ruth Millett's column about encouraging boys in summer work

If every Air Force sergeant had a man like Will Stockdale around for long, he'd probably lose his stripes, too, just like Sergeant King did.

Will's the hero of Mac Hyman's best-selling novel, "No Time for Sergeants" which begins today in the Everyday Magazine. It's the hilarious story of what happens to a Georgia hillbilly who is drafted into the U.S. Air Force.

STOCK PRICES REBOUND ON SOME TRADE EXPANSION

More Constructive Attitude Taken Despite Uncertainties in Political and Business Outlook.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.
(Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, June 23.

UNCERTAINTIES continued this week in the political and business outlook, including the possibility of a steel strike. But the effect on the stock market was not readily apparent. Traders who only the week before had appeared hesitant about extending commitments took a more constructive attitude and prices rose at midweek in a moderate expansion of trading. Based on the New York Times combined average for 50 stocks, the market by Friday's close was back to its best level since mid-May.

Aircraft and motor issues—which have been under selling pressure recently—paced the recovery. The improvement began on Wednesday after the market had drifted with light volume in the earlier sessions. Strength in the aircrafts reflected a proposed increase in military spending; motors benefited from reports of improvement in sales and production. Special issues in the rail, oil and chemical sections also were in demand.

"Bears" Pretty Scarce Breed.

The recent slump notwithstanding, "bears" are a pretty scarce breed in Wall Street. This week the New York Stock Exchange disclosed that the short interest—stock sold in anticipation of being bought later at lower prices—declined 288,890 shares from May 15 to June 15 to a total of 2,164,519 shares. This was the smallest short position since Sept. 15, 1953.

Like Damocles's sword, the steel negotiations hang ominously over the economy. Discussions have become deadlocked, with nothing of note developing since the United Steelworkers rejected a settlement offered by the industry leaders a week ago. The strike deadline is less than a week off.

Efforts of the union to negotiate contracts with separate companies have not proved successful. Talks were resumed again on Thursday with the "big three" of the industry—United States Steel, Bethlehem and Republic.

Other Wage Demands Pending.

Wage demands are by no means, however, limited to the steel industry. The nation's railroads also are faced with another wage increase and the nation's shippers with another rise in freight rates. Eleven rail unions, representing some 800,000 non-operating employes, this week filed notice of their intention to seek a 25-cents-an-hour increase.

On the Washington front, George M. Humphrey, Secretary of the Treasury, told the House Ways and Means Committee that the encouraging financial picture of the Government did not warrant a cut in personal income taxes this year. His view was given as the committee voted a three-billion-dollar temporary increase in the national debt limit for the next fiscal year. The statutory limit is 275 billion dollars, but the temporary level is now six billion dollars above that. It would automatically go back to 275 billion dollars after June 30 if Congress did not extend it.

Government Spending.

In its latest report on Government spending, the Treasury revealed that in the 11 months ended with May 31, outlays topped revenues by three billion dollars. But this deficit was considerably less than in the 1954-55 period, when the Government went into the red for $7,500,000,000. Corporate tax payments this month are expected to sharply exceed the $10,100,000,000 collected last June. Hence, a budget surplus of $1,800,000,000 has been forecast by the Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30.

Construction outlays this year will exceed those of 1955 by 4 per cent, despite a 12 per cent drop in private housing starts, according to the Labor and Commerce departments. Their estimates for all types of building were raised to $44,500,000,000. This compared with a forecast of 44 billion dollars issued last November and with actual spending of 43 billion dollars in 1955.

LOCAL LIVESTOCK PRICES SHOW LOSSES ON WEEK

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., June 23 — Hot, humid weather and jaded consumer appetites again had a depressing effect on livestock prices, according to the Producers Livestock Marketing Association.

Butcher hogs declined $1 to $1.25 to a top of $16.50 cwt. for a loss of 11 per cent in slightly more than two weeks. Lighter weights dropped $1 to $2 and sows were off 50c to $1.25.

Cattle values were mostly 50c to $1 lower, with vealers and calves off $1 to $2. Choice steers bulked at $19.75 to $21; good and low choice $18.25 to $19.75. High choice and prime 925-lb. mixed steers and heifers topped for the week at $22. Veal calves late sold downward from $20.

Spring lambs were discounted $1 to mostly $1.50, closing top of $21 comparing with a $27 peak on June 7—a drop of 22 per cent. Ewes were weak to 50c lower.

U.S. TREASURY ISSUES LOWER; TRADE LIGHT

Corporates as Well as Governments Show Downward Path.

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—The arrival of summer brought no warm glow to the hearts of bond traders this week. For them it was a dreary period, with both corporations and United States Government bonds skittering along the downward path in some of the lightest and dullest trading in more than a year.

The utility segment of the Associated Press index of 60 representative bonds touched a new low for the year. Industrials and investment quality issues declined. Rails were steady. Only the foreign bond component registered an advance.

United States Government bonds were irregular Monday. Each day since, the trend has been downward by increasing margins. Friday's losses were greatest of the period. Transactions, however, were on the slow side.

For the week, the Treasury 2½s of 1963 retreated 10-32 at 96 30-32 bid. The Victory 2½s of December 1972-67, dropped 14-32 at 94 26-32. The 30-year 3¼s declined 18-32 at 104 13-32 and the 40-year 3s gave up 8-32 at 99 22-32 bid.

At these prices the 2½s of 1963 yield 2.96 per cent. The Victory 2½s yield 2.88, the 30-year 3¼s yield 2.97 and the 40-year 3s yield 3.01 per cent.

SOME WATCH . . . OTHERS MAKE PROGRESS

. . . which kind of engineer are you?

One sits on the sidelines and watches. He reads about the accomplishments of other engineers. He envies them—and does nothing to better himself.

Then, there's the other kind—with a probing mind, keen imagination and personal drive. He must be right in the thick of creative activities—and he must achieve personal progress, too—or he's not happy. AND HE DOES SOMETHING ABOUT IT.

This is a new department—only 4 years old—equipped with the finest facilities in industry for working out advanced problems in light military electronics. It's a department where an engineer is paid (and paid well) to think originally and assume responsibility. Promotion has come with record speed to able men. Already the engineering staff has more than DOUBLED AND THERE'S PLENTY OF ROOM FOR YOU TO GROW AND ADVANCE.

TWO ROADS . . TO SUCCESS

at GENERAL ELECTRIC'S Aeronautic & Ordnance Operation

Two paths of advancement are open here—one for men who prefer to specialize on technical problems at a high professional level . . . the other for those whose interests lie along managerial lines.

The common denominator here is opportunity—with plenty of top leadership jobs opening up, through the continuous increase in programs for the development and production of advanced flight and fighter control systems, Army ordnance systems and hydraulic equipment.

ADEQUATE WIRING Certified — KEY TO MODERN LIVING

CERTIFIED ADEQUATE WIRING

To really live in a house, you need wiring that lets you enjoy the full pleasure of your present appliances, television, and other electrical servants . . . plus the additional electrical conveniences you'll want in the future.

Don't guess . . . be sure to look for the Certified Adequate Wiring Key on the electrical "Servants' Entrance" of the home you buy!

Certified Adequate Wiring Provides . . .

A 100-ampere, or larger, electrical "Servants' Entrance" containing—

Two 240-volt circuits—one to kitchen for a flameless electric range . . . the other to provide for future installation of an electric dryer or room air conditioner.

Eight, or more, 120-volt circuits—for present lighting and appliances plus spares for future freezer circuit, bathroom heater and other new appliance circuits.

Three 20-ampere 120-volt "heavy duty" circuits—to kitchen, dining area and the laundry. Your electric iron, frypan will heat faster . . . and your washer will operate more efficiently!

Don't Guess . . . Be Sure to Buy the Home with Certified Adequate Wiring

HORN REALTORS FL 2-0948

MR. AND MRS. HOMEBUYER—You are entitled to a beautiful, efficient kitchen in your home. Be sure when you're looking for a new home that you give the kitchen an extra-close inspection.

Compare quality in the kitchen. Look for and insist on these kitchen advantages . . .

1. Lasting beauty—Will the kitchen stay beautiful for the life of your home? And is it easy to keep clean?

2. Color—The trend is to color! Will the color of the kitchen blend with any decorating scheme, or any of the new appliances?

3. Quality—Be sure to check for doors that won't sag; drawers that will open easily and quietly, won't bind and stick. Is the finish of long-lasting baked-on enamel?

4. Dishwashers and Disposers—Does the kitchen have a dishwasher that does all your dishes in one load? And does it have a food waste disposer that operates quietly and is service-free?

5. Built-ins—Does the kitchen have a new built-in oven and cooking top with solid built-together construction and safety from the wrapped-in-steel design?

Chances are you won't buy the first new home you see. So look for the home with the kitchen that gives you all the above advantages. You can get them all in a Youngstown Kitchen!

For a book in full color to help you select your new-home kitchen, send 25c with your name and address to:

MR. AND MRS. HOMEBUYER—You are entitled to a beautiful, efficient kitchen in your home. Be sure when you're looking for a new home that you give the kitchen an extra-close inspection.

Compare quality in the kitchen. Look for and insist on these kitchen advantages . . .

1. Lasting beauty—Will the kitchen stay beautiful for the life of your home? And is it easy to keep clean?

2. Color—The trend is to color! Will the color of the kitchen blend with any decorating scheme, or any of the new appliances?

3. Quality—Be sure to check for doors that won't sag; drawers that will open easily and quietly, won't bind and stick. Is the finish of long-lasting baked-on enamel?

4. Dishwashers and Disposers—Does the kitchen have a dishwasher that does all your dishes in one load? And does it have a food waste disposer that operates quietly and is service-free?

5. Built-ins—Does the kitchen have a new built-in oven and cooking top with solid built-together construction and safety from the wrapped-in-steel design?

Chances are you won't buy the first new home you see. So look for the home with the kitchen that gives you all the above advantages. You can get them all in a Youngstown Kitchen!

For a book in full color to help you select your new-home kitchen, send 25c with your name and address to:

Braves Win 8th in Row; Dodgers Luck Out in Ninth

DEL RICE AND O'CONNELL HIT HOME RUNS IN NINTH INNING

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—Milwaukee ran its winning streak under Manager Fred Haney to eight, longest of the major league season, by beating the New York Giants, 2-1, here today on consecutive home runs by pinch-hitter Del Rice and Danny O'Connell in the ninth inning.

The Braves' blazing finish, nullifying eight innings of two-hit shutout pitching by Johnny Antonelli, boosted Milwaukee's National League lead to 1½ games. The defeat dropped the Giants into last place.

Brooklyn also struck in the ninth to whip Cincinnati, 7-6, and regain second place in that wide-open N. L. scramble. Randy Jackson's two-run double tied the score and Rocky Nelson's single won it.

Pittsburgh lost its seventh straight, bowing to Chicago, 9-5, when the Cubs scored four in the tenth inning after the Pirates had tied the score with five in the ninth.

Four-Hitter by Jim Wilson

The Chicago White Sox moved within three games of the New York Yankees in the American League on a brilliant 2-0, four-hit shutout by Jim Wilson. It was the sixth straight for Chicago.

Wilson joined teammate Billy Pierce as the league's heaviest winners with 10 on a sixth-inning rally that started when Bob Grim hit Dave Philley with a pitched ball. There was an exchange of blows between the two men, with Philley getting the thumb from the umpires.

Bob Lemon's pinch single and a wild throw by Outfielder Whitey Herzog let Cleveland score two in the ninth and nip Washington 9-8. It was the fifth straight for the Indians, their longest streak of the year.

Baltimore's scheduled contest at Detroit was postponed because of rain.

Milwaukee had been held to two singles until Rice, the former Cardinal batting for pitcher Warren Spahn, tied the score with a homer off the left-field facade, his second of the year. O'Connell's winning blow into the upper left-field seats was his first of the season.

Until the ninth, the only run of the game was Hank Thompson's home run into the upper stands in right in the second off Spahn.

The Braves haven't lost since Haney replaced Charlie Grimm last Saturday night, following an afternoon defeat in Brooklyn.

The Dodgers lost the services of shortstop Don Zimmer, who suffered a fractured cheek bone and a concussion when hit by a pitch thrown by Cincinnati's Hal Jeffcoat in the fourth inning. Reports from the hospital were that Zimmer would be lost for at least two weeks.

Two Homers by Hodges.

Despite two homers by Gil Hodges and one by Roy Campanella, the Dodgers had to come from way back to win in the ninth. A pair of two-run homers by Gus Bell and Frank Robinson helped Jeffcoat into the ninth with a 6-4 lead. After Pee Wee Reese singled to open the ninth, Bud Freeman replaced Jeffcoat. He got Sandy Amoros but Junior Gilliam singled, Jackson doubled, Duke Snider walked and Nelson singled.

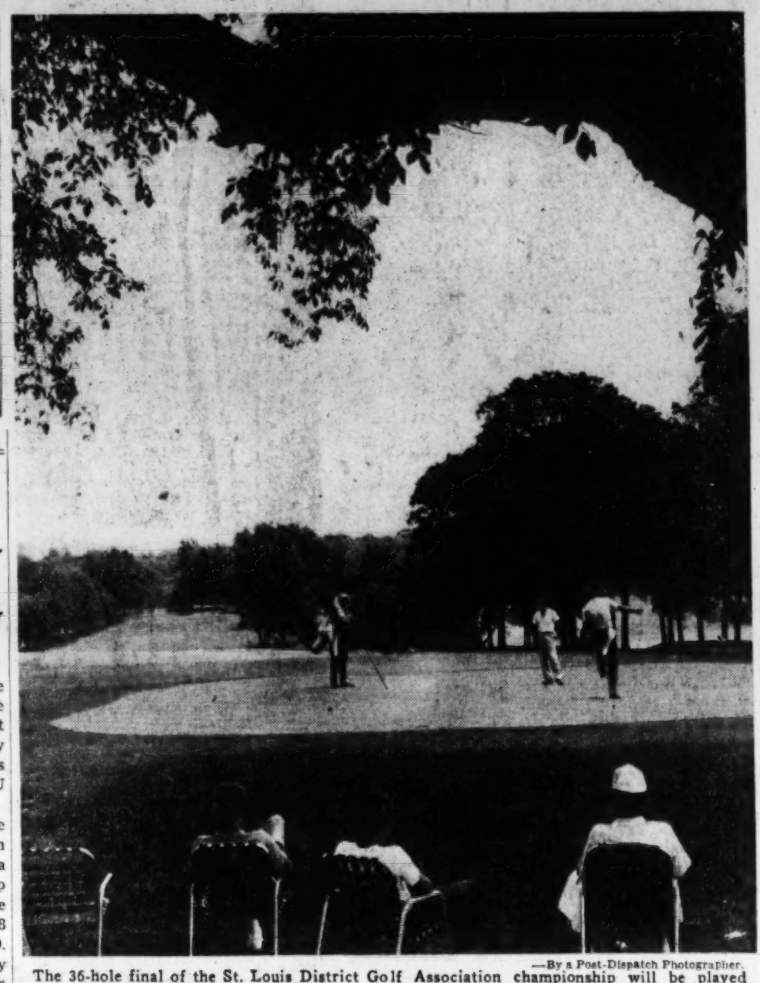

The Cubs used three singles,

400-Meter Record By Courtney

BAKERSFIELD, Calif, June 23 (UP)—Tom Courtney of the New York Athletic Club upset Defending champion Charley Jenkins of Villanova tonight as he set a new national AAU record in the 400 meter run.

Courtney, best known as one of the top 800 meter men in the world, came on with a sprinting stretch finish to nip Jenkins in 45.8 seconds. The former AAU record, set in 1948 by Herb McKenley was 45.9. The world mark is 45.4, set by Lou Jones at the Pan-American games last year.

It was the sixth AAU record out of nine events completed last night and so far tonight in the 68th annual championships.

The thermometer reached 102 degrees here today in mid-afternoon, but a mild breeze came up late in the day and as the first events got underway tonight the wind gauge measured between four and 10 miles an hour. A crowd of about 10,000 was in the stands, compared with 9,024 last night.

The Summaries

Geiss Plays Richter for Title Today

By Robert Morrison

It's something of a ticklish proposition to try to pick a favorite for the District Amateur golf tournament final today at Algonquin, but many of the golf-wise may be inclined to string along with Jack Geiss.

The 36-year-old Geiss, whose iron play always had the admiration of his fellow competitors, will meet newcomer Bob Richter, 22-year-old son of the Bellerive pro, in the title match starting at 9 a.m. this morning.

As customary, it will be over the 36-hole route and therein lies the question. Will Geiss, the 1950 winner of this event with years of experience in tournament competition, have all his stuff at this stage of his career, or will the muscular newcomer come barreling at him down the stretch?

Geiss and Richter both play out of Norwood Hills but Geiss, who in recent times has been playing as much at Algonquin as at some other courses, should be at home on the 6134-yard, par-71 layout on Berry road.

While the course plays at varying lengths, depending upon

Golden Gloves Loses Sponsor; May Continue

Sponsorship of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament, which has been promoted here for 21 years, is open, according to Wilfrid Smith, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune.

In answer to a query as to whether the Tribune would discontinue its sponsorship of the Gloves tournament in Chicago and the Tournament of Champions, Smith replied:

"Chicago Tribune and 30 associates continuing Golden Gloves as usual. Sport in far better financial and competitive condition than year ago. Tournament of Champions dates Feb. 25, 26 and 27, 1957. Globe-Democrat will not sponsor tournament in St. Louis in 1957. This does not mean that St. Louis tournament necessarily will be discontinued. Kansas City is example, in that tournament there, publicized but not promoted by K. C. Star, was most successful in 1956."

There have been rumors for several years that the tournament here would be dropped by the Globe Democrat but this is the first official word that the newspaper would not sponsor the 1957 event.

Paul Spica, who has been tournament manager of the event here, is seeking a new sponsor for the Golden Gloves.

"I talked with Smith in Chicago and he said that so far as he was concerned any new sponsor here would have to be okayed by me" said Paul, "and now I'll seek some organization or group to underwrite the tournament with the profits, if any, to go to some charity."

Aaron Benesch, managing editor of the Globe Democrat, confirmed the fact that the newspaper had decided to give up sponsorship of the Golden Gloves and said he had no explanation at this time.

GRAND SLAM HOME RUN BY ENNIS KAYOES DON LIDDLE; HADDIX GOES ALL THE WAY

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—Fuming Fred Hutchinson, his frowning forehead furrowed like a farmer's field, shook up the Cardinals' lineup, but it did no good because the Philadelphia Phillies shook up the Redbirds, too, jolting them into a fourth straight defeat, 8 to 3, here today.

The trouble, as it has been so frequently, was that the St. Louis hitters couldn't hit with men on base and the club's pitchers couldn't pitch with men on, either. And the defense of the new battlefront was about as agile as a Clydesdale in the Kentucky Derby.

The Cards, equaling their longest losing streak for the second time in a calendar week, fielded a righthanded-hitting lineup that included Rip Repulski for the first time in three weeks. Hank Sauer joined him in the outfield as Whitey Lockman and Wally Moon, lefthanded hitters excused from duty for failure to hit, were on the bench.

With Ray Katt catching former New York battery mate Don Liddle and Bobby Morgan once again at second base, the lineup was strong and slow, but, unfortunately, slower than strong in this instance. And though the Redbirds outhit Philadelphia, which blinked its way out of the basement with a fourth successive triumph, the Phillies hit more timely and for greater distance. It was the Redbirds' eighth loss in their last 11 games.

Five Walks and Balk, Too.

In addition to nine safeties which included a decisive grand-slam homer by Del Ennis and a circuit drive by Stan Lopata, the Phils took advantage of five walks, a wild pitch and run-scoring balk that permitted them to score seven times off Liddle and Larry Jackson in the third and fourth innings.

The Redbirds, meanwhile, collected 10 blows off former teammate Harvey Haddix, who struggled through the 94-degree temperature to please a Ladies and children's day crowd of 20,371 by striking out eight. He walked only one, though he pinked two with pitches, as he brought his season's record to five victories against three defeats. The triumph was the Kitten's second in three tries against his former teammates.

For the Cards, the hitting tandem of Al Dark and Stan Musial connected safely twice each, but took second place to Bobby Del Greco, the light-hitting young outfielder who calls Haddix "cousin." In addition to playing both his position and a plodding Sauer's in spacious Connie Mack Stadium, Del Greco doubled and homered. Three of his four over-the-fence drives this season have been off Haddix.

Leading the Phillies, of course, was Ennis with his four-run homer, his thirteenth, and Lopata, who also has teed off 13 times. For quantity, the foremost Philadelphia player was Ted Kazanski. Ordinarily a banjo-plunker at the plate, Kazanski delivered three safeties, two of which were skillful hit-and-run bleeders through an inviting second base hole as Morgan persisted in playing footsie with the bag.

Homer for Lopata.

Little Liddle, appearing for the first time in a St. Louis uniform, had an unfortunate debut. The former New York southpaw was knicked in the first by Lopata's homer on a "3-2" pitch. In the third with one out he walked Richie Ashburn. Kazanski's hit-and-run safety, played into a double by slow-reacting Sauer, left first base open and encouraged Hutchinson to order an intentional pass for Ennis. Del's blast on a "2-0" delivery was his fifth major league grand-slam.

The score mounted to 8-0 in a sandlot fourth frame. One was out when Haddix walked and Ashburn cuffed a sharp grounder under Musial's glove and into the right field corner for a triple. Kazanski singled Ashburn across and after Lopata flied out, Jackson lost control of the ball and himself. While walking both Ennis and Willie Jones, he uncorked what had to be scored as a wild pitch because he crossed up Catcher Katt on a signal. Then with the bases loaded he took a windup, paused and broke his motion for a run-scoring balk.

The Cardinals, if the details aren't too painful, scored only in the fifth and seventh despite several chances. In the fifth Del Greco homered. Two innings later singles by Musial and Ken Boyer, plus Ennis's error, put in scoring position two runs that came across on a base blow by Sauer.

From the fifth inning on Philadelphia collected only two singles off a medley relay of three highly capable bullpenmen — Lindy McDaniel, Jim Konstanty and Ellis Kinder—who've had precious few opportunities to save games as the Cardinals have dipped into the second division during their recent slump.

Redbird Notes.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.

MURRY (4-7) DICKSON and Willard Schmidt of the Cardinals and Southpaw Curt (3-5) Simmons and right-hander Jim (0-4) Owens of the Phillies probably will be the opposing pitchers in Sunday's doubleheader here.

Rip Repulski, back in the Cardinal lineup for the first time since June 6, was struck near the left elbow by a Harvey Haddix pitch in the second inning. X-rays taken after Repulski played the remainder of the game showed no fracture, but the arm was so badly bruised that Rip will be out indefinitely.

Repulski was hit on the right wrist by a pitch May 22 and suffered a hairline fracture. That member was still taped when he batted today.

Willie Jones, the Phillies' third baseman, was shaken up in spectacular third-inning action. On a high foul Jones drifted back and over toward the third base grandstand. As he thrust an outstretched glove over the wall, he ran into the tarpaulin cylinder. The spool caught Jones below the waist and flipped him head over heels into a first-row box. No Willie didn't catch the ball.

Grim Battle at Chicago

Shoulder Stiff, Schoendienst Idle After One Game

NEW YORK, June 23 (UP) AL (RED) SCHOENDIENST'S ailing right shoulder "stiffened" following Friday night's game and he did not start at second base for the New York Giants today against the Milwaukee Braves.

Schoendienst followed his doctor's advice by throwing lightly today but his arm did not feel well enough for him to play. Schoendienst, acquired in a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals last week, made his first start at second base for the Giants Friday night.

He injured his right shoulder early this season and has been on the sidelines most of the time since.

EXTRA INNINGS

When Musial Does Quit It'll Be End of an Era.

JOE REICHLER of the Associated Press got the impression the other day, after talking to Stan Musial or friends of Stan, that The Man was thinking seriously of quitting baseball after the 1956 season.

Stan has denied that he has made up his mind to quit, but stated bluntly that he would give up baseball when he himself believed he no longer could help the Cardinals or maintain his standing as a top flight player.

"I'll let you know in September," Stan said tersely.

It will be an end of an era when Stan The Man does hang up his glove and spiked shoes and retires to his restaurant office. Except for Murry Dickson, back for another hitch in Redbird uniform in the twilight of his career, Stan is the only Cardinal left from the championship club of 1942-1946 that won four pennants and three world titles in a five-year span.

Many professional observers, passing up the powerful Cardinal team of 1931, rate the Redbirds of 1942-1946 as the greatest St. Louis National League team. Certainly it was the outstanding period in St. Louis baseball history.

Musial, the brightest star of the Redbird team during those championship years, is still an outstanding performer, a man of dignity and great regard and respect for other persons' feelings. Through his long career he never has criticized a teammate, a manager, the front office. He's a real professional—an old pro, the trade calls it. He showed that again last week.

They Got a First Baseman, Then Shifted Stan Again.

MUSIAL was very happy after spring training when it was established definitely that the club seemed to mean what it said when it was stated officially that Stan would not again be asked to play first base. He didn't say anything until the season was about to start and Wally Moon was assigned to first base. Then Stan told Fred Hutchinson and Frank Lane how happy he was about it. He believed staying in the outfield would prolong his career. He'd be happier there, he admitted.

Then Lane made his big trade with the Giants and announced that one of the big reasons for the deal was that in Whitey Lockman the club would have a first baseman.

But while Lane's words of explanation were still echoing from Coogan's Bluff and the rafters of Busch Stadium, Hutchinson had a change of heart. He asked Stan if he'd go back to first base. Hutchinson said it would be all right if Stan took a few days to get ready for the shift.

"No, I'll do it right away," Stan replied.

Stan insists he's not mad at anybody and that he's not upset over the return to first base. But observers traveling with the Cardinals believe that Stan's feelings were hurt by some of the things that happened this season.

While Stan was in a batting slump a few weeks ago, before the big trade with the Giants, rumors were persistent that Musial was about to be traded. Many Cardinal fans telephoned to ask members of the Post-Dispatch sports department if Stan had been or was about to be traded.

Card Fans Suspected Build-Up for a Trade.

"WHERE did you get the impression that a deal was on the fire?" the questioners were asked.

"Well," the common reply went, "it sounds like Lane is getting the fans softened up for a trade of Musial. Representatives of the club are repetitiously harping on Stan's slump, the fact that he's no longer swinging with authority, and the games that are being lost because Stan doesn't get a hit every time at bat."

The rumors finally caught up with Lane and he telephoned the Post-Dispatch to state categorically that Musial positively was not available and would not be traded. Musial was to be excused if his feelings were hurt a little, by a seemingly official creation of a situation that demanded such a denial by General Manager Lane. And Musial, the Old Pro, easily could have made up his mind that he would quit before tolerating future spotlight treatment of any slumps he might have.

It was a great era in which Musial played, an era that stretched back to the days before baseball, for perhaps necessary economic reasons, sold out to beer, cigarettes and razor blades.

Another World Record for Swaps! Runs Mile and Sixteenth in 1:39

Winner Carries 130 Lbs.

INGLEWOOD, Calif., June 23 (UP)—The amazing California comet, Swaps, raced to a new world's record for a mile and a sixteenth today in scoring a victory by better than two lengths in the $52,250 Inglewood Handicap at Hollywood Park, setting a mark of 1:39 flat.

It was the second world's record Swaps has eclipsed in consecutive starts at Hollywood Park as he coasted home in front of Mister Gus by a margin of about two and a half lengths. Bobby Brocato was third in the field of seven starters.

Swaps cut a second and two-fifths off his own world's record and he did it with 130 pounds on his back to astound turf followers. The crowd of some 50,000 fans that turned out to see Swaps run gave him an ovation as he came to the winner's circle and the applause and cheers continued for nearly five minutes after the finish of the race.

Two weeks ago Swaps set a mile mark of 1:33 1-5 in breaking Citation's six-year-old mark. His mile time today was a fantastic 1:32 3-5 and it demonstrated the speed of the race and the swift pace cut out by Bobby Brocato.

For unlike the Argonaut Mile in which Swaps set the pace and pulled away from Bobby Brocato, today Bobby Brocato with a nine-pound pull in weights went out on top and Swaps came along smoothly in second position with Mister Gus third and Colonel Mack fourth.

Willie Shoemaker stayed within a length of Bobby Brocato on Swaps and Mister Gus was close behind in third place by less than a length most of the way.

Swaps Opens Up.

But when the small field reached the final turn Swaps was called on for speed and he responded with a burst that had him passing Bobby Brocato at the quarter pole like he was standing still.

Swaps opened up a lead of about three lengths at the eighth pole but then Mister Gus made his move and pulled past Bobby Brocato.

Mister Gus is a stablemate of Porterhouse which beat Swaps in the $100,000 Californian earlier in the meeting. But Willie Shoemaker did not fall asleep on Swaps this time.

As they headed for the wire, he rapped the California champion smartly and the son of imported Khaled responded with a burst of speed that found him nearly three lengths in front as they crossed under the wire.

Swaps set the mile and a sixteenth mark of 1:40 2/5 last year in the Californian with 115 pounds on his back and his feat of carrying an added 15 pounds to so fast a mark was considered amazing.

Beat Own Mark.

The time of 1:39 was faster than Swaps' mark of 1:35-3.5 which he set for a world's record at a mile and 70 yards in the Broward Handicap last winter at Gulfstream Park although a mile and a sixteenth is about 40 yards more than a mile and 70 yards.

As befits a champion, Swaps was sent off at odds of one to four and he returned $2.60, 2.50 and 2.10 across the board. Mister Gus paid $5.20 and 2.30 for place and show and Bobby Brocato returned $2.10 for show.

The victory carried a net purse of $29,450 to the winner and it ran Swaps' lifetime earnings to $541,050.

It was the second time this year Swaps has carried 130 pounds to victory and it helped solidify his claims to horse of the year honors, the goal of his owner Rex C. Ellsworth.

Geiss Plays Richter For Golf Title Today

possible showers, it doesn't require too many long irons from most top amateurs, and if Richter can keep his new-found putting brilliance he should stay with Geiss who can be briefly and occasionally erratic.

In the last couple of years business pressure has prevented Geiss from engaging in as much tournament play as in earlier years, but his game was so sound that he hasn't lost much.

And in this latest venture Geiss has been hitting the greens and scoring sharply. He was two or three strokes under par in every match except his even-par shooting against Joe Switzer in their semifinal match Friday. In that one Geiss got all of his four birdies on the second nine in going from a one-up standing to a 3 and 2 victory.

In his progress to the final Geiss defeated Sunset's young Tom Hullverson, 3-2; Harry Lebeau, 2-1 (a victory that included a hole-in-one on No. 8), recent champion Les Slattery Jr., 5-4, and then Switzer.

But Richter could claim almost as significant a performance. He was one over par but one up in a quarterfinal upset victory over defending Champion Bob Goalby of Belleville's St. Clair C.C. Bob also had trimmed young Charley Fawcett and outlasted the home club's hope Roger Hemker, before trimming the suddenly-wild Goalby and then defeating the veteran Harry Paller.

Almost a Toss-up.

Richter was three under par in turning aside the 41-year-old Paller who perhaps never had played better in 20 years of effort in these tournaments.

So it's almost a toss-up, with a nod to Geiss, but Richter, whose wife is a Webster Groves girl, may have the strongest gallery support today. He's had rooters all along, and they'll probably gather in number for the 1:30 p.m. afternoon round.

'Shake Hands, but Don't Come Out Swinging'

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

OPERATION BUCKETS AND BALLS THRIVING, THANKS TO 16-HOUR DAY BY PRO AMBO

By Jack Rice

The man with the office tan, his horn-rimmed gaze intent on the golf ball, drew back the club and at the top of his swing could not wait to enjoy the results. He looked up, toward the "200" marker. The club came down, the ball fell off the tee as the wind in the wake of the club shook it loose, and Walter Ambo gave his practiced professional sympathy.

Ambo adjusted his pupil's hands on the club grip and guided him back to a good address of the ball, and spoke soothingly of keeping an eye on it, before and during and even a little bit after, making a pass at it. Ambo has been doing this since 1937, working for other people. Now he does it for himself, in the glorious freedom of a man in his own business, working 16 hours a day. He operates a golf range.

Golf ranges are not a dying art form, but they have been dwindling. Locations good for a golf range probably are even better for a subdivision, or a shopping center. It is a business that serves the public, but people are not its major problem, and that's something different in commerce, too.

Large and Economy Sizes.

Ambo and his pupil had come to the bottom of the bucket of golf balls, economy size $1.00, large size 65 cents, and to the end of the lesson.

They walked back to the office, and a bill was toted. Ambo added, and as he did the sum, lesson and golf balls and cokes, he said there had been some good hits. "Well, maybe by the end of summer I'll have it," his pupil said, looking pleased. Ambo grinned and nodded and made change. The pupil said, "Give me another bucket, big one."

Ambo leaned on the counter in the office, located at the center of the long line of rubber tee-mats. The counter was a show case, and it held the bare necessities of a golfer's life, tees and balls and gloves and the hats that are just beginning to let the human race catch up with peacocks, who have known all along that the brightest plumage looks best on the male.

In Area of Big Business.

"Location is everything," said Ambo, answering a question. His location is on Clayton road, near the Terminal Railroad viaduct. It's a neighborhood that has attracted such merchants as Stix-Baer-Fuller and Howard Johnson, dry goods and ice cream, respectively, and a man with some golf balls and about eight leased acres can consider himself among some major business men. There must be a similarity in trade patterns, too.

"About 70 per cent of ours is established trade," said Ambo. "Thirty per cent of the trade is drop-in. That established trade is the reason we use a Number 5 ball, higher compression than you usually find on a golf range. It gives a good click to the ball, and it'll go almost 95 per cent of what you'll get from a name-brand ball.

"Lot of ranges, they use a No. 6, to protect the operator against some novice cutting it in half on him. Balls cost 50 cents apiece, and it mounts up. We're moving our fences, because since April we've lost 5000 balls, people hitting them over the fences."

It had been guessed that perhaps half of the business came from one-bucket customers, youths trying to give a first date a commercial on their muscles or their sense of humor. Ambo said it isn't so. There always is a certain Coney island element, but it's less now than ever, possibly down to 1 per cent.

Golf ranges were going best during the depression, he recalled. "A golfer with the habit already formed took the cheapest way out. He'd hit a bucket of balls for 35 cents, and get about the same amount of exercise he was accustomed to on a round of golf, without the 75-cent or $1 greens fee,"—and whatever became of those prices?

Ranges in the St. Louis area now number about five, "this one, and Holiday Hill and Mac's and Nelson's and Cool Valley, and there's probably one more somewhere," said Ambo. "There were at least 10 during the depression, I know."

Once Tried Tourney Trail.

Ambo has been professional at Westborough, and at Meadow Brook, good club jobs, and he quit for a brief try at the tournament swing. It wasn't even a half-swing. He was brought home by that great curb to adventure, money. He settled on the golf range, a form of speculation not quite so wild as trying to beat the Littlers and the Sneads at their own touring racket.

It has its independence, too, running a driving range. "The twelfth guy who gives you trouble, you can look at him and say, 'Don't you feel well today?'", Ambo said. A man came to the door of the office and said, "I'd like a lesson—I'm just passing by and only have today in town."

Ambo frowned, as though he had just been denied a pleasure, and said, "I'm awfully sorry, but it's almost 2 o'clock, and I haven't had lunch yet, and I've a lesson coming up." He gave the man a bucket of golf balls, dollar size, and headed for the neighboring ice cream stand. He sat where he could see his slice-and-hook haven, broiling under the county sun, and said, "It'll come along, and eventually I'll be the only pro who ever started on the tournament circuit at 50."

Peoria Girls Beat Manchester Team

The Lettes from Peoria, Ill., scored a 7-5 victory over Manchester in a girls' softball game last night on the loser's field. Carolyn Thome's single in the sixth inning scored the winning runs. Marcella Rose and Shirley Sprothkamp of Manchester each hit a triple. The two teams meet again tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Manchester field.

Handball Tourney.

Semi-finals will be played this afternoon in the championship class of the Forest Park invitational handball tournament. Four quarter-final matches in Class A also are scheduled.

CHAMPIONSHIP CLASS (Semifinals.)

two walks, a sacrifice and Don Hoak's steal of home to score four in the tenth inning. A Pirate spurt in the ninth ended abruptly when Jack Shepard, whose single tied the game, was picked off first by Jim Davis. Ernie Banks hit his fifteenth homer for Chicago in the seventh, breaking up a scoreless duel between Warren Hacker and Bob Friend. Relief Man Roy Face was the eventual loser and Davis the winner.

There were fireworks in Chicago when Philley charged the mound in the sixth inning after he had been hit by Grim's pitch. As Philley neared the mound, he wound up to swing but Grim let one go. He missed. Philley threw a punch. He missed, too. Players from both benches separated the pair and Philley was given the rest of the day off.

After the incident, Sherm Lollar doubled to right, scoring Jim Delsing, who ran for Philley. Grim, probably un-nerved by the scrap, walked Walt Dropo who took second on an infield out and scored on Luis Aparicio's single.

Lovely Winner In Casting Meet

William J. Lovely, member of the host Carondelet club, captured the all-accuracy title in the city casting championship tournament yesterday at Carondelet Park. Lovely, winner of the five-eighths event in the national meet last year, topped the field in both the three-eighths and five-eighths-ounce distance bait events.

Clem Forcade, former national titleholder, took first place in the salmon fly distance event and Jim Venable was the trout fly winner.

Today's program, consisting of accuracy events, will run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Win Rifle Awards.

Fifteen-year-old Mary Ann Garamella of 1210 North Market st., and Clement N. Evans, 16, of 4915 Pershing, have been awarded expert rifleman medals, the second highest award in Junior shooting. Louis C. Berra Jr., 18 of 6733 Plainview, was awarded the highest award, the distinguished rifleman medal.

Busy Boxers.

Archie Moore and Willie Pep are the only active fighters who have fought more than 200 bouts.

Born Mighty Beats Fabius in Ohio Derby

CLEVELAND, O., June 23 (UP)—Cornelius V. Whitney's Born Mighty, a 16-1 shot, scored a stunning one-length victory over the Preakness winner, Calumet Farms' Fabius, in the $45,340 Ohio Derby at Thistledown today.

Racing through a rainstorm, which struck a few minutes before post time, and turned the track sloppy, Fabius tired badly in the final yards of the mile and an eighth event, after having held a three-length lead in the stretch.

Toby B., from the Van Deren and Deming Stable, finished third, a nose behind Fabius.

Born Mighty, ridden by John Choquette, covered the route in 1:55 4-5 and paid $34, $9.00 and $5.40 across the board.

Fabius, the 3-5 favorite, paid $3.20 and $2.60 and Toby D. refunded $4.00 to show.

It was the first stakes victory for Born Mighty, whose trainers previously had indicated that he would not start if the track were "off."

The storm broke, however, after the derby field was en route to the post.

Yanks Whip Aussie Doubles Team on Eve of Wimbledon

BETWEEN ROUNDS

By W. J. McGoogan

Feverish Six Months Of Boxing History.

ROCKY MARCIANO'S retirement as heavyweight champion of the world was, of course, the outstanding event in boxing history for the first six months of 1956. But there were many other outstanding events. Among them:

RAY ROBINSON'S fourth round knockout of Carl (Bobo) Olson in Los Angeles before 20,083 persons who paid $228,500 to set a new receipts record for boxing in California. Robinson retained the middleweight title which he won from Olson in December.

JOHNNY SAXTON regained the welterweight championship from Carmen Basilio in Chicago on a 15-round decision, was roundly booed and criticized but the referee of the match, Frank Gilmer, a Chicago lawyer, has since been named chairman of the Illinois Athletic Commission.

SANDY SADDLER defeated Flash Elorde of the Philippines by a technical knockout in the thirteenth round at San Francisco before 5000 and gate receipts of $30,000. Saddler, long noted for his "dirty" tactics in the ring, was at his worst in this one and the referee was severely criticized for permitting the featherweight champion to ignore the rules.

PASCUAL PEREZ of Argentina won a 15-round decision in Buenos Aires in defense of his flyweight title before 25,000, the largest crowd ever to attend a boxing match in his country.

ART ARAGON defeated Jimmy Carter at Los Angeles before 10,103 who paid $44,247 to bring the receipts for Aragon's fights in California to well over the million dollar mark, although he has never held a title.

Aragon sought a match for the 160-pound title with Robinson on the basis of his drawing power but the new California Commission ruled that he was too light to be a serious opponent for Robinson.

ARCHIE MOORE kayoed Yolande Pompey in London in the tenth round at Harringay Arena before a capacity of 11,000 with receipts of more than $100,000. This enabled Moore to keep his light heavyweight championship and he is the outstanding contender as the successor to Marciano.

Moore is to meet James J. Parker in Toronto, Canada, in July and with Jack Kearns and Jimmy Johnston leading the ballyhoo you can bet that they'll try to convince the world that it will be for the heavyweight crown.

But there's always FLOYD PATTERSON of Brooklyn to consider. He leaped into the front of the heavyweight picture with a split decision over Tommy Hurricane Jackson in New York. Floyd broke a bone in his hand in the encounter, however, and it is questionable whether he'll be able to meet Moore in September as had been planned.

These were some of the happenings in the ring and there was much activity related to boxing outside the ring with investigations and court action.

Court Action.

THE United States Department of Justice completed its monopoly suit against the International Boxing Club but the decision is not expected to be handed down for some months.

A California committee, at the instigation of Gov. Knight, conducted a probe of boxing in Los Angeles and San Francisco and came up with a lot of charges which resulted in the resignation of the commission. Results of the hearings are expected to be published soon and are said to be "red hot."

Julius Helfand, chairman of the New York Commission, who bawled out Lou Radzienda, president of the National Boxing Association for permitting Saxton to sign his own contract for the match in Chicago with Basilio, turned around and permitted the same thing for their return, scheduled for Syracuse, N. Y., probably in August.

The New York Commission also broke with the Massachusetts Commission and an agreement in effect between the two organizations will not be renewed.

So, packed with news as have been the past six months, the remaining six of this year should be even more so.

$100,000 Challenge.

BERNARD GLICKMAN, manager of Chicago middleweight, Bobby Boyd, has offered to guarantee Robinson $100,000 for a title match. And Gene Fullmer, Salt Lake City machinist is angling for a bout with the 160-pound titleholder. Apparently the boys think the first one to get to Robinson will beat him. But Ray is reported to be playing golf in Westchester County, New York, and has no immediate plans for a title defense.

Among other upcoming matches of interest are: Willie Pastrano, New Orleans, vs. Johnny Holman, Chicago; Ezzard Charles vs. Pat McMurtry; Joe Giambra vs. Rocky Castellani, July 13 at Madison Square Garden; Tony Anthony vs. Tony Johnson, July 20, at Madison Square Garden.

Jack Dempsey celebrated his 61st birthday by calling Patterson a club fighter... Edouardo Lausse, the Argentine middleweight who ended his previous visit to this country on a sour note by losing to Boyd, is to return soon for another whirl at the middleweights... Cherif Hamia, the Algerian featherweight, has gone back to France, but is expected to return soon, possibly to fight Saddler for the 126-pound title; Eddie Machen, young California heavyweight, is being touted as a sure title contender within a year... Tony De Marco exploded Vince Martinez with a defeat in Boston... Vince didn't look too hot at The Arena in defeating Chris Christiansen, despite his clippings.

Fraser Is Surprise In Singles

LONDON, June 23 (AP) — American pairs won both the men's and women's doubles titles today in the London Lawn Tennis Tournament, final warmup before the start of the Wimbledon championships on Monday.

The team of veteran Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and young Ham Richardson of Westfield, N.J., upset Australians Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall, 6-8, 6-2, 6-4 for the men's title after Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Shirley Fry of St. Petersburg, Fla., had won the women's doubles, 6-2, 7-5 from Althea Gibson of New York and Britain's Angela Buxton.

Miss Gibson later joined Gardner Mulloy of Miami and Denver to win the mixed doubles title. They defeated Bob Howe of Australia and Darlene Hard, Montebello, Calif., 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Bad Day for Rosewall.

It was a particularly bad day for Rosewall, one of the Wimbledon favorites. Before the doubles match, he was beaten by one of his young countrymen, Neale Fraser, in the final of the men's singles, 5-7, 6-3, 9-7.

Miss Buxton won the women's singles, sweeping past Pat Ward of Britain, 6-4, 6-0.

The eye-opener for the U.S. contingent was the victory for Seixas and Richardson over Hoad and Rosewall, who are generally considered to be the world's best doubles players as well as the one-two seeds in singles play.

Seixas and Richardson have paired only occasionally in doubles play and the results have caused little commotion until today. But, after dropping the first set, they bounced back to take complete charge of the Aussie Davis Cup aces.

The victory of Misses Brough and Fry was no surprise since they have teamed frequently and are top-seeded for the doubles at Wimbledon. Miss Gibson, winner of 18 tournaments this year, and Miss Buxton rallied somewhat in the second set but were closed out quickly after pulling even in the 10th game.

U.S. Experimenting.

The Seixas-Richardson team is one of the experimental units being used by American Davis Cup forces, whose situation has been made somewhat desperate by the loss of Tony Trabert to the pros. Trabert previously had teamed with Seixas in Davis Cup play.

There was only one service break in the first set, the Australians taking Richardson's service on brilliant cross court shots by Hoad. Hoad dropped his service in the eighth game of the second set. The Americans won that second set 6-3 and then romped to a 4-0 lead in the decider.

The Australians broke Richardson's service in the eighth game but their rally came too late and Seixas closed out the match in the tenth game. The Philadelphian won his service at love.

It was the first time this American combination had defeated Australia's Davis Cup pair.

63 by Mayer, He Leads With 198 at Philly

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 (UP)—Dick Mayer, a slim, hungry pro who hasn't won a tournament this year, shot a record five-under-par 63 today to take over first place in the Philadelphia Daily News $20,000 tournament with 198 total for 54 holes.

Mayer, a transplanted New England Yankee who was born in Old Greenwich, Conn., and who plays out of St. Petersburg, Fla., was six under par for the Cobbs Creek course after three days in his bid for the $4000 top prize money.

The blond from St. Pete was three strokes ahead of second place Bud Holscher, of Apple Valley, Calif., whose sub-par 66 today gave him a 201 total.

Mike Fetchick, of Mahopac, N. Y., was third, one stroke behind Holscher, with Arnold Palmer, Latrobe, Pa., Doug Ford of Mahopac and Bill Casper Jr., of Chula Vista, Calif., the second day leader, all tied for fourth with 203.

Miz Clementine Victor In $37,300 Stake

STANTON, Del., June 23 (UP) — The Calumet Farms' Miz Clementine, given a smart ride by Jackie Westrope, grabbed the second leg of the distaff big three at Delaware Park today, turning back 11 other fillies and mares in the $37,300 New Castle Handicap before a crowd of 22,647.

Four Tennis Stars---Three Champions

Prep Stars Shankle, Sinkewicz Accept Missouri U. Scholarships

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 23—Two topflight Illinois high school football stars from the St. Louis area, Theodore E. Sinkewicz of Belleville and Walter Shankle of East St. Louis, were among eight recipients of University of Missouri athletic scholarships announced today by Don Faurot, M. U. director of athletics, today. All of the eight were graduated from their respective schools this spring, and all are to enroll in the university in the fall.

Sinkewicz, who plays halfback in football, is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 215 pounds. His coach was H. B. Tabor.

Shankle, who captained the East St. Louis team last fall, is also a halfback and an outstanding punter with an average of 43 yards. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. His coach was Fred Cameron. Both Sinkewicz and Shankle ranked third in the upper third of their class.

Others on the scholarship list announced today were:

Fred (English) Doerge, Joplin tackle who is 6 feet tall and weighs 197 pounds. He was president of his senior class and ranked scholastically in its middle third. His coach was Fred Kaminsky.

Doug Whiting, Lee's Summit end, who is 6 feet 2 and weighs 180. He ranked in the upper half of his class and was coached by J. D. Copple.

Joseph Rittman, Lee's Summit quarterback, who is 6 feet 3, and weighs 185. He ranked in the upper 10 per cent of his class, and was coached by J. D. Copple.

Vernon Jones, Kansas City Paseo hurdler. He is a member of the National Honor Society, the all-state track team and the all-state band. He ranked in the upper fourth of his class and was coached by Bob Gauldin.

Walter D. Johnson, Oak Grove quarter-miler, who is the state Class C quarter-mile champion. He was president of his senior class and ranked in the middle third of his class. Dean Owens was his coach.

Donald F. Trogdon, Ash Grove basketball player, who was named to the Class C All-State and the All-Southwest Missouri teams last Spring. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds. He was captain of his team in 1956 and averaged 27 points per game in that season. He was president of his senior class and ranked in the middle third of the class. Jack Farnham was his coach.

Pro-Amateur Golf.

A pro-amateur golf event, in which each professional will team with three amateurs, is scheduled for Westborough Country Club tomorrow. Pro Tony Henschel is taking entries by telephone, WOodland 1-9558.

Shoot Man Wins His Fifth Race At Fairmount

By Herman Wecke

Shoot Man won his fifth straight race of the current meeting when he finished fast in the feature at Fairmount race track last night. John Delahoussaye rode the favored Shoot Man to a two-length victory over Glad Bulnes.

Shoot Man was fourth going into the stretch but won easily to pay $6.40. The horse is owned by H. H. Rendleman. He was the first horse to win five races in this meeting.

Royal Intrigue, a Mexican horse owned by Mitchell Aboumrad, was third.

ASK ME ANOTHER

By Harold Tuthill

"Recently I was told that Jimmy Foxx, who hit 58 home runs in 1932, was not given credit for two more he hit because they were made in games rained out before five innings could be played. Would major league records show how many Foxx lost in this manner?" A. L. Clarke.

Major league records do not show whether Foxx was deprived of any home runs because of rain-shortened unofficial games. Foxx has been quoted as saying he was deprived of two home runs in 1932 but a check of the Athletics' games that year failed to bear out Jimmie's contention.

For a further check, write Foxx in care of the Miami, Fla. Marlins.

"I know the speed of Bob Feller's fast ball has been timed, but what was it?"

Jack Netzeband, 8941 Zev.

In a test, Aug. 23, 1946, conducted by the U.S. Army Ordnance Dept., Washington, D.C., Feller's fast ball was timed at 98 miles per hour.

New Fee Golf Course Opens At St. Charles

The St. Charles Golf Club, an 18-hole fee course, will open today. The course is the first to be opened for unaffiliated players in some years, during which a number of public courses have either closed or announced plans for closing.

Clarence O'Hare, a former president of the Public Links Golf Association here, will be the pro. The St. Charles course is located south of the St. Charles city limits.

To reach it, follow Highway 94 south through St. Charles one mile to Friedens road and turn left on Friedens.

Four lakes are located on the rolling course, although there are just two "lake holes." A temporary clubhouse is in use now, but a $100,000 structure is under construction.

Operators of the course are Henry and Francis Vogt.

Another World Record for Swaps! Runs Mile and Sixteenth in 1:39

Winner Carries 130 Lbs.

INGLEWOOD, Calif., June 23 (UP)—The amazing California comet, Swaps, raced to a new world's record for a mile and a sixteenth today in scoring a victory by better than two lengths in the $52,250 Inglewood Handicap at Hollywood Park, setting a mark of 1:39 flat.

It was the second world's record Swaps has eclipsed in consecutive starts at Hollywood Park as he coasted home in front of Mister Gus by a margin of about two and a half lengths. Bobby Brocato was third in the field of seven starters.

Swaps cut a second and two-fifths off his own world's record and he did it with 130 pounds on his back to astound turf followers. The crowd of some 50,000 fans that turned out to see Swaps run gave him an ovation as he came to the winner's circle and the applause and cheers continued for nearly five minutes after the finish of the race.

Two weeks ago Swaps set a mile mark of 1:33 1-5 in breaking Citation's six-year-old mark. His mile time today was a fantastic 1:32 3-5 and it demonstrated the speed of the race and the swift pace cut out by Bobby Brocato.

For unlike the Argonaut Mile in which Swaps set the pace and pulled away from Bobby Brocato, today Bobby Brocato with a nine-pound pull in weights went out on top and Swaps came along smoothly in second position with Mister Gus third and Colonel Mack fourth.

Willie Shoemaker stayed within a length of Bobby Brocato on Swaps and Mister Gus was close behind in third place by less than a length most of the way.

Swaps Opens Up.

But when the small field reached the final turn Swaps was called on for speed and he responded with a burst that had him passing Bobby Brocato at the quarter pole like he was standing still.

Swaps opened up a lead of about three lengths at the eighth pole but then Mister Gus made his move and pulled past Bobby Brocato.

Mister Gus is a stablemate of Porterhouse which beat Swaps in the $100,000 Californian earlier in the meeting. But Willie Shoemaker did not fall asleep on Swaps this time.

As they headed for the wire, he rapped the California champion smartly and the son of imported Khaled responded with a burst of speed that found him nearly three lengths in front as they crossed under the wire.

Swaps set the mile and a sixteenth mark of 1:40 2/5 last year in the Californian with 115 pounds on his back and his feat of carrying an added 15 pounds to so fast a mark was considered amazing.

Beat Own Mark.

The time of 1:39 was faster than Swaps' mark of 1:35-3.5 which he set for a world's record at a mile and 70 yards in the Broward Handicap last winter at Gulfstream Park although a mile and a sixteenth is about 40 yards more than a mile and 70 yards.

As befits a champion, Swaps was sent off at odds of one to four and he returned $2.60, 2.50 and 2.10 across the board. Mister Gus paid $5.20 and 2.30 for place and show and Bobby Brocato returned $2.10 for show.

The victory carried a net purse of $29,450 to the winner and it ran Swaps' lifetime earnings to $541,050.

It was the second time this year Swaps has carried 130 pounds to victory and it helped solidify his claims to horse of the year honors, the goal of his owner Rex C. Ellsworth.

'Shake Hands, but Don't Come Out Swinging'

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

OPERATION BUCKETS AND BALLS THRIVING, THANKS TO 16-HOUR DAY BY PRO AMBO

By Jack Rice

The man with the office tan, his horn-rimmed gaze intent on the golf ball, drew back the club and at the top of his swing could not wait to enjoy the results. He looked up, toward the "200" marker. The club came down, the ball fell off the tee as the wind in the wake of the club shook it loose, and Walter Ambo gave his practiced professional sympathy.

Ambo adjusted his pupil's hands on the club grip and guided him back to a good address of the ball, and spoke soothingly of keeping an eye on it, before and during and even a little bit after, making a pass at it. Ambo has been doing this since 1937, working for other people. Now he does it for himself, in the glorious freedom of a man in his own business, working 16 hours a day. He operates a golf range.

Golf ranges are not a dying art form, but they have been dwindling. Locations good for a golf range probably are even better for a subdivision, or a shopping center. It is a business that serves the public, but people are not its major problem, and that's something different in commerce, too.

Large and Economy Sizes.

Ambo and his pupil had come to the bottom of the bucket of golf balls, economy size $1.00, large size 65 cents, and to the end of the lesson.

They walked back to the office, and a bill was toted. Ambo added, and as he did the sum, lesson and golf balls and cokes, he said there had been some good hits. "Well, maybe by the end of summer I'll have it," his pupil said, looking pleased. Ambo grinned and nodded and made change. The pupil said, "Give me another bucket, big one."

Ambo leaned on the counter in the office, located at the center of the long line of rubber tee-mats. The counter was a show case, and it held the bare necessities of a golfer's life, tees and balls and gloves and the hats that are just beginning to let the human race catch up with peacocks, who have known all along that the brightest plumage looks best on the male.

In Area of Big Business.

"Location is everything," said Ambo, answering a question. His location is on Clayton road, near the Terminal Railroad viaduct. It's a neighborhood that has attracted such merchants as Stix-Baer-Fuller and Howard Johnson, dry goods and ice cream, respectively, and a man with some golf balls and about eight leased acres can consider himself among some major business men. There must be a similarity in trade patterns, too.

"About 70 per cent of ours is established trade," said Ambo. "Thirty per cent of the trade is drop-in. That established trade is the reason we use a Number 5 ball, higher compression than you usually find on a golf range. It gives a good click to the ball, and it'll go almost 95 per cent of what you'll get from a name-brand ball.

"Lot of ranges, they use a No. 6, to protect the operator against some novice cutting it in half on him. Balls cost 50 cents apiece, and it mounts up. We're moving our fences, because since April we've lost 5000 balls, people hitting them over the fences."

It had been guessed that perhaps half of the business came from one-bucket customers, youths trying to give a first date a commercial on their muscles or their sense of humor. Ambo said it isn't so. There always is a certain Coney island element, but it's less now than ever, possibly down to 1 per cent.

Golf ranges were going best during the depression, he recalled. "A golfer with the habit already formed took the cheapest way out. He'd hit a bucket of balls for 35 cents, and get about the same amount of exercise he was accustomed to on a round of golf, without the 75-cent or $1 greens fee,"—and whatever became of those prices?

Ranges in the St. Louis area now number about five, "this one, and Holiday Hill and Mac's and Nelson's and Cool Valley, and there's probably one more somewhere," said Ambo. "There were at least 10 during the depression, I know."

Once Tried Tourney Trail.

Ambo has been professional at Westborough, and at Meadow Brook, good club jobs, and he quit for a brief try at the tournament swing. It wasn't even a half-swing. He was brought home by that great curb to adventure, money. He settled on the golf range, a form of speculation not quite so wild as trying to beat the Littlers and the Sneads at their own touring racket.

It has its independence, too, running a driving range. "The twelfth guy who gives you trouble, you can look at him and say, 'Don't you feel well today?'", Ambo said. A man came to the door of the office and said, "I'd like a lesson—I'm just passing by and only have today in town."

Ambo frowned, as though he had just been denied a pleasure, and said, "I'm awfully sorry, but it's almost 2 o'clock, and I haven't had lunch yet, and I've a lesson coming up." He gave the man a bucket of golf balls, dollar size, and headed for the neighboring ice cream stand. He sat where he could see his slice-and-hook haven, broiling under the county sun, and said, "It'll come along, and eventually I'll be the only pro who ever started on the tournament circuit at 50."

Peoria Girls Beat Manchester Team

The Lettes from Peoria, Ill., scored a 7-5 victory over Manchester in a girls' softball game last night on the loser's field. Carolyn Thome's single in the sixth inning scored the winning runs. Marcella Rose and Shirley Sprothkamp of Manchester each hit a triple. The two teams meet again tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Manchester field.

Handball Tourney.

Semi-finals will be played this afternoon in the championship class of the Forest Park invitational handball tournament. Four quarter-final matches in Class A also are scheduled.

CHAMPIONSHIP CLASS

Class A Quarterfinals.

11 p.m. — Dave Pearce and Dick Pearce vs. Phil Kavanaugh and Bill Monahan; 1 p.m.—Nick Riggio and Bill Adler vs. Angelo Lombardo and Marvin Rosengarten; 2:30 p.m.—Al Holtzman and Jack Dickers vs. Walter Mazzini and John Finnegan; 3:30 p.m. Joe Stein and Ed Rosen vs. Meyer Eckerman and Morris Bidnick.

Geiss Plays Richter For Golf Title Today

possible showers, it doesn't require too many long irons from most top amateurs, and if Richter can keep his new-found putting brilliance he should stay with Geiss who can be briefly and occasionally erratic.

In the last couple of years business pressure has prevented Geiss from engaging in as much tournament play as in earlier years, but his game was so sound that he hasn't lost much.

And in this latest venture Geiss has been hitting the greens and scoring sharply. He was two or three strokes under par in every match except his even-par shooting against Joe Switzer in their semifinal match Friday. In that one Geiss got all of his four birdies on the second nine in going from a one-up standing to a 3 and 2 victory.

In his progress to the final Geiss defeated Sunset's young Tom Hulliverson, 3-2; Harry Lebeau, 2-1 (a victory that included a hole-in-one on No. 8), recent champion Les Slattery Jr., 5-4, and then Switzer.

But Richter could claim almost as significant a performance. He was one over par but one up in a quarterfinal upset victory over defending Champion Bob Goalby of Belleville's St. Clair C.C. Bob also had trimmed young Charley Fawcett and outlasted the home club's hope Roger Hemker, before trimming the suddenly-wild Goalby and then defeating the veteran Harry Paller.

Almost a Toss-up.

Richter was three under par in turning aside the 41-year-old Paller who perhaps never had played better in 20 years of effort in these tournaments.

So it's almost a toss-up, with a nod to Geiss, but Richter, whose wife is a Webster Groves girl, may have the strongest gallery support today. He's had rooters all along, and they'll probably gather in number for the 1:30 p.m. afternoon round.

Braves Take Eighth In Row; Dodgers Win

two walks, a sacrifice and Don Hoak's steal of home to score four in the tenth inning. A Pirate spurt in the ninth ended abruptly when Jack Shepard, whose single tied the game, was picked off first by Jim Davis. Ernie Banks hit his fifteenth homer for Chicago in the seventh, breaking up a scoreless duel between Warren Hacker and Bob Friend. Relief Man Roy Face was the eventual loser and Davis the winner.

There were fireworks in Chicago when Philley charged the mound in the sixth inning after he had been hit by Grim's pitch. As Philley neared the mound, he wound up to swing but Grim let one go. He missed. Philley threw a punch. He missed, too. Players from both benches separated the pair and Philley was given the rest of the day off.

After the incident, Sherm Lollar doubled to right, scoring Jim Delsing, who ran for Philley. Grim, probably un-nerved by the scrap, walked Walt Dropo who took second on an infield out and scored on Luis Aparicio's single.

All-State Player From Tulsa to St. Louis U.

John Paul McCaffrey of Kansas City, Mo., who attended Cascia Hall High in Tulsa, Okla., and won all-state honors, has been accepted for enrollment at St. Louis University.

McCaffery is a 6-foot-7-inch, 195 pounder who averaged more than 20 points per game during his senior year. He lettered four years in baseball and basketball.

Lovely Winner In Casting Meet

William J. Lovely, member of the host Carondelet club, captured the all-accuracy title in the city casting championship tournament yesterday at Carondelet Park. Lovely, winner of the five-eighths event in the national meet last year, topped the field in both the three-eighths and five-eighths-ounce distance bait events.

Clem Forcade, former national titleholder, took first place in the salmon fly distance event and Jim Venable was the trout fly winner.

Today's program, consisting of accuracy events, will run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Win Rifle Awards.

Fifteen-year-old Mary Ann Garamella of 1210 North Market st., and Clement. N. Evans, 16, of 4915 Pershing, have been awarded expert rifleman medals, the second highest award in Junior shooting. Louis C. Berra Jr., 18 of 6735 Plainview, was awarded the highest award, the distinguished rifleman medal.

Busy Boxers.

Archie Moore and Willie Pep are the only active fighters who have fought more than 200 bouts.

Born Mighty Beats Fabius in Ohio Derby

CLEVELAND, O., June 23 (UP)—Cornelius V. Whitney's Born Mighty, a 16-1 shot, scored a stunning one-length victory over the Preakness winner, Calumet Farms' Fabius, in the $43,340 Ohio Derby at Thistledown today.

Racing through a rainstorm, which struck a few minutes before post time, and turned the track sloppy, Fabius tired badly in the final yards of the mile and an eighth event, after having held a three-length lead in the stretch.

Toby B., from the Van Deren and Deming Stable, finished third, a nose behind Fabius.

Born Mighty, ridden by John Choquette, covered the route in 1:55 4-5 and paid $34, $9.00 and $5.40 across the board.

Fabius, the 3-5 favorite, paid $3.20 and $2.60 and Toby D. refunded $4.00 to show.

It was the first stakes victory for Born Mighty, whose trainers previously had indicated that he would not start if the track were "off."

The storm broke, however, after the derby field was enroute to the post.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Feverish Six Months Of Boxing History.

ROCKY MARCIANO'S retirement as heavyweight champion of the world was, of course, the outstanding event in boxing history for the first six months of 1956. But there were many other outstanding events. Among them:

RAY ROBINSON'S fourth round knockout of Carl (Bobo) Olson in Los Angeles before 20,083 persons who paid $228,500 to set a new receipts record for boxing in California. Robinson retained the middleweight title which he won from Olson in December.

JOHNNY SAXTON regained the welterweight championship from Carmen Basilio in Chicago on a 15-round decision, was roundly booed and criticized but the referee of the match, Frank Gilmer, a Chicago lawyer, has since been named chairman of the Illinois Athletic Commission.

SANDY SADDLER defeated Flash Elorde of the Philippines by a technical knockout in the thirteenth round at San Francisco before 5000 and gate receipts of $30,000. Saddler, long noted for his "dirty" tactics in the ring, was at his worst in this one and the referee was severely criticized for permitting the featherweight champion to ignore the rules.

PASCUAL PEREZ of Argentina won a 15-round decision in Buenos Aires in defense of his flyweight title before 25,000, the largest crowd ever to attend a boxing match in his country.

ART ARAGON defeated Jimmy Carter at Los Angeles before 10,103 who paid $44,247 to bring the receipts for Aragon's fights in California to well over the million dollar mark, although he has never held a title.

Aragon sought a match for the 160-pound title with Robinson on the basis of his drawing power but the new California Commission ruled that he was too light to be a serious opponent for Robinson.

ARCHIE MOORE kayoed Yolande Pompey in London in the tenth round at Harringay Arena before a capacity of 11,000 with receipts of more than $100,000. This enabled Moore to keep his light heavyweight championship and he is the outstanding contender as the successor to Marciano.

Moore is to meet James J. Parker in Toronto, Canada, in July and with Jack Kearns and Jimmy Johnston leading the ballyhoo you can bet that they'll try to convince the world that it will be for the heavyweight crown.

But there's always FLOYD PATTERSON of Brooklyn to consider. He leaped into the front of the heavyweight picture with a split decision over Tommy Hurricane Jackson in New York. Floyd broke a bone in his hand in the encounter, however, and it is questionable whether he'll be able to meet Moore in September as had been planned.

These were some of the happenings in the ring and there was much activity related to boxing outside the ring with investigations and court action.

Court Action.

THE United States Department of Justice completed its monopoly suit against the International Boxing Club but the decision is not expected to be handed down for some months.

A California committee, at the instigation of Gov. Knight, conducted a probe of boxing in Los Angeles and San Francisco and came up with a lot of charges which resulted in the resignation of the commission. Results of the hearings are expected to be published soon and are said to be "red hot."

Julius Helfand, chairman of the New York Commission, who bawled out Lou Radzienda, president of the National Boxing Association for permitting Saxton to sign his own contract for the match in Chicago with Basilio, turned around and permitted the same thing for their return, scheduled for Syracuse, N. Y., probably in August.

The New York Commission also broke with the Massachusetts Commission and an agreement in effect between the two organizations will not be renewed.

So, packed with news as have been the past six months, the remaining six of this year should be even more so.

$100,000 Challenge.

BERNARD GLICKMAN, manager of Chicago middleweight, Bobby Boyd, has offered to guarantee Robinson $100,000 for a title match. And Gene Fullmer, Salt Lake City machinist is angling for a bout with the 160-pound titleholder. Apparently the boys think the first one to get to Robinson will beat him. But Ray is reported to be playing golf in Westchester County, New York, and has no immediate plans for a title defense.

Among other upcoming matches of interest are: Willie Pastrano, New Orleans, vs. Johnny Holman, Chicago; Ezzard Charles vs. Pat McMurtry; Joe Giambra vs. Rocky Castellani, July 13 at Madison Square Garden; Tony Anthony vs. Tony Johnson, July 20, at Madison Square Garden.

Jack Dempsey celebrated his 61st birthday by calling Patterson a club fighter . . . Edouardo Lausse, the Argentine middleweight who ended his previous visit to this country on a sour note by losing to Boyd, is to return soon for another whirl at the middleweights . . . Cherif Hamia, the Algerian featherweight, has gone back to France, but is expected to return soon, possibly to fight Saddler for the 126-pound title; Eddie Machen, young California heavyweight, is being touted as a sure title contender within a year . . . Tony De Marco exploded Vince Martinez with a defeat in Boston . . . Vince didn't look too hot at The Arena in defeating Chris Christiansen, despite his clippings.

Fraser Is Surprise In Singles

LONDON, June 23 (AP) — American pairs won both the men's and women's doubles titles today in the London Lawn Tennis Tournament, final warmup before the start of the Wimbledon championships on Monday.

The team of veteran Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and young Ham Richardson of Westfield, N.J., upset Australians Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall, 6-8, 6-3, 6-4 for the men's title after Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Shirley Fry of St. Petersburg, Fla., had won the women's doubles, 6-2, 7-5 from Althea Gibson of New York and Britain's Angela Buxton.

Miss Gibson later joined Gardner Mulloy of Miami and Denver to win the mixed doubles title. They defeated Bob Howe of Australia and Darlene Hard, Montebello, Calif., 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Bad Day for Rosewall.

It was a particularly bad day for Rosewall, one of the Wimbledon favorites. Before the doubles match, he was beaten by one of his young countrymen, Neale Fraser, in the final of the men's singles, 5-7, 6-3, 9-7.

Miss Buxton won the women's singles, sweeping past Pat Ward of Britain, 6-4, 6-0.

The eye-opener for the U.S. contingent was the victory for Seixas and Richardson over Hoad and Rosewall, who are generally considered to be the world's best doubles players as well as the one-two seeds in singles play.

Seixas and Richardson have paired only occasionally in doubles play and the results have caused little commotion until today. But, after dropping the first set, they bounced back to take complete charge of the Aussie Davis Cup aces.

The victory of Misses Brough and Fry was no surprise since they have teamed frequently and are top-seeded for the doubles at Wimbledon. Miss Gibson, winner of 18 tournaments this year, and Miss Buxton rallied somewhat in the second set but were closed out quickly after pulling even in the 10th game.

U.S. Experimenting.

The Seixas-Richardson team is one of the experimental units being used by American Davis Cup forces, whose situation has been made somewhat desperate by the loss of Tony Trabert to the pros. Trabert previously had teamed with Seixas in Davis Cup play.

There was only one service break in the first set, the Australians taking Richardson's service on brilliant cross court shots by Hoad. Hoad dropped his service in the eighth game of the second set. The Americans won that second set 6-3 and then romped to a 4-0 lead in the decider.

The Australians broke Richardson's service in the eighth game but their rally came too late and Seixas closed out the match in the tenth game. The Philadelphian won his service at love.

It was the first time this American combination had defeated Australia's Davis Cup pair.

63 by Mayer, He Leads With 198 at Philly

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 (UP)—Dick Mayer, a slim, hungry pro who hasn't won a tournament this year, shot a record five-under-par 63 today to take over first place in the Philadelphia Daily News $20,000 tournament with 198 total for 54 holes.

Mayer, a transplanted New England Yankee who was born in Old Greenwich, Conn., and who plays out of St. Petersburg, Fla., was six under par for the Cobbs Creek course after three days in his bid for the $4000 top prize money.

The blond from St. Pete was three strokes ahead of second place Bud Holscher, of Apple Valley, Calif., whose sub-par 66 today gave him a 201 total.

Miz Clementine Victor In $37,300 Stake

STANTON, Del., June 23 (UP) — The Calumet Farms' Miz Clementine, given a smart ride by Jackie Westrope, grabbed the second leg of the distaff big three at Delaware Park today, turning back 11 other fillies and mares in the $37,300 New Castle Handicap before a crowd of 22,647.

Four Tennis Stars---Three Champions

Prep Stars Shankle, Sinkewicz Accept Missouri U. Scholarships

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 23—Two topflight Illinois high school football stars from the St. Louis area, Theodore E. Sinkewicz of Belleville and Walter Shankle of East St. Louis, were among eight recipients of University of Missouri athletic scholarships announced today by Don Faurot, M. U. director of athletics, today. All of the eight were graduated from their respective schools this spring, and all are to enroll in the university in the fall.

Sinkewicz, who plays halfback in football, is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 215 pounds. His coach was H. B. Tabor.

Shankle, who captained the East St. Louis team last fall, is also a halfback and an outstanding punter with an average of 43 yards. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. His coach was Fred Cameron. Both Sinkewicz and Shankle ranked third in the upper third of their class.

Others on the scholarship list announced today were:

Fred (English) Doerge, Joplin tackle who is 6 feet tall and weighs 197 pounds. He was president of his senior class and ranked scholastically in its middle third. His coach was Fred Kaminsky.

Doug Whiting, Lee's Summit end, who is 6 feet 2 and weighs 180. He ranked in the upper half of his class and was coached by J. D. Copple.

Joseph Rittman, Lee's Summit quarterback, who is 6 feet 3, and weighs 185. He ranked in the upper 10 per cent of his class, and was coached by J. D. Copple.

Vernon Jones, Kansas City Paseo hurdler. He is a member of the National Honor Society, the all-state track team and the all-state band. He ranked in the upper fourth of his class and was coached by Bob Gauldin.

Walter D. Johnson, Oak Grove quarter-miler, who is the state Class C quarter-mile champion. He was president of his senior class and ranked in the middle third of his class. Dean Owens was his coach.

Donald F. Trogdon, Ash Grove basketball player, who was named to the Class C All-State and the All-Southwest Missouri teams last Spring. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds. He was captain of his team in 1956 and averaged 27 points per game in that season. He was president of his senior class and ranked in the middle third of the class. Jack Farnham was his coach.

Pro-Amateur Golf.

A pro-amateur golf event, in which each professional will team with three amateurs, is scheduled for Westborough Country Club tomorrow. Pro Tony Henschel is taking entries by telephone, WOodland 1-9558.

Shoot Man Wins His Fifth Race At Fairmount

By Herman Wecke

Shoot Man won his fifth straight race of the current meeting when he finished fast in the feature at Fairmount race track last night. John Delahoussaye rode the favored Shoot Man to a two-length victory over Glad Bulnes.

Shoot Man was fourth going into the stretch but won easily to pay $6.40. The horse is owned by H. H. Rendleman. He was the first horse to win five races in this meeting.

Royal Intrigue, a Mexican horse owned by Mitchell Aboumrad, was third.

Delahoussaye rode Young Romance to a victory in the third race.

Ask Me Another

By Harold Tuthill

"Recently I was told that Jimmy Foxx, who hit 58 home runs in 1932, was not given credit for two more he hit because they were made in games rained out before five innings could be played. Would major league records show how many Foxx lost in this manner?" A. L. Clarke.

Major league records do not show whether Foxx was deprived of any home runs because of rain-shortened unofficial games. Foxx has been quoted as saying he was deprived of two home runs in 1932 but a check of the Athletics' games that year failed to bear out Jimmie's contention.

For a further check, write Foxx in care of the Miami, Fla. Marlins.

"I know the speed of Bob Feller's fast ball has been timed, but what was it?"

Jack Netzeband, 8941 Zev.

In a test, Aug. 23, 1946, conducted by the U.S. Army Ordnance Dept., Washington, D.C., Feller's fast ball was timed at 98 miles per hour.

New Fee Golf Course Opens At St. Charles

The St. Charles Golf Club, an 18-hole fee course, will open today. The course is the first to be opened for unaffiliated players in some years, during which a number of public courses have either closed or announced plans for closing.

Clarence O'Hare, a former president of the Public Links Golf Association here, will be the pro. The St. Charles course is located south of the St. Charles city limits.

To reach it, follow Highway 94 south through St. Charles one mile to Friedens road and turn left on Friedens.

Four lakes are located on the rolling course, although there are just two "lake holes." A temporary clubhouse is in use now, but a $100,000 structure is under construction.

Operators of the course are Henry and Francis Vogt.

Wenzler, Son of Memphis Pro, Faces Coe in Trans-Miss Golf Final

Veteran Seeks His 4th Title

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 23 (UP)—Charlie Coe of Oklahoma City sank a 15-foot putt on the 18th green today to down Jim Hiskey of Houston, Tex., one-up, in the semi-finals of the 53rd Trans - Mississippi golf tourney.

In the other semi-final match over the moist, steamy Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club course, Ronnie Wenzler of Memphis, Tenn., eliminated John P. Cain of Lubbock, Tex., 4 and 3.

Coe, three times Trans-Miss winner and former national amateur king, tees off against the Memphis State golfer tomorrow in the 36-hole championship round. The 21-year-old Wenzler is the son of a Memphis professional.

Coe had to go the 18-hole route to take out Hiskey, a 19-year-old University of Houston golfer.

Hiskey had the veteran amateur star one down at the turn after pitching a 50-foot shot into the cup from a sand trap on the eighth hole for an eagle two.

Coe evened the match on the 13th green with a par four, while Hiskey got in trouble and two-putted for a six.

The Oklahoma City golfer hit his second shot about 15 feet from the pin on 18 and Hiskey was to the right on the fringe.

Hiskey putted short while Coe cooly stroked his putt for a birdie three.

Coe toured the 35-36—71 layout with rounds of 36-34—70. Hiskey had a 35 on the front nine, but went two over on the back side.

Wenzler and Cain were even at the turn, but Wenzler came alive on the back side. He took two straight holes, halving one and ending it on the 15th green.

In the quarterfinals earlier in the day, Coe fired a four-under-par through 17 holes to down Rex Baxter Jr. of Amarillo, Tex., 2 and 1.

Hiskey advanced to the semi-finals by taking out Richie Norville of Oklahoma City one-up. He sank a seven-foot birdie putt to win.

Wenzler gained his semifinal round berth with a 5 and 4 walkaway victory over Art Hall of Tulsa. Hall had played the upset role, coming into today's quarterfinals. The 19-year-old Tulsan had eliminated Jimmy Jackson, defending champion from St. Louis, Mo., and Mason Rudolph, western amateur champion from Clarksville, Tenn.

Cain downed Ab Justice of Oklahoma City, 3 and 2, in the remaining quarterfinal match.

4200 Pins---Each Man Rolling a Single Game

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Every one of the above bowlers last season experienced the thrill of the perfect (300) game. Thus, the 14 knocked down an aggregate of 4200 pins, each rolling a single game. They were among the honored guests at a banquet at Hotel Melbourne. Standing, from left: ROBERT DIERKES, WILLIAM McCULLOUGH, EARL HART, RUDY ENGEL, HOMER HOLTSCLAW, EARL STERLING, FRED BANGERT JR., JOSEPH SINGER; front row: JOSEPH KOZICKI, FRED UHLE, WOODY HULSEY, CARL HUNNING, WILLIAM NEIGER, RICHARD HEIN. There were 25 perfect games rolled here last season in league play.

Ballwin Could Clinch Flag in County Today

Ballwin can clinch the first-half pennant in the American division of the County Baseball League by winning at Manchester today. The first half ends today.

If Ballwin, which has a 7-2 record, loses, Vigus (6-3) can tie for first by beating visiting Creve Coeur. If the race ends in a tie, the teams will decide the title in a play-off which will be the first part of a doubleheader the next time they meet on the regular schedule.

Vigus knocked the Twin City Reds out of the race with an 8-3 victory, featured by Emil Ksmmer's grand-slam homer.

In the National Division, which closes its first half next Sunday, Glencoe (7-1) is at Webster (3-3) today, and Twin City (6-1) calls at Florissant (4-3).

All County League games begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Pitches C.Y.C. No-Hitter.

Ted Imbierowicz, aged 11, was a big man in Baden the past week. He pitched a no-hitter for St. Jerome's in a C.Y.C. Bantam League game. Ted also had three hits as he and his mates defeated St. Pius, 14 to 0.

Hawks Sign Indiana Star

Wally Choice, 6-foot-5 Indiana University forward, was signed by the Hawks yesterday for next winter's National Basketball Association play. He is the sixth player to reach an agreement with Owner Ben Kerner.

Fifth best point scorer in the Big Ten last season, Choice tallied 463 points in 22 games for an average of 21, then was elected honorary captain and named most valuable player on the Hoosier squad. His field goal shooting average was .503, second best in conference history to the .504 compiled by Don Schlundt two seasons ago.

Choice converted 12 out 12 and 10 out of 10 free throws in two Big Ten games to tie a conference record. His season's conversion mark was .707. In one of his best outputs for a single game, Choice tallied 34 points against Illinois.

The newest Hawk—a native of Montclair, N. J.—played with the College All-Stars in their tour against the Harlem Globetrotters last April and also competed in the National A.A.U. tournament at Denver, scoring 93 points in three games.

He is attending summer school at Indiana U. and will join the Hawks in time for pre-season training drills.

Holy Founders Beats Ascension to Reach Parochial Semifinal

Ascension will oppose Seven Holy Founders in a semifinal of the C.Y.C. Parochial baseball title playoff tomorrow afternoon at Forest Park diamond No. 2.

Holy Founders reached the final by defeating Ascension, 5-1, yesterday. Winner of the Monday afternoon game will oppose Nativity in the final, Wednesday at 5 p.m. Twenty teams, all league winners, qualified for the title playoffs which started three weeks ago.

13 Baseball Letters Awarded to Billikens

Les Hohl, Jim Maletich, Tony Meglio, Jim Kahlmeyer and John Vitale were five seniors among 13 varsity baseball letter recipients at St. Louis University.

Others receiving monograms were Harold Alcorn, Charlie Barbaglia, Bob Page, Joe Shaughnessy, Bill Wynn, John McCartney, Dave Sanders and Claude Jacobs.

The Billiken baseball team won 13 and lost six games during the past season.

Patty Berg and Mrs. Hagge Are Tied for Lead

DETROIT, June 23 (AP)—Veteran Patty Berg, with a 4-under-par 71, pulled into a tie today with Marlene Bauer Hagge, lead in the Ladies' PGA championships since the opening round Thursday.

Going into the final round tomorrow on the women's par 75 Forest Lake Country Club course, Miss Berg, of St. Andrews, Ill., is backed by rounds of 71-73-71—215. Mrs. Hagge of Asheville, N.C., earned her 215 total with 69-73-73.

They were five strokes ahead of their nearest rival, young Mickey Wright, San Diego, Calif., who added a 72 today to a pair of 74's for 220.

Miss Berg picked up four shots on the last eight holes to force the deadlock.

On that finishing stretch, Patty canned three birdies, one with a 30-foot chip shot for a deuce, as she posted 36-35 against par of 36-39.

The two leaders also are the pace-setters on the current LPGA tour. Mrs. Hagge, winner of four of the 13 previous tournaments, is the leading money winner. Miss Berg, bidding for the only major title which she never has held, is No. 2 in money standings.

Miss Wright, 21-year-old Californian, had five birdies in her 35-37—72 as she moved up to third place.

Kathy Cornelius, Lake Worth, Fla., leaped from ninth to fourth at 222 after her second sub-par flurry in a row. Following a 79 start, she shot 72 and 71 yesterday and today.

Tied in the next spot at 223 were Alice Bauer, Sarasota, Fla., and Joyce Ziske, Waterford, Wis., each with 75; and Betty Jameson, San Antonio, with 77.

Defending champion Bev Hanson, Apple Valley, Calif., was next at 224 after her best round so far, a 72.

OUTDOORS by James A. Kearns

Another Plentiful Squirrel Season Ahead.

SQUIRREL HUNTERS can look forward to a good season in Missouri starting July 1, Donald M. Christisen, biologist for the State Conservation Commission, told Outdoors.

He said prospects are for a season that might even surpass last year's, the second best in the last nine years on a rating of squirrels bagged for each hour of hunting.

Christisen's optimistic prediction is based on last fall's and winter's mast foods, which were in sufficient supply to insure a substantial parent squirrel stock. Missouri hunters take 1,500,000 to 3,000,000 squirrels a season depending on size of the crop.

Generally, sportsmen like to shoot young squirrels, because they have a better flavor. When the percentage of squirrels shot by hunters includes a high percentage of young, it indicates a good crop of bushytails in the current year.

On that basis, the 1955 season was a banner one, as the take of young squirrels was an estimated 65 per cent of the total killed—the highest percentage since the commission began studies along this line in 1947.

Christisen comes up with all sorts of statistics on each squirrel season through the help of 275 Missouri hunters who cooperate with him in these studies.

1955 Bag 1.16 An Hour.

He has just finished computation which showed that hunters bagged an average of 1.16 squirrels for each hour in the field in 1955, that 2.45 squirrels were seen by a hunter for each hour afield and that the average time per hunt was 2 hours and 31 minutes.

The bag of 1.16 per hour was the best in any year since 1947 with the exception of 1949, when the average was 1.36. Christisen pointed out that his figures might not reflect an entirely accurate picture of the average sportsmen since his hunter-co-operators are shooters with long experience, but he said the statistics would give a true comparison of one season with another.

Fox squirrels constituted 56.9 per cent of the 1955 harvest, which might seem strange to hunters in this section who see mostly gray squirrels. The reds are found chiefly in the north and west sections of the state.

Hunters in the north and eastern Ozark border region, which includes Franklin, Jefferson, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve, Perry, Gasconade and St. Louis counties, had just about the state-wide average of success in squirrel shooting last year, bagging 1.14 per hour.

The best hunting was in the western Ozark border region and the Northwest prairies.

Christisen is looking for more hunters to help in his studies. He wants sportsmen who take 2 or more squarrels a season. Instructions and a record book will be sent to those who send a postal card, with return address, to Squirrel Studies, Missouri Conservation Commission, 407 College avenue, Columbia, Mo.

A storm of protest has arisen among various sportsmen's groups over the White House's action in creating a new Bureau of Fisheries in the Department of the Interior and over the Senate's passage of a bill to create a Fisheries Commission within the department.

Both moves mean disruption of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and are designed to appease disgruntled segments of the commercial fishing industry that are having hard times, nine sportsmen's organizations complain.

As a result, they say, the nation's millions of sports fishermen will be hurt, as their interests will be subordinated to those of commercial fishermen either under the Bureau of Fisheries or, if the bill is passed by the House and signed by the President, under the Fisheries Commission.

Commercial fishing, sport fishing and game matters, including management of waterfowl, can be administered most effectively within a single agency like the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the sports groups contend.

"To divide fish and wildlife now into two separate bureaus would constitute a definite backward step," they say. "We shall fight such separation with all the force and persuasion of our command."

National Junior Soccer Cup Final Tonight at Schools Stadium

Engelberts Meet Team From Penn

By Dent McSkimming

Something new to St. Louis soccer is offered tonight at Public Schools Stadium when the Heidelberg club of western Pennsylvania opposes local St. Engelberts for the national Junior championship. This is the first time a St. Louis team has opposed one from the Pittsburgh area in a Junior final.

In fact, Junior championships for St. Louis are not numerous. Only the Schumachers (1945 and 1946) and Secos (1951) were victorious in the national final. And all met eastern seaboard teams in the final. The Heidelberg club has one previous success, that of 1947.

Players in this competition are restricted as to age. They must be under 18 years on July 1 prior to the start of the season. Some 18-year-olds have developed to the point where they would hold their own in Senior soccer. But, under national Cup rules, a Junior is not permitted to play with a Senior club, no matter how well qualified as to skill and age.

How Finalists Got There.

Heidelberg comes here with an impressive tournament record. Reaching the final round, the boys from the Pittsburgh area won five straight matches, scoring 11 goals while holding all opponents scoreless. Among their victims was the highly-rated Lighthouse Boys Club of Philadelphia. In that match Center Halfback Louis (Pug) Mitchell of Heidelberg distinguished himself in holding the Philadelphia center forward in complete control after the latter had enjoyed a great run of success in earlier games.

St. Engelbert's path to the western title was rough. It won from Fifth District, 3-0; from St. Philip, 1-0; from St. Agatha, 3-0, and beat St. Ambrose in the local final, 3-2, in a preliminary to the United States Olympic trial. Then, at Chicago, the dashing St. Louis lads defeated the well-coached Schawben Juniors, 3-2, in overtime to qualify for the national final.

Endler Scoring Ace.

Up to this point, St. Engelbert players have found the way to outscore teams that appeared to have better ball control. That was true in their victory over St. Agatha and again in their conquest of Schwaben at Chicago. One chief reason for this ability to win has been the scoring complex of Center Forward George Endler. He has a worthy helper in Bob Marquitz, his inside right.

Manager Ed Scott and Coach Harry Sunder have tried to keep St. Engelbert on edge with a regular practice program so that the long interval since the previous cup match may not be too harmful.

There will be a preliminary, starting at 7 p.m., between St. Mary's High and Prep Seminary.

Probable starting lineups:

| ST. ENGELBERT (St. Louis) | | HEIDELBERG (W. Pennsylvania) |
|---|---|---|
| King | G. | Ruilsko |
| Ventimiglia | R. F. | Nowakowski |
| Anderson | L. F. | W. Sypien |
| McGinnis | R. H. | J. Sypien |
| Rich | | |
| Zurmuehlen | C. H. | Mitchell |
| Manna | L. H. | Zinger |
| O'Brien | O. R. | Vock |
| Marquitz | I. R. | Kwasniewski |
| G. Endler | C. F. | Vassin |
| Bob Zurmuehlen | O. L. | Masurek |
| Malone | | Bombassaro |

Reserves: St. Engelbert—Genovese, Croce, R. Endler, Davis, Unger; Heidelberg—Kobasco, Bressanelli, Hutchinson. Referee — Prudencio Garcia. Time of halves 30 minutes. Place—Public Schools Stadium. Start 8:30 p.m.

To Import Danish Stars.

Eigel Jensen, sponsor of the Los Angeles Danes soccer club is still a-building. . . . Disappointed in the failure of Scottish Star Billy Steel to lead the Danes to the United States Open title, Owner Jensen has turned now to his native Denmark. . . . He has signed two of Denmark's outstanding stars, Per Knudsen, from the national champion club "AGF" and Erik Terkelsen, from another First Division club, and three other "name" players are considering his offers. . . . One of these is Denmark's "soccer professor" Knud Lundberg, who played a month ago for Denmark against Russia in Moscow. . . . All are officially listed as "amateurs" and must be provided jobs in Los Angeles. . . . Owner Jensen takes care of that detail easily; he controls a big machine tool factory.

One of the soccer world's most important tourneys, the European Cup, was won recently by Real Madrid. . . . In the final match, played at Paris, Real Madrid defeated Stade de Reims, 4-3. . . . In this tourney only the national champion club of each country is eligible and reports indicate the caliber of soccer is much higher than it is in the customary internationals in which teams are composed of "selected" stars. . . . The final was handled by an English referee assisted by two of his countrymen.

Parente's Village Team 'Champion of Champions' Winner

The Parente's Italian Village bowling team of the Wednesday Classic League, Stein's Bowl, won the "Champion of Champions" tournament, a post-season event, with 2707 scratch, plus 129 handicap, for a 2836 score. The Parentes, victor among 95 teams, had a team average of 840.

The members and their individual scores, made at Bowling Grand: Ann Maloney 527, Dotty Taylor 478, Pat McMaster 590, Fern Meyer 575 and Jane Forestner 547.

Amateur Notes

A senior softball team seeks a league affiliation and also is interested in booking practice games. Call William Summers, Parkview 7-1423.

The Moydell men's softball team wants to book games. Call Everett Parker after 4:30 p.m. at PRospect 6-1457.

Junior Soccer Title Their Goal

Each of these three St. Engelbert players was a team captain the past season. They will be in key positions for the St. Louis team in the National Junior soccer final at Public Schools Stadium tonight. They are, from left: BOB MARQUITZ (captain of Prep Seminary High); GEORGE ENDLER and KEVIN McGINNIS, co-captains of St. Louis U. High. Their opponent tonight is the Heidelberg (Pa.) team, Junior champions of the eastern district.

BASEBALL STUDENT DARK LOANED EAR TO STANKY FOR FIVE YEARS

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—When the Cardinals rolled into New York's Pennsylvania Station from Pittsburgh the first of this week, Alvin Ralph Dark hurried off the train, not because his family faced a packing problem for the westward move to St. Louis, but because the ball player had a date to take his wife and four children sight-seeing.

"I was a member of the Giants six years and we never did see New York," he said, smiling, "so we're going to try to do it all in one day. Impossible, of course, but it'll be fun for the kids."

For a player who had reached the $40,000 salary bracket in New York, sharing in two world series, Dark left the Giants with little misgivings. "Oh, I'll miss the fellas and Horace Stoneham was a generous club-owner, but St. Louis is so much closer to home for our folks and friends to come see us," he said, "and, besides, I'll never miss the Polo Grounds."

Although he has a lifetime .295 average, toward which he was moving rapidly as a result of his hot hitting this first week in a Cardinal uniform, the 33-year-old athlete felt the Polo Grounds with its close fences at the foul-lines and spacious center field kept him from batting better.

"I would like never to swing hard again, but it's tough to do," said the nimble infielder, regarded by many observers as the National League's most adept hit-and-run manipulator since Billy Herman.

Those Beckoning Barriers.

To illustrate the siren-like enchantment of the beckoning barriers at the Polo Grounds, Dark said that, slumping with the Giants, he talked over his hitting difficulties with his wife at breakfast the Sunday morning the Cardinals played their first series in New York this season. "I told her flatly," Al remembered, "that I wouldn't pull one ball all day."

In his first time up in a doubleheader he looked to the right, the field to which he has mastered hitting behind the runner even though he holds a bat down at the knob instead of choking his grip like most place-hitters.

"Then I looked to the left and the fence got me," Dark remembered. "I swung, pulled the ball and hit a home run off Dick Littlefield, but—and here's where I paid the penalty—I kept trying to pull and didn't get another hit in a three-game series."

Dark's wife, the former Adrienna Vyra Managan, was a church and high school sweetheart in Lake Charles, La., where Alvin has lived since he was 10 years old. Their children are Allison, 8; son Gene, 6; Eve, 3, and Margaret, just four months old.

The Darks, married since October, 1946, just after he'd signed into professional baseball for "more than $40,000," are Southern Baptists. The ball player neither drinks nor smokes, but doesn't "moralize" he said with a smile. He acknowledged tithing "at least" 10 per cent of his annual income to his church.

The athlete, brown-eyed with dark brown wavy hair, tanned features and white wide-spaced teeth, is about 5 feet 11 inches tall, but looks shorter because he plays slightly stooped and walks with a rolling gait. He's short-waisted and has arms and upper torsa so well-developed they give his slightly-bowed legs a spindly appearance. Yet the 180-pound Dark at Louisiana State University was a strong college punter according to Eddie Dyer, former Cardinal manager then officiating football.

One-Position Man.

In baseball Alvin played no position except shortstop from his boyhood at Comanche, Okla., and then Lake Charles. His father, Ralph Dark, was a tool-pusher in the oil fields and had been a semi-pro infielder. Al's mother, the former Cordia Stallions, has told him the family is Dutch and Scotch-Irish. He has an older brother, who pitched professionally for nearly five years before arm trouble sent him home, and two sisters, one younger.

Although he won an athletic scholarship to L.S.U., where as a sophomore he played tailback while Steve Van Buren of subsequent professional ballcarrying fame was his blocking back, Dark was doubtful of a sports career until Pat Monahan, veteran Cardinal scout, talked to him as he went into officers training with the Marines during World War II.

"Pat wanted to give me a bonus, but I understand Mr. Breadon was reluctant to run the risk because I was going into service," Dark explained. The Cardinals had to wait 12 years for him.

Playing with the Leathernecks in Hawaii and China after the shooting, Al said he was surprised to learn from his father in a letter that a Boston Braves scout, Ted McGrew, had called with an attractive offer. "I was surprised," the player related, "because I couldn't hit a curve in those days unless it hung high and inside."

Following Lt. Dark's separation from service in May, 1946, he worked out three weeks with the Braves, signed for a $40,000-plus bonus and rode the Boston bench, playing in only 15 games. Then he was optioned to Milwaukee, an American Association club, batted .303 there in 1947 and returned to the Braves in '48 to star at shortstop and aid them to their first pennant in 34 years, batting .322.

Stanky Helped Most.

Dark, who has a handsome .323 average in the spotlighted pressure of three World Series, credited Danny Murtaugh, his second base sidekick at Milwaukee, for helping him. He also named Leo Durocher, his manager with the Giants, but reserved his greatest praise for his keystone partner and roommate of five years at Boston and New York—Eddie Stanky.

"I learned tremendously about inside baseball from Eddie," Dark said. "We'd eat after a game, go to a movie, hit the sack early and lie there talking over the finer points of baseball in general and the game we'd played in particular. That is, Eddie did most of the talking and I did most of the listening."

Dark, articulate himself, won a reputation as a keyed-up competitor and inspirational leader as captain of the Giants, nervously roaming the shortstop real estate with the fine housekeeping eye of a pebble-picking Marty Marion. He's also outstanding at his golfing hobby, averaging 75. He once shot a 66 and twice won the Sporting News' annual spring baseball players' tournament at Miami. In the off-season at Lake Charles, he sells a special kind of mud used in oil-drilling operations.

Alvin Ralph Dark, eager to help the Cardinals win a pennant, has only one regret. When his father came East to see him play in 1948, his first year in the majors, Al was benched. The senior Dark went home. The next day he died of a heart attack — without ever having seen his son start on his way to stardom.

Pitcher Roark Seeks 6th Win In Khoury Play

Pitcher Perry Roark, who has permitted just 14 hits in five games, will be seeking his sixth victory for the Teamsters Local 682 team in a Khoury League senior contest at Fairground Park this afternoon. The Teamsters, who have a 7-0 record, will meet the Pioneers A.C. (2 and 3) in a Sam Breadon Memorial League game on Diamond No. 3 at 3:30.

Roark, who advanced as far as Triple A ball while playing as a pro, has struck out 85 batters in his five games. Lester Bolimeier is the Teamsters' manager.

The Teamsters-Pioneer match will be the second part of a doubleheader, with Forrest (1-4) meeting Jennings Merchants (3-3) at 1 p.m.

In the St. Louis League, Jack O'Rourke's unbeaten Clowns A.C. squad will meet the Gladiators A.C. in a 1 o'clock game on Forest Park Diamond No. 2 At 3:30, the Gladiators will make up a postponed contest with the Cheetah A.C. On Monday night the Cheetahs will play the winless Ballwin Eagles at Ballwin.

First place will be at stake in the Missouri League when the Veterans A.C. meets 2nd Ward Democrats. Both teams have 4-1 records.

In the University City League the once-beaten Orlando Brothers will play the Oilers in a 3:30 game, following a 1 o'clock match between St. Ann and St. Louis County A.C.

DOWN THE STRETCH

by Herman Wecke

There's an old racing bromide about "courses for horses," but in the case of Clarence Meaux, Abbeville, La., rider, it could easily be changed to read "courses for jockeys."

Records show that the 20-year-old Louisiana rider has been a whiz kid on the two southern Illinois tracks—Fairmount and Cahokia—but has been something of a bust when performing on other courses.

Since June 30, 1954, when he rode his first winner of a recognized track at Fairmount, Meaux has been in the winner's circle 249 times at the two St. Louis district courses.

In 1954, when he had 84 winners, all but two of them were recorded here, while last year 114 of his 123 firsts came at Fairmount and Cahokia. All of which shows that in two years in which he made 198 trips into the winner's circle, only 11 triumphs came away from the St. Louis area.

After two wins at Fairmount in 1954, the Louisiana rider, who was developed by Felix J. DeMary, Orange, Tex., horseman, Meaux moved to Cahokia and proved a sensation, winning the jockey title with 80 firsts. Last spring he came back to win the riding honors at Fairmount with 46 wins, and he took the laurels at Cahokia with 68. He was slowed down by a 10-day suspension.

This spring, Meaux is again making a runaway race for the jockey championship. For a time, Lyle (Jake) Colclasure was ahead of Meaux, but with the last named sitting out a 10-day suspension, Meaux now is in front, 53 wins to 42.

Meaux' greatest feat came at Cahokia, Oct. 6, 1954, when he rode six consecutive winners. A little more than a week later, Oct. 14, he was home first with five of his nine mounts.

The jockey's top performance at Fairmount came last Thursday night, when he had five out of six, finishing the night's program with four consecutive firsts.

Despite the fact that Meaux has piloted 53 winners during the first 40 nights, a bettor, who had wagered $2 on the nose on each of his mounts would be $2.60 in "the red." Meaux has had 250 mounts, which would have resulted in an outlay of $500 and he would have collected $497.40.

Twice this spring, Meaux has been up on both horses in the daily double. On May 24, First Four and Lady Ridgewell formed a $49.40 double, while May 29, Blit McGee and Why Natch formed a double worth $47.60. The largest refund on a Meaux winner came May 16, when Battle Day paid off at $27.60 for $2. The shortest priced winner he has piloted was on May 9, when Hopeful Sam paid 60 cents for $1.

ROOFBEATS: Stewards were busy during the week . . . Jockey Arthur Farrell was fined $100 for falsifying his weight to the clerk of the scales . . . Grooms Gordon Creel and Charles Enlow were suspended for making false statements in their applications and their cases referred to the Illinois Racing Board with the recommendation that their licenses be revoked . . . Charles P. Jones, jockey, was held blameless for Nosey Sue's interference with Pine Forest in the stretch run Wednesday night . . . Trainer William S. Harding was fined $25 for failure to appear to sign a saliva card following the running of Wednesday's fifth race . . .

Khoury Leagues of Granite City to Meet

The Khoury Leagues of the Granite City Police Department will hold a meeting tomorrow night at the Eagles Home, 2600 Madison avenue, starting at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. Leo M. Coleman is league president.

King Bebe in July 4 Handicap

King Bebe, from the H. H. Rendleman barn, which has won two $2500 handicaps at Fairmount Park, is among the early nominations for the July 4 handicap to be decided over the one mile and 70 yards route. The July 4 program will begin at 2:15 o'clock.

Other early nominees for the handicap include Reshuffle, Clynon, Royal Intrigue, Cremede-Cocoa, Eternal Frolic, Brown Pirate and Bright Imp.

Racing Secretary Jack Klucina plans several other distance races for the holiday program.

Phillies Sign Collegian.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 (UP)—Joe Liebler, an outfielder-first baseman from Holy Cross College, has been signed by the Philadelphia Phillies and assigned to Salt Lake City in the Class "C" Pioneer League.

Cahokia Downs Plans Races at 2½ Furlongs

Racing fans in the St. Louis district will be treated to something new when Cahokia Downs opens its 60-day-and-night meeting July 21. The innovation will be two and one-half furlong races for two-year-olds. Racing Secretary Ken McIntosh's early condition books also show four-furlong races for the juveniles.

Usually two-year-olds travel the shorter distance only in the early part of their racing careers.

George Edw. Day, managing director of the track, has announced that $600,000 in purse money will be distributed and that $97,500 of this amount will go to horsemen the first 10 nights of the meeting.

The Inaugural and Governors Handicap, each worth $3000, will feature the first two Saturdays.

Cahokia Downs will race six days a week, Monday through Saturday, as was the case last season, with post time at 8:30 p.m. Eight races will be held each night. The only afternoon program will be on Labor Day, when the starting time will be 2:15 o'clock. Women will again be admitted to the track for the 25 cents service charge on Monday nights.

Claude Wisehart, track superintendent, says that the track is in excellent condition. The barns will be open July 5 to begin receiving horses for the meeting.

M.U. Alumni Golf.

University of Missouri Alumni will play their annual golf tournament at Crystal Lake Country Club Tuesday. Don Faurot, athletic director, and his staff of coaches will participate in the golf event and a dinner in the evening.

Attendance Down An Average of 7457 At Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, June 23 (AP).

ATTENDANCE at home games of the Kansas City athletics is down an average of 7457 for the first 26 openings.

This season the A's have attracted a total 387,649 fans. Last year at the same stage the total was 551,626.

In addition to the fact the club is well down in the standings, Athletics' officials blame the drop on an early run of bad weather.

Co-Leaders Meet Today In Muny Senior Leagues

Co-leaders meet in two leagues, and the Nos. 1 and 2 teams are matched in another circuit, today in Muny senior baseball.

Borbein-Young, the only unbeaten team in the three holdover leagues, goes for its sixth straight victory when it meets Kutis North, North Side League champion the past two seasonh, in the 3:30 o'clock game at Fairground Park No. 1 diamond.

Kutis North (4-1) suffered its only loss, 5-4, at the hands of the Borbeins, who were state non-pro hcampions last season and have looked even stronger this season.

Carondelet Sunday Morning Club No. 1, defending Muny champion as well as 1955 titleholder in the South Side League, takes on Kutis South at Carondelet Park No. 1 diamond at 3:30 o'clock. Those teams share the lead with 4-1 records, Kutis South having handed Carondelet its lone defeat.

In the 12:45 o'clock game between Kimacks (2-3) and Gravois (0-5), Bill Fries, hard-hitting outfielder-first baseman of Kimacks, probably will be playing his last Muny contests. He will move into the new Nebraska pro league set up for young players.

The Red Villas and Carondelet No. 2, both with 5-2 records, meet in the Meine League feature at 12:45 at Meine Field. Hoffmeisters (3-4) and Simpkins (1-6) play at 3:30 o'clock.

Phils Sign Collegian.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23 (AP)—Joseph Liebler, an outfielder from New York City's All Hallows High School and Holy Cross College, has been signed by the Philadelphia Phillies, the club announced.

Final Olympic Track Tryouts on KSD-TV

A one-hour telecast of the final men's tryouts for the United States Olympic track and field team next Saturday will be carried by Post-Dispatch Station KSD-TV.

The telecast, from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m., will be originated by the NBC-TV network in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Nine final events are expected to be included in the program.

Competing for places on the team will be top track and field stars representing college, A.A.U. organizations and the Armed Forces.

Major League Player Representatives to Meet In Washington July 9

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)—The 16 major league player representatives will meet at Washington, July 9, the day before the All-Star baseball game, to discuss proposed changes in the player pension plan and a move to increase minimum salaries from $6000 t. $7200.

Commissioner Ford Frick is negotiating for sale of the radio and television rights to the All-Star and World Series games. The current contract, calling for about $1,250,000 per year, expires after the 1956 series. The new contract is expected to call for at least $3,000,000 a year.

The four-man pension committee is to meet with Frick next week. Robin Roberts of Philadelphia and Bobby Feller of Cleveland are the player representatives on the committee. The owners representatives are John Galbreath of Pittsburgh and Joe Cronin of Boston.

All Yachts in Bermuda Race Accounted For

HAMILTON, Bermuda, June 23 (AP)—The missing 39-foot sloop, Echo, was located today, accounting for the last of the 82 yachts in the Newport-to-Bermuda race.

Object of widespread search by four navy planes, the sloop, owned by William R. Ryan of Riverside, Conn., was first sighted 32 miles east-northeast of these islands. Later the boat was tied up at St. George's.

A second craft for which there had been some concern, the 72-foot schooner Shoal Water from the New York Maritime Academy, was located near the finish line last night.

The race was won by Carleton Mitchell's class-D yawl, Finisterre.

The Echo arrived unobserved in the harbor, with none of the crew members aware of the widespread air search.

There was nothing broken or carried away and the crew members all were reported well. The crew said they encountered very blustery weather which forced them to strike sails and scud along under bare poles.

Miss Erle Talbot Lund Bride at Ladue Chapel Of John S. Lionberger Jr.

MISS ERLE TALBOT LUND, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Yowell Lund, returned to St. Louis, her former home, to be married late yesterday afternoon to John Shepley Lionberger Jr., in one of the largest important June weddings. The Lunds moved to New York about a year ago and now have an historic house at Convent Station, N.J. Mr. Lionberger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lionberger, 123 North Central avenue, Clayton.

The wedding took place at Ladue Chapel, the Rev. Dr. W. Davidson McDowell performing the ceremony. Madonna lilies, now at the height of their blossoming season, were used profusely for decoration, not only at the church but at the University Club where the reception was given. They were combined with stock and larkspur in silver urns on the candle-lighted altar and were held with satin bows and greenery to pews along the center aisle. The altar railing was covered with woodwardia fern.

A long procession of pink and white-clad attendants, five of them little girls from 5 to 8 years old, preceded Mr. Lund and his daughter to the altar where he gave her in marriage. Miss Sarah Brandon Lund, a debutante, was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. David Lincoln Edwards (Sally Shipley), Miss Betty Hungerford, Miss Josephine Wood, Mrs. Charles Hay Hemminger III, Philadelphia, and Miss Sarah Brown, Syracuse, N.Y., the last two young women Vassar classmates of the bride. The five flower girls were Betsy Allen Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Armstrong, Kansas City; Irene Austin Leland, daughter of Mr. and

WEDDINGS HIGHLIGHT JUNE

Mary Ann Heitmeier Married at Church

AMONG the large June weddings yesterday was that of Miss Mary Ann Heitmeier and Bernard Callaghan MacDonald Jr., which took place in the morning at Our Lady of Lourdes Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard Hunkins.

Bouquets of Easter lilies and white larkspur were arranged between clusters of lighted white candles on the main altar and also decorated the side altars. Pews along the center aisle were set off by white flowers and greenery tied with white satin bows.

The bride, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Vernie Heitmeier, was given in marriage by her brother, Donald E. Heitmeier, with whom she made her home at 1090 Wilson Square, University City. She wore a white silk organza gown styled with a low scoop neckline and short sleeves of re-embroidered alencon lace. A wide band of the lace molded the slim waist from which a bouffant skirt, ap-

Sept. 1 Wedding For Miss Crego, Dr. Max A. Heeb

(Picture on Page 2G.)

DR. AND MRS. CLARENCE HARRISON CREGO, 2 Loren Woods, Ladue, celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary June 12 at a cocktail party at which they announced the engagement of their second daughter, Miss Marianna March Crego, to Dr. Max Allen Heeb. When guests—neighbors and close friends—arrived at the Crego home they saw fastened to the front door two hearts, pierced by a gold arrow, containing the names of the engaged pair.

The wedding will take place Saturday night, Sept. 1, at Bethel Lutheran Church at 8 o'clock, with a reception afterward at Le Chateau.

Miss Crego is a graduate of John Burroughs School and Bradford (Mass.) Junior College. She completed her junior year at the University of Colorado, Boulder, where she became a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. The bride-elect is a sister of Mrs. Donald Brown (Carolyn Crego) and Miss Martha Sue Crego.

Dr. Heeb is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Heeb of Chaffee, Mo. A graduate, cum laude, of Washington University School of Medicine, he is now a resident in surgery at Jewish Hospital. He belongs to Phi Beta Pi, medical fraternity, and Alpha Omega Alpha, medical honorary. Dr. Heeb is a brother of Arthur Heeb Jr., Cape Girardeau; Mrs. William Sapp, Sikeston, Mo., and Roy Thomas Heeb.

Mrs. Brown will attend her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Jean Russell, Miss Elaine Traylor of Wellesley Hills, Mass.; Miss Sara Ann Cameron of Midland, Tex.; Miss Lois McGourty of Stamford, Conn., and Miss Martha Sue Crego. Dr. Heeb's attendants will be announced later.

Dr. and Mrs. Crego are expected home tomorrow from a visit in Banff in the Canadian Rockies.

Jo Anne Seabold To Become Bride Of J. L. Hawkins

THE engagement of Miss Jo Anne Carolynn Seabold to James Lawrence Hawkins was announced last evening by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. John Albert Seabold at their home, 408 Mission Court, University City. Members of the families and close friends were invited to a garden cocktail party presumably as a farewell party for the bridegroom-elect who will go to a Marine camp in California. Instead, cards given to the guests announced the sailing of the "Sea Hawk" by the Seabold-Hawkins Line, Ltd., "bound for the Isle of Wedded Bliss by way of the Sea of Matrimony."

Miss Seabold was a charter member of her class at the Academy of the Visitation from which she was graduated in 1950. She received her B. A. degree in biology and education in 1954 from Webster College and has been teaching for a year. She is the granddaughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. Joseph N. Schoppe, St. Louis, and the late Mr. and Mrs. John A. Seabold, Baltimore.

Mr. Hawkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lawrence Hawkins, 1315 Culverhill drive, Webster Groves, and the younger brother of Robert William Hawkins. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Maupin, Bloomfield, Mo., and the late Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Hawkins, Brazil, Ind.

The prospective bridegroom holds two degrees, B. S. and law, the latter with the class of 1955, from St. Louis University. He served with the Marines from 1951 to 1953 and is a captain in the Third Infantry Battalion in the Marine Reserve. His fraternities are Alpha Delta Gamma, social; Delta Theta Phi, law, and Woolsack, honorary law. For five years he held the Missouri State Speed Skating championship. He is an active member and official of the Missouri Skating Association.

The wedding will take place in mid-October.

Sutter-Ake Wedding In New York Saturday

MRS. HARRY FULTON AKE of Forest Hills, L.I., has announced the approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Doris Frances Ake, to John Orval Sutter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orval C. Sutter, 2303 South Milton avenue, Overland. The wedding will take place Saturday in New York City, with Miss Griecha van Ronden of Holland as the bride's only attendant and Vu Hau of Jakarta, Indonesia, as best man.

The bride-elect, a graduate of Columbia University, is now doing graduate work at Cornell University. Mr. Sutter received his B.S. and master's degrees from Washington University, did graduate work at Yale and Johns Hopkins, and is now studying toward his Ph.D. at Cornell. Commissioned a foreign service officer, he served as vice consul at Shanghai and in Indonesia at Surabaja and Jakarta. Previously, in World War II, he served with the Army in Europe. His fraternity is Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutter, with their son, Bernat, and Mr. Sutter's mother, Mrs. John Sutter, will fly to New York for the wedding. The bridegroom's parents will give the rehearsal dinner Friday night.

Shelley Kay Brooks Becomes Bride of K. K. Kirkland Jr.

MISS SHELLEY KAY BROOKS, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Everett Carl Brooks, 444 West Swon avenue, Webster Groves, was married yesterday afternoon to Kenneth Keith Kirkland Jr., whose parents live at 1115 Timberline drive, Warson Woods.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Harry T. Scherer at Elizabeth Holloway Woods Chapel of Webster Groves Presbyterian Church. Later guests were received at the Brooks home and then attended a dinner afterward at Le Chateau.

The bride wore a white lace sheath with a light blue taffeta cummerbund ending at back in a large bow with streamers. A tiny light blue hat with veiling covered her hair and she carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Her only attendant, Miss Yvonne Kirkland, sister of the bridegroom, wore a light blue princess gown and held a matching cascade of majestic daisies.

Charles N. Worheide served as best man and Noll Majers as usher.

Mr. Kirkland and his bride, who will visit New Orleans and Florida resorts on their wedding trip, will live here and both will attend Washington University in the autumn.

Miss Jacob Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil F. Jacob, 9915 Affton place, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jeannine Annette Jacob, to Clyde B. O'Bryan. The prospective bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde H. O'Bryan, 7639 Elton avenue, Affton, and his fiancee are planning a June 1957 wedding.

Miss Glick Engaged To Lewis R. Worth

MR AND MRS. ARCHIE GLICK, 7449 Tulane avenue, University City, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carole Sue Glick, to Lewis Richard Worth. The wedding is planned for next autumn.

Miss Glick attends the University of Illinois where her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Worth of Chicago, will receive his degree in August. She is a member of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority while Mr. Worth belongs to Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity.

The bride-to-be is the sister of Jerome, Miss Barbara and Miss Lois Glick. Mrs. Robert Nathan is Mr. Worth's sister.

Sally Jane Risk Becomes Bride

LADUE Chapel was the scene last night of the marriage of Miss Sally Jane Risk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Treat Risk, 1659 Forestview drive, Kirkwood, to Harry Frost Theiss. The Rev. Dr. W. Davidson McDowell performed the ceremony, after which there was a reception at Greenbriar Hills Country Club.

The bride was attended by Miss Judith Louise Drake, maid of honor, and Miss Nina Louise Theiss, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Nancy Rayburn Deane as bridesmaid. Best man was Dirk Tousley, Independence, Mo. Ushers were Robert Buck, East St. Louis; Fred Tschannen, Florissant; and Robert DesPaine and Frank Ungerott, Collinsville. Junior usher was the bride's brother, Robert Risk. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Theiss of Collinsville.

The former Miss Risk wore a chantilly lace and tulle gown over satin and a beaded tulle cap to hold her veil. She carried a prayer book marked with roses and lilies of the valley. Her jewelry was a tiny antique lavaliere.

Her attendants were in white organza over pink taffeta. Wide pink sashes tied in butterfly bows at back fell in streamers to the hemlines of the wide skirts. They carried crescents of pink roses.

Mr. Theiss and his bride, after a wedding trip to Lake Geneva, Wis., will live in Omaha, Nebr.

Literature Group to Meet.

Carolyn Steger Becomes Bride

MISS CAROLYN JANE STEGER, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leonard A. Steger, 324 Helfenstein avenue, Webster Groves, was married Friday evening at Webster Groves Presbyterian Church to Robert William Hansen, an ensign in the Navy Air Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hansen, Manning, Iowa.

Pink and white daisies and delphinium decorated the chancel and communion table for the ceremony performed by the Rev. Dr. Harry T. Scherer. Lighted tapers, festooned with greenery, marked the chancel and center aisle.

More of the flowers and woodwardia fern ornamented Fellowship Hall, adjoining the sanctuary, for the reception afterward.

The former Miss Steger wore a simply designed dress of embroidered Swiss organdy. A small cap ornamented with a leaf design held her fingertip veil. She carried a cascade of stephanotis and white orchids.

Miss Katherine Jensen served as maid of honor in a frosty blue embroidered organdy dress made with a full, terrace-length dress. She carried a bouquet of pink larkspur and daisies, the same blossom worn in her hair. The bridesmaids, Miss Jane Montgomery, Miss Jacqueline Jasper, Miss Jane Williams and Mrs. Richard Ehlers, were similarly attired except that their dresses were pink embroidered organdy.

Philip Zink, Plano, Ill., was best man. Ushers included the bridegroom's brother, Jack Hansen; Larry Herbold, Colfax, Ia.; Craig Shirley, Waterloo, Ia.; Jerry Leader and Mr. Ehlers.

Both the bride and bridegroom were graduated June 9 from Iowa State College, Ames, at which time he received his commission. He has been assigned to primary flight training at Memphis until September, when he and his bride will go to Pensacola, Fla.

Miss Sue Niemeyer, Robert Busch Engaged

THE engagement of Miss Sue Niemeyer to Robert Busch was announced recently at a family dinner at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar W. Niemeyer, 8352 Ardsley drive, Bel Nor. Mr. Busch's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Chester W. Busch, 401 Summit avenue, Webster Groves.

Miss Niemeyer and her fiance will be seniors at the University of Missouri in the fall. A student in the School of Journalism, the bride-elect is a member of Gamma Alpha Chi, professional women's advertising fraternity, and a former vice president of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Mr. Busch, who is majoring in history at the University, belongs to Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. He is the brother of Donald G. and Miss Shirley Busch.

Date of Meeting Changed.

Because of Independence day, the Catholic Gold Star Mothers will hold their meeting Tuesday, July 10, instead of the regular meeting date, July 3, at Father Dempsey's hall, 3526 Cass avenue. The annual officers' luncheon will be served at noon. The August meeting will be held at the same place Tuesday, Aug. 7.

Miss Barbara Sharp Married at Church To Spencer T. Gould

MISS BARBARA JO SHARP, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George W. Sharp, 7504 Gannon avenue, University City, became the bride of Spencer Tatman Gould in a service performed by the Rev. Dr. Wesley H. Hager at Grace Methodist Church Friday evening. The altar was banked with white summer flowers and palms and illuminated by white tapers, more of which marked the aisles.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown which combined a bodice of chantilly lace with a very full tulle skirt banded in the lace. A circlet of lace embroidered with iridescent seed pearls held the fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of flowerettes fashioned from white gladiolas and larkspur.

Miss Nancy Jane and Miss Sally Ann Sharp, the bride's sisters, served respectively as maid of honor and bridesmaid. Miss Nancy Carol Bold and Miss Ann Muhl were also bridesmaids. Their pale yellow crystallette dresses were accented by bandeaux and bouquets of white daisies and ivy.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Spencer Gould, 408 Way avenue, Kirkwood, was attended by J. Kirby Brown Jr. as best man and his three cousins, Bernal, Henri IV and David Douglas Chomeau, and Roderic Botts Madison, Wis., groomsmen.

Becky Sue Rasmussen, the bridegroom's cousin, wore a bouffant dress of yellow dotted swiss and carried a basket of daisies for her role as flower girl.

White daisies, silver candelabra and greenery decorated the table for the reception, also held in the church.

The young couple will live in Kirkwood after a wedding trip to South Carolina. They will attend Washington University this fall, both having previously attended Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. The bridegroom became a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex. He served in the Marine Corps for two years.

Lois Murray Fiancee Of Leonard A. DeMoor

THE engagement of Miss Lois Lenore Murray to Leonard Anthony De Moor was announced at a dinner given recently by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Murray, 1222 Orchid avenue. Guests, relatives and family friends, were entertained at Ruggeri's restaurant; later contemporaries of the engaged pair learned the news at a cocktail party.

Miss Murray was graduated June 4 from Maryville College. Her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. De Moor, 5208 Holly Hills avenue, is an alumnus of St. Louis University. He is the brother of Raymond De Moor and Brother Gregory De Moor, Society of Mary.

MRS. ROBERT M. WALLACE

Miss Briner Married To J. A. Creelman Jr. At Church Service

MISS MARCIA JEAN BRINER became the bride of James Alvah Creelman Jr. Thursday evening at First Congregational Church with the Rev. Dr. Paul S. McElroy officiating. Later her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Briner, gave a garden reception at their home, 20 York Hills drive, Brentwood. Mr. Creelman's parents are Mr. and Mrs. James A. Creelman, 940 East Big Bend road, Kirkwood.

Preceding the bride down the aisle were Miss Patricia Kratky, maid of honor; Miss Susan Dieckmann, Cincinnati, and Miss Mary Ellen Houlberg, Chicago, bridesmaids, and Joan Lecoutour and Sarah Jane Minar, niece of the bridegroom, junior bridesmaids. They wore aqua princess styled taffeta frocks and carried talisman roses.

On the white taffeta wedding gown soft folds over the shoulders formed tiny sleeves while pleated gores on the skirt flared into a court train. The bride wore a Brussels lace madonna veil and carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Mr. Creelman's attendants were his nephew, Timothy Minar, Plainfield, N.J., best man, and Charles D. Briner, the bride's brother; James Kraml, Frank Vacek, Harry Knox and Walter Groesser, ushers. The newly married pair will take a wedding trip through the South and will live in Manhasset Village.

Jo Ann Marsh, Gerry Grossman Are Married

THE marriage of Miss Jo Ann Marsh to Gerry Grossman took place last night at Webster Groves Presbyterian Church which for the occasion was decorated with white spring flowers, greenery and lighted tapers. After the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Dr. Harry T. Scherer, a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Graham Marsh, 421 Baker avenue, Webster Groves. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. B. Valle Grossman, 167 North Bemiston avenue, Clayton, and the late Mr. Grossman.

The former Miss Marsh wore a silk organdy gown, over taffeta, with alencon lace forming short sleeves. More of the lace was appliqued around the neckline and in panels on the front and back of the skirt. Her fingertip veil was gathered to a jeweled crown and she held a bouquet of white stephanotis and orchids.

Miss Carolyn Clark served as maid of honor and Mrs. James A. Hutto, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Robert E. Stahlhut, Columbia, Mo., and Mrs. Rives C. Allen were bridesmaids. They wore white ballerina dresses, fashioned from a silk and cotton material, tied with petal green sashes. They carried majestic daisies and larkspur, pink and white for Miss Clark and pink for the bridesmaids, and wore wreaths of daisies in their hair.

Valle Grossman was his brother's best man and James B. Sprick, G. Randall Martin, Charles E. Cain and Hugh C. Webster were ushers.

Gail Grossman, a niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl, wearing a frock fashioned like the bridesmaids' gowns. She held a pink daisy nosegay.

The bride's mother wore an ice blue peau de soie sheath, with back fullness, and a small matching hat. She pinned red garnet roses to her purse. The bridegroom's mother, in a sheer pink gown over deeper shaded taffeta, wore a veil taffeta headband. Her flowers were pink garnet roses.

Mr. Grossman and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Clearwater, Fla. They will live at 1334 McCutcheon road, Richmond Heights.

Officers Installed.

At a dinner meeting Thursday at the General Insurors tearoom, 4144 Lindell boulevard, officers for the St. Louis Section, Society of Women Engineers, were installed. They are: Miss Paulena Pagel, chairman; Miss Beulah Loomis, vice chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Roos, treasurer; Miss Eva Kalish, recording secretary, and Miss Martha Schultz, corresponding secretary. The bride-to-be will receive her B.S. degree in education in August from Arkansas State College, Jonesboro, where she is a member of the Arkansas Women Students Association and served as the organization's president last year. Mr. Brooks received his B.S. degree from the same college May 24 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army. Next June he will be assigned to active duty with the tank corps of an armored division. His family lived for many years at 7341 Wellington avenue, University City.

Claire Donnelly Becomes Bride

MISS CLAIRE ANN DONNELLY and Thomas Howard Geraghty were married yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Church, Clayton, by the pastor, the Rev. Thomas J. Odlum. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Flynn Donnelly, 7924 Delmar boulevard, University City, with whom she lived, and Arthur J. Donnelly. Mr. Geraghty is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Geraghty, 4458 Kinswood lane, St. Louis county.

Escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride was peceded down a candlelighted aisle by Miss Margaret Dusard, maid of honor; Mr. Geraghty's sister, Mrs. Wayne Faessler Alch, matron of honor; Miss Ann Mueller, Miss Sally McKeown and Miss Kathleen Vatterott, bridesmaids, and Mary Daniel Breece, flower girl. Mr. Geraghty's youngest bother, Tracy, carried the ring.

Jerome Wickham Byrne was best man for Mr. Geraghty. Timothy Geraghty, his brother; Andre J. Bourdet Jr., a cousin; Samuel Duggan, Edward W. Sumner Jr., Dixon McMorrow and Mr. Alch were ushers.

Clusters of white chrysanthemums, gladiolas and stock decorated the main altar at either side of which lighted white tapers were silhouetted against huckleberry and woodwardia fern.

The bride was in a white chantilly lace gown over satin made with long sleeves and a scoop neckline. The bouffant skirt was edged with a deep flounce which terminated in a train. A lace and tulle coronet secured the fingertip veil. The former Miss Donnelly carried a white satin-covered prayer book, which the bridegroom's mother used at her wedding, covered with white orchids and a shower of stephanotis.

The bride's attendants wore terrace-length pique dresses, blue for the maid of honor and pink for the others, trimmed with matching lace. Hair bands the same color as their dresses were finished with brief veils. The young women carried bouquets of pink roses. The flower girl wore a white organdy pinafore over a light pink polished cotton frock and carried a small basket of pink roses.

After the ceremony a breakfast was given in the Tiara room of the Park Plaza Hotel in a setting of pink and white flowers. The bridal table had a large centerpiece of the blossoms and smaller tables, covered with pink cloths, were centered with pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Geraghty will go to Miami Beach, Fla., on their wedding trip.

Oglesby-Greene June Wedding

A BRIDE of last Thursday afternoon was Miss Nancy Cooper Greene, whose marriage to Richard Berkeley Oglesby took place at Childress Chapel of Central Presbyterian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cooper Greene, 7232 Clayton road, Richmond Heights; the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bert T. Oglesby, 7447 York drive, Clayton. Only members of the two families witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze Jr.

The former Miss Greene wore a white embroidered organdy gown with a square neckline, short sleeves and a full skirt. Pearls were embroidered on the lace crown holding her fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and pale pink roses.

Miss Carolyn Caulk served as the bride's only attendant, wearing white embroidered organdy over pale blue taffeta. Her large picture hat was trimmed with matching blue velvet ribbon and she held a colonial bouquet of white daisies centered with yellow roses.

Burris Duncan was best man and Robert Lindemeyer seated the guests, who later at Le Chateau were joined by additional friends of the couple for the reception. Mr. Oglesby and his bride will spend their honeymoon at The Cloister, Sea Island, Ga. The bridegroom, who will be a junior at Washington University School of Medicine in the autumn, has a student fellowship this summer and is doing research in the Department of Ophthalmology.

Miss Jane Perry Becomes Bride

GRACE Episcopal Church in Kirkwood was the scene of the wedding last night of Jane Elizabeth Perry to George Hampton Buchanan after which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lilburn Pleasant Perry, gave a reception at their home, 27 Hill drive, Kirkwood. The Rev. James A. Doubleday was the officiating minister.

The bride wore embroidered organdy with a tiered bouffant skirt and short shirred sleeves, and a tulle veil from a wreath of organdy leaves at the back of her hair. She carried pink sweetheart roses and stepanotis. Her attendants, Mrs. John Galen Perry, her sister-in-law, and Mrs. Jack Jefferson, wore blue and pink flowered dotted swiss ballerina frocks and carried baskets of pink larkspur and daisies to match their coronets.

Mr. Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hampton Buchanan, 124 West Clinton place, Kirkwood, had his brother, Wade, as best man. Ushers included George Donald Kaufman and John Perry.

The bride attended Lindenwood and Washington University, where Mr. Buchanan will be graduated in August. He previously was graduated from the University of Missouri School of Journalism where he also did graduate work. The pair will live in St. Louis after a trip to Nassau.

pliqued at front with a lace motif, fell into a train. The bride's fingertip illusion veil was gathered to a lace cap sprinkled with seed pearls. She carried a Colonial bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Miss Mary Catherine Bardgett was maid of honor and Miss Lucy Flavan, Miss Patricia Auler, Miss Jane Berry and Mrs. Festus J. Krebs Jr., were bridesmaids. They wore summery rose pink silk organza dresses, the bodices and short skirts trimmed with narrow white lace. Their hats were large matching hairbraid models adorned with white daisies. They carried crescent bouquets of white daisies.

Mr. MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard C. MacDonald, 7254 Maryland terrace, University City, had a brother, Edward King MacDonald, as best man. Another brother, Leo Hadley MacDonald, Mr. Krebs, Frederick James Mckenna II and John J. Steuby Jr., were ushers.

The wedding party and the families were entertained at breakfast in the Crystal room of Missouri Athletic Club after the ceremony, and early in the afternoon additional guests attended a reception there.

Guests were received before standards of white flowers and greenery. White spring blossoms and white candles decorated the breakfast table and were arranged on the refreshment table for the reception. Mrs. MacDonald wore a champagne linen sheath gown trimmed with alencon lace and a small matching hat. Her corsage was purple orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald will fly to Bermuda on their wedding trip and will live in University City.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's aunt, Mrs. Paul Stoerker, and Mrs. Stoerker's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Grebs of Pittsburgh, and the bridegroom's cousin, Mrs. Lawrence Horras of Orlando, Fla., and Lt. Col. Horras.

Evening Marriage For Lois Beckermann

MISS LOIS BECKERMANN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Beckermann, Kennerly road, Sappington, and Glenn Edward Niebling were married June 15 at Ascension Lutheran Church by the Rev. Martin Haendschke. Afterward a reception was held at Le Chateau.

Miss Janet Beckermann, the bride's sister, served as maid of honor, and Miss Carole Wiese and Mrs. Gerald Niebling, the briegroom's sister-in-law, as bridesmaids. Mr. Neibling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Niebling, Dorsett road, Maryland Heights, had his brother, Gerald, as best man. His other attendants were Tom Smith, Vern Kieffer, Roger Beckermann, the bride's brother, and Norman Folkemer.

The bride wore white chiffli-embroidered tulle over tulle and taffeta with an embroidered skirt and tiered tulle train. A crown of matching embroidery held her veil. Her flowers were white orchids and stephanotis. Coral crystallette ballet gowns with matching headbands were worn by the bride's attendants who carried white daisies.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Lutheran High School and attended Valparaiso (Ind.) University. Her sorority was Alpha Phi Delta and his fraternity, Phi Delta Theta. He is currently attending St. Louis University. They will live in St. Louis following a trip to Miami, Fla.

Sylvia Ball Fiancee Of Lt. B. R. Hampton

THE engagement of Miss Sylvia Elsie Ball to Second Lt. Bill Ray Hampton of the Marines has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Ball, 3520 Pinegrove avenue, Normandy. The winter wedding date depends on the prospective bridegroom's leave. He is stationed at Quantico, Va.

Miss Ball, a graduate of Normandy High School, has just completed her freshman year at the University of Missouri. After her marriage she plans to continue her studies, probably at the University of Maryland.

Lt. Hampton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hampton, 7251 Arsenal street, Maplewood, was graduated from the University of Missouri School of Education.

Anne Weber Married To W. P. Carleton Jr.

daughter to the altar and gave her in marriage. She wore a white silk taffeta gown designed with a low square neckline draped at the shoulders into short sleeves. The bouffant skirt was set on the long fitted basque in unpressed pleats. The bride's heirloom lace veil, worn madonna style over illusion, extended to the end of the chapel train. She carried a cascade of white moth orchids and variegated ivy.

The attendants were in pastel green hand-woven cotton dresses, the square necklines and waltz-length skirts finished with bands of white alencon lace. They wore hairbraid matching coronets trimmed with short veils and carried cascades of Valentine red and chrome yellow gloriosa lilies.

Fan-shaped bouquets of white flowers—Fuji chrysanthemums, Easter lilies, larkspur and carnations—decorated the living room mantel at the Weber home as a background for the receiving party. Breakfast was served in the garden. A white canopy was stretched above the bridal table which was simply decorated with white summer flowers. Small tables for guests were arranged beneath a gold-colored canopy.

Mrs. Weber wore a shell pink chantilly lace gown, over silk organza and a small organza hat. Mrs. Carleton was in a pale champagne silk taffeta sheath gown with a chiffon polonaise, and a small champagne taffeta and chiffon hat. Both mothers had white orchid corsages.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles Weber, Chicago; the bridegroom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Carleton, Coral Gables, Fla., and their daughter, Mary Denise; Miss Patricia Conoghan, Washington, and Miss Patricia Charles, Columbus, O.

THE marriage of Miss Adrienne Fay Klank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond B. Klank of Elmhurst, Ill., to Richard Norman Zulauf took place June 16 at Oak Park (Ill.) Evangelical and Reformed Church. The bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Norman C. Zulauf, 6503 Murdoch avenue.

The Rev. Mr. Zulauf, pastor of Hope Evangelical and Reformed Church, performed the ceremony assisted by the Rev. Merle Shiffman. Later the bride's parents gave a reception in the church parish hall.

Miss Helen Crowell served as maid of honor and Miss Janis Linsey, Miss Fran Nicoll, Mrs. Charles Waddle and Miss Mary Zulauf, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Mr. Waddle was best man while ushers were Herbert Lowe, Robert Utke, Orval Willimann and James Klank, brother of the bride.

Mr. Zulauf and his bride, after a wedding trip to Michigan, will live in Goehner, Nebr., during the summer and he will serve as supply pastor at the Evangelical and Reformed Church there. In the autumn the couple will come to St. Louis so that he may resume his studies at Eden Seminary.

Miss Shanfeld Bride Of Robert L. Meyer

THE wedding of Miss Eleanor Fern Shanfeld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Shanfeld, 819 University place, University City, and Robert Lawrence Meyer took place June 10 at the Starlight roof of Hotel Chase. The candlelight ceremony was performed by Rabbi Levinson of Temple Shaare Emeth before a setting of greenery and pink summer flowers. A reception was held afterward.

The bride wore embroidered tulle over satin designed with a tight shirred bodice and bouffant tiered ruffled skirt sweeping into a short train. Her veil was held to a sequin crown and she carried a lace covered Bible topped with white orchids and stephanotis.

Identical gowns of pale pink lace banded in matching satin were worn by Miss Judy Shanfeld, her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. Harvey Roodman and Mrs. Robert Lefton, the bride's cousins, and Mrs. Melvin Newman. They had pink satin hairbands and carried pink and white daisies. Miss Polly Shanfeld, the bride's cousin who was junior bridesmaid, wore white organdy over pink satin.

Mr. Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Meyer, 39 Aberdeen place, Clayton, was attended by his brother, Richard Meyer, as best man. Ushers included Mr. Roodman, Mr. Lefton, Melvin Newman and Allen Shanfeld, the bride's brother.

The bride received her A.B. degree in elementary education from Washington University four days before her marriage. Mr. Meyer, who holds a reserve commission as a second lieutenant in the Army, will be graduated from Washington University School of Law next June, at which time he will go into active service. After a trip to Miami and Nassau he and his bride will live in St. Louis.

"88" HOLIDAY COUPE

...and more and more of them are discovering that the big Rocket-powered 88 is well within their reach—especially right now!

Small wonder more and more young moderns are getting Olds ideas... going for Oldsmobile in such a big way! Can you blame them? For, if you're like most folks, you, too, prefer a prestige car... especially when it's so pleasing to your eye for value.

And when it comes to value, everything about this big Olds beauty says, "Come BUY!"

... a price that fits your budget better than many models of smaller, lower-powered cars!

... a resale value so high it traditionally tops the field at trade!

... a reputation for lively performance that's known and envied—everywhere!

Best of all, this Oldsmobile—with its lighthearted looks—is fun to own. And—with its famous Rocket Engine—a thrill to drive. Ask anyone who has felt the full lift and lilt of the Rocket's high-compression action... the superb smoothness in answer to a call for power at any speed... delivered by new Jetaway Hydra-Matic.*

Above all, even with its budget price, this Oldsmobile is a BIG car... with the riding comfort, superior stability and safety typical of big-car design. Yet, it's as light on its feet ... as quick to your touch as a sports car.

But why take our word? Come in for a behind-the-wheel trial of a new Oldsmobile. See for yourself how much your present car is worth in trade if you act now! You, too, will get Olds ideas... and the price of an "88" makes it easy for them to come true today! What's more, you'll like the quality-minded way we do business. See us now!

*Standard on Series Ninety-Eight; optional at extra cost on all other series.

Ask us to show you the figures...
YOUR INVESTMENT HOLDS WHEN YOU GO OVER TO OLDS!

We have the facts and figures to make it clear that Oldsmobile has top value today when you buy it... top value tomorrow at resale. It's convincing proof that an Olds is hard to beat, but easy to buy!

Mohan-Gibbar Church Wedding

MISS MARGARET FRANCES GIBBAR and John Michael Mohan Jr. were married June 16 at St. Engelbert's Church by the bridegroom's cousin, the Rev. Jeremiah Callahan. The candlelighted altar was decorated with bouquets of white and pale blue spring flowers and the center aisle was illuminated with white tapers.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Gibbar, 4862 San Francisco avenue; Mr. Mohan's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John M. Mohan, 17 Huntleigh Manor, St. Louis county. After the ceremony, Mrs. Gibbar gave a reception in the Tower room of the Congress Hotel.

Michael J. Costello gave his niece in marriage. She was attended by Miss Mary Agnes Lines, maid of honor, and the bridegroom's sisters, Miss Patricia and Miss Maureen Mohan, and Miss Gail Scholle, bridesmaids. Her cousin, Mary Louise Costello, was flower girl, and Mr. Mohan's cousin, Dennis Mohan, carried the ring.

Henry G. Lembeck was best man for Mr. Mohan whose ushers were Thomas A. Gore, James L. Sanders, Gerard J. Hoerr, Eugene P. Masek and Michael J. Costello Jr

The bride's gown was white lace and tulle over satin, the lace forming a short-sleeved bodice. Front and back panels trimmed the tulle skirt which ended in a sweep train. Her fingertip veil was gathered to a juliet seed pearl cap and her bouquet was white orchids surrounded by moth orchids and stephanotis.

The bride's attendants were in powder blue embroidered organdy dresses and matching hairbraid picture hats. They carried baskets of carnations, yellow and white for the maid of honor and yellow for the others. The flower girl was in a white organdy frock over blue taffeta and carried a small basket of yellow and white carnations.

Mr. Mohan and his bride will go east for their wedding trip and will live in St. Louis.

Joann Marcella Mahon Married at Church to James Donald Brady

MISS JOANN MARCELLA MAHON and James Donald Brady were married at St. Ann's Church, Normandy, June 16 by Msgr. Frederich J. Sprenke. She is the daughter of Mrs. William B. Mahon, 3507 Arcola drive, Normandy, and the late Mr. Mahon.

—Bob Dierkas Photograph.
MRS. JAMES D. BRADY

Vases of white flowers adorned the altar and white candles entwined with greenery marked the center aisle. John D. Mahon gave his sister in marriage. Miss Paula Foote was maid of honor; Miss Ruth Benson and Miss Janet Hoester were bridesmaids; Marcy Meehan, the bride's niece, was flower girl, and William B. Mahon, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mr. Brady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond T. Brady, 6215 Stillwell drive, Pine Lawn, had Harry Edwards as best man and Edward Velten, Robert O'Donnell and Ronald Roemer as ushers.

The bride wore a white chantilly lace gown. The skirt, ending in a chapel train, was made of tiers of the lace appliqued on tulle. Her fingertip illusion veil was held in place by a lace and pearl crown and her bouquet was white orchids and stepanotis. The adult attendants were in turquoise taffeta dresses and matching picture hats. They carried crescents of pink carnations. The flower girl, in a long white tulle frock, had a nosegay of pink flowers.

Miss Newstadt Bride Of Jerome Fred Levy

MR. AND MRS. JEROME FRED LEVY (Marilyn Newstadt) have returned from their wedding trip to Gulf Coast resorts and are living at 8634 Old Bonhomme road, University City. They were married June 10 at Temple Gemiluth Chassodim, Alexandria, La. After the evening ceremony, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchel Newstadt of Alexandria, gave a garden reception at their home. The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hyman G. Levy, 1040 Groby road, University City, went south for the wedding.

The bridegroom's sister-in-law, Mrs. Monroe D. Levy, St. Louis, was matron of honor, and Miss Joy Marcus, Dayton, O., was maid of honor. Mrs. Jerome Sincoff, St. Louis, and Mrs. Gwendolyn Athlem, Des Moines, were bridesmaids; Miss Johonna Pressburg, Baton Rouge, was junior bridesmaid, and the bride's niece, Deborah Newstadt, was flower girl.

Monroe Levy was best man for his brother. Ushers included Edmund Banashek, Byron Schneider and Mr. Sincoff, St. Louis.

Mr. Newstadt gave his daughter in marriage. She wore an emboridered mousseline de soie gown and fingertip veil gathered to a silk organdy cap embroidered with seed pearls. Her flowers, white roses, were fastened to a Bible which her mother and her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Edgar Pressburg, carried at their weddings. Her attendants were in blush pink organza dresses and held bouquets of deep rose carnations.

The former Miss Newstadt has lived for the last three years at McMillan Hall on the campus of Washington University from which she will receive her degree in art education in August. Her sorority is Sigma Delta Tau. Mr. Levy received his B.A. degree from the university and is now a third year student at the Medical School. He belongs to Sigma Alpha Mu, social fraternity, and Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi, honorary societies. He will do research this summer at Barnes Hospital

Installation Luncheon.

The annual installation of officers of the Child Conservation Conference will be held after luncheon Tuesday in the Steamboat room of the Mark Twain Hotel. Mrs. Lulu M. Wilkinson will be installed as president for her second term.

Miss Kelley Married To Cornelius S. Burke

THE Church of the Immacolata was the scene of the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Mariann Lucille Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Kelley, 1111 Brentwood boulevard, Richmond Heights, to Cornelius Sarsfield Burke. Bishop Leo C. Byrne performed the ceremony and a reception was held afterward at the Clayton Elks, of which the bride's father is Exalted Ruler and her mother president of Elks Ladies Auxiliary.

Attending the bride was her sister, Mrs. Frank Nickl Jr., as matron of honor wearing maize organdy over taffeta, while Mrs. John Bompart, another sister; Miss Betty Smyth and Miss Betty Claridge wore powder blue frocks, similarly styled with Viennese lace accenting a long torso line. Their matching hats were disc shaped and their flowers were roses, tawny gold for the honor attendant and yellow for the others.

The bride's gown was white tulle over taffeta, draped to an empire waistline and featuring an underskirt of accordion pleated tulle over hoops. Her veil was attached to a pearl-edged lace crown and her flowers were white orchids, stephanotis and lilies of the valley surrounded by greenery.

Serving as best man was Jack Rutherford of Robertson, Mo., and as ushers, Leo Bergeron, Jack Bardol, Thomas Gambon, Charles Zeman and Mel Heinkel. Mr. Burke, son of Mrs. Cornelius Burke, 8307 Washington avenue, Vinita Park, and the late Mr. Burke, will take his bride on a honeymoon to Colorado Springs.

Joann Hoffmann's Engagement Is Told

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD F. HOFFMANN, 6809 Corbitt avenue, University City, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Joann Elizabeth Hoffmann, to Leon E. Steinbrueck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Steinbrueck of Ellisville, Mo.

Both Miss Hoffmann and her fiance are graduates of Lutheran High School. For the past two years he has studied commercial radio and television at Indiana State Teachers College, Terre Haute, and in September will enter the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, Radio and Television Arts Departments, for two more years of study.

Cabana Colony by the Sea

—Miami Beach News Bureau.

Cabana colonies and swimming pools beside the sea offer Miami Beach visitors rest and relaxation. Hotel and apartment rates in summer provide bargains to fit almost any budget.

Miami Beach's Fishing Derby Opens July 1

Miami Beach's annual summer fishing tournament will start July 1 this year and continue through Labor day.

The tourney will, as usual, recognize 30 species of salt water game fish and four tackle classes. There will be three light tackle divisions, plug casting, fly casting and spinning, with the fourth class including all the heavier gear usually used for sailfish, marlin, big tarpon and general deep-sea trolling.

Visitors will find all the charter boats at Miami Beach fully equipped with the heavier rigs, cost of which mounts into the hundreds of dollars. Use of the heavy tackle goes along with the boat charter, usually a price of $35 a half-day, or $70 for a full day.

For this price the sports fisherman has the use of a craft between 30 and 40 feet long, manned by a skipper and mate familiar with these waters and the fish hereabouts. The charter vessels will accommodate a party of six and are equipped with outriggers so that four lines may be trolled simultaneously. The boats also are equipped with radio telephones, usually kept open so skippers can pass along information on the whereabouts of game.

Vacationers receive the help of the boat captains in arranging parties, so expenses can be split between two or more persons and in this way costs can be held to a minimum. Larger party boats featuring drift fishing over the offshore reefs also sell chair space along the rails for $3.50 a half-day for those seeking real economy.

Light tackle anglers should bring their own rods and reels, or can buy what they need after arrival. Spinning, plug casting and fly fishing usually is done in Biscayne or Florida bays or close inshore ocean waters and inlets from outboard-powered boats. These boats may be rented for self-operation or a guide can be employed along with the boat.

Tarpon, not a deep-water fish although they will range well above 100 pounds in weight, usually are the top trophies sought by three-, six- and nine-thread anglers at this time of year, although bonefish run the silver kings a close second in popularity. In addition to these two highly regarded game fish, the light tackle user can go for permit, snapper, snook, weakfish, channel bass and other species.

Of course, the really adventurous fisherman can take to the Gulf Stream after sails, wahoo, white marlin and dolphin, but even the experts who try this usually come back with stories of the big one that got away.

The visiting angler will be as pleased with the accommodations and low prices at Miami Beach this summer as with the ease of going fishing. Here he has the choice of more than 350 hotels, many of them lavish oceanfront structures with swimming pools and private beaches where rooms may be obtained for as little as $8 to $12 a day, double. Tops in luxury commands around $15 a day, while at the economy end of the scale are scores of hotels a block or two from the ocean and beach parks where modern lodgings are available for $25 a week for two.

Fishing, of course, is but one of the many recreations for vacationers in Miami Beach. Aside from the swimming, golf and tennis there are numerous sightseeing attractions and numerous after-dark dine and dance spots.

International Flavor.

Few places in the world have the international flavor of the Virgin Islands, where the islanders speak English with a calypso lilt, drive automobiles English-fashion on the left, and call their streets by such unpronounceable Danish names as Dronnigensgade, all while living under the American flag.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES ABOUT VISIT TO HAWAII

So you want to go to Hawaii? Well, here are some answers to the most frequently asked questions about the trip, according to Northwest Orient Airlines.

Hotels: Hawaii now has more than 90 hotels, so you'll find one to fit your budget. Rates at one beautiful new hotel start at $6, single. The other newest Waikiki resort hotels also start at modest rates.

Meals: You'll pay just about what you pay back home. It depends upon your appetite and upon your choice of spot. You can range from a smart hotel to a popular drugstore counter, from a Japanese tea house to a Chinese family-style restaurant. And, of course, you'll try a luau, or native feast.

Wardrobe: Don't buy a thing new. It's always summer in Hawaii, so just pack your beach things and the summer clothes you wear at home. When you get there, splurge a little on Hawaii - inspired garments — swim suits, Aloha shirts, muumuus, or holomus. They're inexpensive and you'll enjoy them when you get home.

What's There to See? Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, first. Then, when you can tear yourself away from Waikiki, board an airliner for trips to the other islands—Kauai, Maui, Hawaii, at least. They run almost a commuter service, for the flights are all about 30 minutes and the fares are equally modest. Take a guided tour first, then rent a car and look around again. Get away from the tourist spots and see the real Old Polynesia. Visit the sugar and pineapple plantations, Pearl Harbor, the volcano area, the orchid centers.

All the Ships at Sea: Honolulu is the crossroads of the Pacific. You'll see ships from all the free nations. And you'll never forget the Royal Hawaiian Band, in immaculate white uniforms, playing "Aloha Oe" when the great passenger ships dock.

The Honolulu International Airport is one of the busiest in the world. You'll see planes arriving and departing for almost everywhere. And you'll bask in air filled with the fragrance of floral leis which are placed around the necks of travelers.

Interesting Facts? There are no snakes in Hawaii. The official flag is red, white and blue, with light stripes for the islands, and the English Jack in the corner. The grass shack used by Robert Louis Stevenson still stands. Honolulu has the only royal palace on American soil. More than 1,000,000 tons of raw sugar are grown each year. Whole roast pig is the highlight of a luau, a native feast. Mauna Loa, rising 13,679 feet above sea level, is the largest single mountain mass on earth. There are no references to "north" or "south"; direction are given "makai" to the sea—or "mauka"—to the mountains.

Indian Dances.

Most dances of New Mexico Indians are actually forms of prayer—asking the gods to be kind to the crops just planted or the hunting season just ahead.

A Minnesota Canoeist Relaxes

VACATION SIDELIGHTS IN MINNESOTA AREA

Many vacationers have an insatiable curiosity about the area in which they are spending their two-weeks-with pay. For those who like to poke around the countryside and play at the same time, the Detroit Lakes area of Minnesota is a virtual goldmine.

Located practically in the center of the North American continent, Detroit Lakes brags of 412 lakes in a 25 mile radius. Good fishing, beautiful country, good highways, sand beaches and a wonderful golf course make the area a natural for vacationers. However, many points of interest in this area might go overlooked if the visitor became completely involved in fishing, golfing or snoozing under a pine tree.

For instance, south of Detroit Lakes near the town of Pelican Rapids on Highway 59, a highway crew uncovered a prehistoric skeleton of the famous Minnesota Man (really a woman, incidentally). This skeleton is at least 20,000 years old and belonged to the Pleistocene Age—a more primitive era than that from which came the Indians or Eskimos. Anthropologists consider this one of the only true prehistoric skeletons ever found in North America.

A few miles further north on Cormorant lake the mooring stones of the Norsemen, who allegedly left the famed Kensington Runestone near Alexandria in 1362, were found.

This also is great Indian country full of battlegrounds and tribal burial mounds.

The treaty of 1825 which marked the boundary line between the Sioux and Ojibway runs between Sand and Prarie lakes, and thus the area was the scene of considerable Indian activity for many years. Periodically someone will turn up an artifact from these years.

For the golfers, Detroit Lakes has a most unusual attraction. The Detroit Lakes golf course, beautifully situated on an isthmus between lakes Sallie and Melissa, is the scene each year of the Annual Pine to Palm golf tournament which is conducted for the vacationers and which, last year, had entrants from 25 states and provinces.

CHAMPAGNE SAMPLES

In Reims, Epernay and Ay, in the heart of France's ancient Province of Champagne, each of the major wine companies provide guided tours and samples to visitors. Visitors can see some of the most fascinating wine cellars in the world.

Originally dug out of the chalk soil by Julius Caesar's legions, the cellars contain a treasure trove of aging wine bottles whose bubbling contents may one day fill a glass on your own table.

PETOSKEY, MICH. WATER FESTIVAL OPENS JULY 4-7

The fourth annual water festival will be held at Petoskey, Mich. July 4 through July 7. The festival has become one of the leading attractions in the state.

It will open on the morning of July 4 with an old-fashioned patriotic parade. Exhibits, fireworks over the water, sailing races, archery contests, a carnival and stage show will be features of the four-day event.

With the exception of the parade and a soap box derby, the entire show will take place in Petoskey's waterfront park.

Trailers or Tents.

Nearly all of Michigan's state parks and recreation areas feature facilities for trailer tourists and campers. The state operates 58 state parks and recreation areas scattered throughout the upper and lower peninsulas.

WASHINGTON, D.C. SUMMER JUBILEE

The nation's capital, always a top tourist attraction, has planned an interesting and entertaining summer jubilee. During the summer months the visitor will find Washington less crowded, the parks and tree-lined avenues at the peak of their splendor and the wonders that only the capital offers—the White House, the shrines, monuments, and government buildings—all open to the public as usual.

In addition to the usual attractions there will be a program of planned events.

The world's biggest fireworks display, an annual Fourth of July spectacular, takes place on the Washington Monument grounds with a program which includes entertainment by the armed forces, including the United States' Navy Band, massing of the colors and brief patriotic speeches.

The President's Cup Regatta, another annual event which attracts more than 100,000 spectators, gets underway July 15 with a series of canoe races. A three-day swimming meet will follow on Aug. 10-12 inclusive, with rowing races on the nineteenth. The big event, the twenty-fifth running of the unlimited class speedboats for the President's Cup trophy, is scheduled for Sept. 15 and 16, with sailing races on Sept. 22 and 23.

For those who prefer their aquatic sport at a more leisurely pace, there are cruises offered on the Potomac in the summer's sun or by romantic moonlight.

Fisherman using the capital as a headquarters will find Chesapeake Bay, with scores of fishing spots and hundreds of charter boats, within easy commuting distance. More than 60 yacht clubs are located around the shores of this body of water, often described as the Mediterranean of the Atlantic Coast and considered by many the greatest fishing hole in the country.

Throughout the summer season the Watergate concerts, the Sylvan Theater, and the service bands provide the music lover with a number of concerts.

Washington's summer jubilee has recreation for all ages; big league baseball, first run movies, amusement parks, the natural splendor of Rock Creek Park and a world famous zoo are all within easy access from any of nearly 100 hotels. Most hotels are air-conditioned (Washington claims to have more than any other city in the world), and reduced summer rates allow visitors to bring the children along at no additional cost.

Further information on the "Summer Jubilee in Washington, D. C.," may be obtained from the Greater National Capital Committee, Tourist Service Dept., 1616 K Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

HOLLAND'S MINIATURE CITY OPEN FOR FIFTH SEASON

Madurodam, Holland's fabulous wonderland of miniature castles, churches, marketplaces, stately dwellings, rail, ship and aircraft facilities, windmills, tulip fields, dykes and fishing villages—all 1-25th full size—has opened its gates in The Hague for a fifth season.

The amazing small-scale city, located 35 miles southwest of Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport, home base of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines visited during 1956 by hundreds of thousands of tourists—young and old—from every corner of the world. Her Royal Highness, Crown Princess Beatrix of The Netherlands, is the honorary Lady Mayor of the City in miniature.

An added feature at Madurodam this year is its completely redesigned mile-long electric railway. During their leisure hours last winter, engineers of The Netherlands Railways constructed an automatic electric safety control system for the entire length of the road, enabling a total of 10 trains to run simultaneously on the rail circuit with absolute safety. From a special observation cabin, visitors to the Lilliputian city will be able to follow the complex operations of the railroad by means of light signals.

However the chief attraction of Madurodam is its accurate display of architecture of Holland through the ages. At night, dramatic lighting effects transform this miniature town into a glittering spectacle of the old and the new in Holland.

CAT CAY KNOWN AS ANSWER TO A FISHERMAN'S DREAM

Cat Cay, 50 miles east of Miami—has long been known as a fisherman's dream. Right around the calendar the catches hauled in would startle the most blase angler.

But guests on the island delight in diversions other than fishing. Though the years golfers, swimmers, trap gun artists and wind sailors have opportunities galore for their favorite pastimes.

The palm-fringed, mile-long island, serving as a port of entry for the Bahams, is a mecca too for spear-fishing, skiff fishing and skin-diving.

Anglers hunting yellow-tail, bonefish, snapper and grouper find them in abundance 'round the isle.

Scientists from the University of Miami's Marine Laboratory spend many days dissecting the catches and tagging released fish; they make depth soundings and find out the water temperature the tuna likes best. All of the information some day will make it easier to track the tuna, and thus increase the world's food supply.

OZARK PLAYGROUNDS OFFER WIDE DIVERSITY

Whatever the vacationer may desire, chances are that he can find it in the Ozark Playgrounds.

Scenery? Its boundaries encompass wooded hills, swift streams and pleasant valleys.

Sports? Fishing is excellent, with hundreds of springs breaking from the ground to swell into pools, rush gaily along in babbling streams, and end in clear lakes. Swimming, water skiing, boating are all superb. There is horseback riding through wooded lanes, golf and tennis, hiking through areas of natural beauty.

History? It was made in the area, and those who seek them can find many memorials of those turbulent days.

Natural wonders? There are caves, underground waterfalls, and forests. There are parks and woods where one may pitch a tent and forget the pressures of everyday life.

Resorts, with reasonable rates, abound in the Ozarks. There is excellent food for those who place emphasis upon meals; square dancing and entertainment. It would be hard to find a more versatile vacation land than that which lies so close to home.

Suspension Bridge.

The highest suspension bridge in the world spans the canyon of the Arkansas river over the Royal Gorge in Colorado.

MRS. ROBERT M. MAY

Miss Ferrell Bride Of Gary G. Geiger

MISS LA VERNE ANN FERRELL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brady Ferrell, 1340 Wells avenue, Webster Groves, was married last night to Gary Gene Geiger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Geiger, 8756 Fern Glen drive, Crestwood. The Rev. T. Cecil Swackhamer performed the ceremony at Web-Hills Methodist Church.

The bride wore a chantilly lace gown and a fingertip veil gathered to a rhinestone and sequin crown. She carried white orchids.

Miss Vivian Wulfert served as maid of honor and Miss Katherine Neer, Miss Carol Schultz and Miss Janice Turner were bridesmaids.

Best man was Theodore Vollmar while ushers were Don Stein, Paul Babb, Clarence Shaul Jr. and Robert Pitts. Pamela Eileen Pitts was flower girl and Bobby Andres, ringbearer.

After a reception at the church Mr. Geiger and his bride departed for a tour of Florida and the south. They will live in a St. Louis Hills apartment.

Barbara Fisher Is Married

THE marriage of Miss Barbara Fisher to Thomas Charles Cox took place Monday night at University Methodist Church, with the Rev. Jesse E. Thomas officiating. A dinner was given afterward at the Park Plaza Hotel by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Paul Fisher, 7552 Wydown boulevard, Clayton. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Marvin W. Cox, 6824 Crest avenue, University City.

Mrs. W. Paul Fisher of Dallas, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor and Mr. Fisher best man.

The bride attended Washington University for two years, becoming a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Cox attended Westminster College and was graduated earlier this month from Washington University with a business administration degree. His fraternities are Kappa Alpha, of which he was president during his senior year, and Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary. He and his bride are motoring through the East on their honeymoon. They will live here until November when they will go to Fort Bliss, Tex., where he will be stationed as a second lieutenant.

Suzanne Goldberg, R. M. May Married; To Live in Florida

A BRIDE of last Sunday was Miss Suzanne Mae Goldberg, whose marriage to Robert M. May took place in the French Room of the Coronado Hotel. Rabbi Samual Thurman performed the ceremony beneath a flowered canopy against a background of white gladiolas, larkspur and majestic daisies.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Goldberg, 859 North McKnight road, University City; Mr. May's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert May, live in Hollywood, Fla.

The former Miss Goldberg chose an ivory duchess lace gown over satin. A lace crown, touched with sequins and pearls, secured her veil. She carried a Bible marked with white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Edwin Gordon, Hollywod, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Mrs. Edmund Goldberg, sister-in-law of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore aqua chiffon gowns and matching headpieces and carried bouquets of pink roses.

Mr. May was attended by Herbert Lewitt, Jacksonville, Fla., as best man. Ushers were Edmund Goldberg, Burlington, Vt.; Lawrence Isaac, cousin of the bridegroom, Chicago; and Clifford Fields, another cousin and Stanley and Harvey J. Oberman, cousins of the bride, St. Louis.

The wedding guests attended a dinner in the Crystal Room of the hotel. The bride and bridegroom, who will live in Hollywood, plan to visit San Juan, Puerto Rico, and Port-au-Prince, Haiti, on their wedding trip.

Miss Kohn Engaged To S. M. Axelbaum

THE engagement of Miss Frances Kohn to Sidney M. Axelbaum has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Kohn of Hayti, Mo. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Axelbaum, 7508 Wellington Way, Clayton. He and his fiancee are planning a December wedding.

Miss Kohn attended Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., where she became a member of Stephens Independent Association and Senior Pal Organization. Mr. Axelbaum, a graduate of the University of Colorado, Boulder, served as president of his fraternity, Sigma Alpha Mu, and as secretary of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Miss Lund Married To J.S. Lionberger Jr.

Mrs. Austin Porter Leland, St. Louis, and Mary Leathan Lund, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rector Lund, Tulsa, Okla., all cousins of the bride, and Nancy Chase Putnam, daughter of the Timothy Putnams, and Marian Clarkson Skinner, daughter of the Stuart M. Skinners, nieces of Mr. Lionberger.

All the girls wore white organdy, the adult attendants' dresses made with short sleeves, bateau necks and flared princess skirts with wide ruffles of embroidered organdy set on with pale pink velvet ribbon tied into bows with streamers. They made a pretty picture with their broad-brimmed white embroidered hats, crownless, trimmed with pink velvet ribbon. They wore pink slippers to match and carried pink roses.

Fluffy organdy frocks with double skirts, pale pink square collars edged with lace and pleated pink organdy sashes with large bows, were worn by the flower girls. They banded their hair with pink velvet and held pink rose nosegays.

The bride's gown was white peau de soie, the six-gored skirt flaring into an unusually long train and the tight bodice fashioned with short sleeves. A feature of the gown was the heirloom lace which trimmed it. The bateau neck was adorned in front with old tambour lace appliqued with medallions of limerick lace worn by the bride's great-great-great-grandmother, Mary Brandon Alexander Hall, wife of Gov. William Hall of Tennessee, when she entertained the Marquis de Lafayette.

A wide stole of the delicate tambour, with limerick medallions, was fastened to many yards of tulle and worn madonna fashion on the bride's hair. She carried madonna lilies and larkspur.

Lansden McCandless Jr., was best man for Mr. Lionbreger. Ushers were Edward B. Mower Jr., Jefferson Lewis Miller, Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon Jr., and William W. Sant II, St. Louis; Appleton Fryer, Buffalo, N.Y.; John S. Speed, Louisville, Ky.; J. Bogert Tailer Jr., New York, and Prentice Talmage Jr., Far Hills, N.J.

Reception guests filled the University Club's thirteenth floor. The receiving line formed at the broad lounge windows between blooming rhododendron trees. Mrs. Lund wore a pink linen sheath, narrow bands of black chantilly lace, piped in pink satin and black velvet, at the scoop neck and hip line, and a pink hairbraid picture hat trimmed in pink to match. Mrs. Lionberger was in gray chiffon, trimmed with a broad white organdy collar, and a small hat fashioned of red geranium petals and green leaves.

An epergne of white flowers and green leaves centered the buffet table, which was edged with smilax, and small, hurricane-lighted tables surrounded the dance floor where an orchestra played. The families and bridal party sat in the east dining room, the table decorations madonna lilies and larkspur, while the cake occupied a special table, covered with lace and satin, in the hall.

Out-of-town guests included Edward T. T. Williams and John Lawrence Johnston Jr., New York; Mrs. Fryer, Mrs. Speed and Mrs. Talmage, wives of ushers; Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. Lund, parents of flower girls, together with Miss Virginia Lund and Mrs. Earl C. Brown; Mr. and Mrs. William Prince Harsh, Kansas City, and their three sons, and Mr. and Mrs. George Harsh Jr., New Orleans, also the bride's uncles, aunts and cousins; Calvin R. Ledbetter, Little Rock, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cooper, Cedar Rapids, Ia., and their daughter, Miss Lee Cooper, and Mr. and Mrs. David Nelson Burruss, Cleveland, and their daughters, Miss Barbara and Miss Edna Lee Burruss.

Mr. and Mrs. Lionberger will fly to England and Wales on their honeymoon. On their return they will occupy his parents' home for the summer while the senior Lionbergers are at their summer house in Marion, Mass. They will take an apartment in the fall.

Rotenberg-Sandler Candlelight Wedding

MISS SONDRA PHYLLIS SANDLER, daughter of Benjamin Carl Sandler, 7258 Cornell avenue, University City, and the late Mrs. Sandler, became the bride of Eugene Jack Rotenberg Sunday afternoon at B'nai Amoona Congregation. Rabbi Abraham Halpern and Rabbi Bernard Lipnick performed the candlelighted ceremony under a canopy of ferns edged in pink carnations after which a dinner and reception were held in the congregation hall.

The bride wore white chantilly lace fashioned with a scooped neckline and wide satin sash drawn into a bow with streamers down the back of the full-trained skirt. She had elbow mitts and a fingertip veil secured to a lace cap and carried a Bible overlaid with a white orchid and stephanotis.

Mrs. Marvin Rotenberg, the bridegroom's sister-in-law, matron of honor, and Miss Thelma Lutsky, Miss Barbara Hoffman and Miss Judy Thaller, bridesmaids, were in pink ballerina dresses with bustles and carried pink carnations. Mr. Rotenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rotenberg, 7828 Cornell avenue, University City, chose his brother Marvin as best man and Oreon and Howard Sandler, the bride's brothers, and Dan Zimbalist, ushers.

Both the bride and bridegroom are Washington University graduates, she a member of this year's class. They are spending three weeks touring Colorado and Wyoming and will live at 6620 Clemens avenue.

A Look at What's New in Homemaking

By Dorothy Brainerd

IT is an exciting age in which we live, an era in which progress is made so rapidly that one never knows when tomorrow's newspaper may carry a report of some development that will revolutionize an entire profession or industry.

Fortunately for women, the field of homemaking has kept pace with science, medicine and business in these forward strides. And rightly so, for in the final analysis what is more important than the home?

New appliances, new methods, new ideas are introduced with such regularity that one must be constantly on the alert to keep up with the parade.

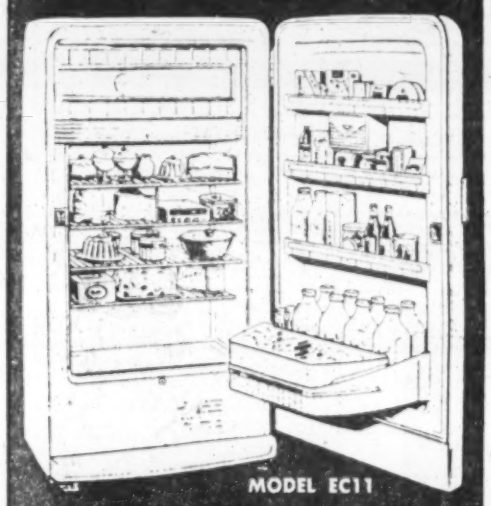

It would be obviously impossible to cover the whole subject of "What's New in Homemaking" in a few pages, but we have assembled in this section some features, large and small, which we believe may make your daily tasks easier—and the managing of your home more fun.

A Kitchen Literally Filled With Ideas for Convenience

This dream kitchen of tomorrow is built with today's mass-produced home appliances. Although not sold as a unit, all appliances and materials used are available at retail outlets. Note the top-hinged wall cabinets that open up and out. Cooking units, base cabinets and drawers are operated by pushbutton controls. (For further details, see story on inside of this section).

Appliances Combined Under One Continuous Countertop

Perhaps in no phase of homemaking are changes coming more rapidly than in kitchen design and planning. Shown above is a new unit designed for installation in new homes and remodeled kitchens, in which all of the appliances necessary for food preparation and clean-up are combined under one continuous stainless countertop. (See accompanying story for details.)

Appliances Have Changed American Way of Life

Answer to Servantless Era; Details on That 'Dream Kitchen' on Cover of This Section.

WHAT IS NEW in homemaking? Just about everything one can imagine, with a never-ending series of surprises. But it is not only the gadgets and gimmicks that are changing, it is our whole way of life. American families have lost their servants, but they no longer mourn the loss. They have adapted their living to servantless homes, and they like the new regime. They have discovered that electrical appliances take over the chores, without loss of privacy which is inevitable with domestics in the home, and without need to adjust to the moods and whims of the "servant girls" of yesteryear.

Electrical servants are always on hand, they suffer no maladies which keep them away from the job, they never complain if meals are delayed or if there are extra guests. And they never leave without notice.

So satisfactory are they that some 338,000,000 electrical devices were sold from 1950 to 1955. There were 19 different kinds of electrical appliances in 1930; today there are 54, and more are constantly being developed. As an example, 4000 new electric ranges are being absorbed into the market every day, and a million more food freezers a year. Yes, there is a new kind of homemaking today, and it is changing our daily lives.

It is a kind of homemaking that is tailor-made to fit the individual needs of every family. American women design their kitchens to suit themselves, they shop for features in appliances which appeal to them, they keep a sharp eye on new developments and what they can mean in terms of daily living. It is an exciting era for homemakers, a sort of a modern-day renaissance. And the best may be yet to come.

Just a Glimpse.

This section gives you a glimpse of some of the things, large and small, which are new. But it cannot begin to cover all of the possibilities in an ultra-modern "dream" home. Perhaps this is just as well, for half of the fun is discovering for one's self the wonders on display. Discovering them, and actually working them.

It is one thing to read of a refrigerator on wheels that can be moved easily for convenience when cleaning. It is another to discover how little effort it takes to wheel a bulky appliance such as this.

It is one thing to read of the amazing speed of electronic cooking. It is another to see this modern miracle performed before one's eyes.

It is one thing to read of appliances in pastel colors. It is another to see these subtle shades that start every woman with a smidgen of imagination dreaming of a kitchen decorated in her own favorite tones, as individual as her wardrobe and as much a part of her daily life.

Planned Convenience.

Kitchen planning looms large in any story on what is new in homemaking. It is, actually, a new science that packages appliances and cabinets as matched units, thus cutting down the time and work of daily household chores.

For generations kitchens, like Topsy, "jest grew." They grew in too many instances without rhyme or reason, resulting in a staggering and tiring number of needless steps. Kitchens often became a catch-all. If the homemaker was lucky enough to have cabinets, they usually were put in as an afterthought, with upper shelves so far out of reach that a step-ladder-stool was a "must."

The wooden kitchen table provided the only real work surface in the room. When not in use, it usually was stacked with odds and ends for which there was no storage space. True, there was room under the sink and the leg-type stove for milk bottles, waste baskets and boxes, but this was dusty and inconvenient.

The big change came about with the introduction of built-in automatic dishwashers, electric ranges and modern cabinets. Range design obsoleted the high oven models so the appliance could be flanked with base cabinets, forming an unbroken work surface. New electric ranges could be placed with regard for convenience rather than the necessity for venting fumes. Refrigerators were brought into the pattern, near the range and dishwasher-sink.

In keeping with the idea of planning the kitchen for convenience and work-saving, the concept of "kitchen work centers" came into being. Each automatic appliance is now complemented with base and wall cabinets to make it a self-sufficient unit.

Kitchen planning starts with the premise that the kitchen contains four basic centers—cook, clean-up, refrigeration and serving. With the exception of the serving center each is served by an appliance, and each has its own storage space and work surface.

Virtually any kitchen design is now possible with built-in appliances and steel cabinets. The distinctive island styling shown elsewhere in this section is just one example.

Shown above is an illustration of another concept of the modern kitchen, with automatic electric appliances built under a continuous countertop.

There is little doubt that the planned pushbutton kitchen of today and its engineered storage space has brought new efficiency and convenience to the homemaker.

What's Ahead?

But what about the kitchen of tomorrow? Who can predict, with progress continuing at such a rapid pace? To put it bluntly, "anything can happen."

In the meantime, take another long look at the streamlined kitchen on the cover of this section for an idea of just what convenience is possible in this pushbutton age.

It is not sold as a unit, but all appliances and materials used are actually available on a retail level. It must be seen "in action" to be really appreciated, but here are a few of the things that it does.

All surface cooking units, base cabinets and drawers are operated by pushbutton controls. The top-hinged wall cabinets open up and out, providing easy access.

The toaster, coffee maker and mixer rise to a convenient working height at the touch of a button, or lower out of the way when not in use so that there is a smooth surface. A condiment shelf and kitchen utensil rack disappear into the base of the wall cabinets when not in use.

Other buttons open cupboard doors and drawers. This is truly a "pushbutton paradise"—each button labeled to avoid mix-ups and surprises.

Built-in appliances include a combination refrigerator with a food freezer, an automatic dishwasher, an electric food waste disposer, a plug-in surface griddle, three surface cooking units plus a deepwell thrift cooker that converts into a fourth surface unit or a French fryer, and a built-in wall oven controlled by lighted pushbuttons and automatic timers for "remote control" cooking.

A snack bar at the end of the island turns the corner into the built-in laundry area with clothes washer, water heater, clothes dryer and rotary ironer. The washer and dryer have remote controls mounted on the wall at eye level; only the washer lid and dryer door are visible. The ironer is on a disappearing panel that rotates from shut to open position.

The arrangement is not fixed; it may be made as flexible as desired, placing surface cooking units in any design of clusters, tailoring counter tops to suit individual work habits, installing the built-in oven in brick, plaster, stone, wood or metal cabinets.

More attention is being given to lighting these days and it is most adroitly handled in this model kitchen. Indirect lighting below wall cabinets illuminates work surfaces and diffuses a soft light through glass cabinet shelves above. Light from fluorescent and incandescent lamps has been blended to provide clear illumination that does not change the natural colors of foods.

What is new in homemaking? That gives you an idea. What is to come tomorrow? No one knows—but it is fun to dream.

COMPLETE KITCHEN IN A SINGLE UNIT

Uses Minimum Amount of Space, Gives Maximum Convenience.

It is not surprising that idea of combining cooking and clean-up appliances into one unit has proved to be one of the most exciting recent developments in homemaking (and one of the most popular with women) when one stops to consider that it solves a pressing problem of our day, that of space, and in addition offers the homemaker maximum convenience.

If space is at a premium, and it certainly is in most of the newer homes, such an arrangement utilizes every inch to best advantage.

For example, it would be hard to imagine a more compact design than the unit pictured to the left. It requires only nine feet of wall space, but appliances built into it include an automatic dishwasher, garbage disposer, plug-in surface griddle, four electric surface cooking units with pushbutton controls, an oversize built-in electric oven with a plug-in rotisserie, and a smaller companion oven. All of this—and a gleaming stainless steel worktop, too.

As though this was not enough, other convenience features include automatic timers, small appliance outlets, disappearing soap dishes; a one-lever faucet and extra storage space in base cabinets. The left rear surface unit may be lowered for use as a thrift cooker or deepfat French fryer.

This is, of course, a de luxe unit; less elaborate ones also are available.

New Official Definitions Of Laundry Equipment

Information Valuable if Purchasing Appliances, Helpful in Understanding Articles for Consumers.

NEW developments in equipment necessarily lead to new terms—terms which can be easily misunderstood unless they are clearly defined.

Because there has been some confusion in the minds of homemakers concerning the exact meaning of such phrases as "fully automatic washers" and "conventional washers," the American Home Laundry Manufacturers' Association has compiled the following glossary of definitions.

If you are contemplating the addition of any laundry equipment it might be well to clip this article and save it for your future guidance. It also might be helpful in understanding articles which appear in the press from time to time concerning the use and care of equipment.

WASHERS

Automatic Washer.

A power-driven device for washing fabrics which, upon one setting of controls, (a fills itself with water at a set temperature (or as near that temperature as the water delivered to the washer permits), (b) washes, (c) rinses, (d) extracts water, and (e) stops—all without further attention on the part of the operator.

Semi-Automatic Washer.

A power-driven device for washing fabrics, which performs filling, washing, rinsing, and water extraction functions, performed by the automatic washer, without the operator's removing the fabrics, but which requires that one or more of the operations be controlled by setting controls subsequent to the original setting.

Wringer Washer.

A power-driven device for washing, which is equipped with a power-driven wringer for extracting water.

Spinner Washer.

A power-driven device for washing fabrics, in which clothes are washed in one container and removed to another for rinsing and water extraction.

DRYERS

Automatic Dryer.

A power-driven device for drying fabrics which, through heat and tumbling and with or without air flow, evaporates water from fabrics for a period of time determined by the operator at the initial setting of the dial, or for a period of time determined by the machine pursuant to conditions within the machine, and which shuts off without further attention by the operator.

COMBINATION WASHER-DRYERS

A power-driven device for both washing and drying fabrics which, upon one setting of the controls, combines the automatic washer and automatic dryer functions in one continuous operation.

IRONERS

A power-driven device for smoothing and removing moisture from fabrics, which uses pressure, friction, and thermostatically controlled heat and which is operated by hand, knee or foot controls.

DRIP-DRY TECHNIQUE

If you are going to drip-dry a nylon, orlon, or dacron garment, it's best not to wring it at all. After sudsing, take it from the final rinse and adjust it over a hanger or rod.

This technique prevents setting wrinkles or creases into the fabric.

Interesting Arrangement of Built-In Appliances

Built-in appliances and modern steel cabinets permit virtually any kitchen design that suits a woman's fancy, and available space. In this distinctive island styling surface cooking units are set in special rounded door cabinets which contain storage space for pots and pans. Such island arrangements are becoming increasingly popular where it is desirable to conserve steps between centers. The built-in wall oven at the left and rows of steel wall and base storage cabinets are in two shades of baked enamel finish. The color is repeated in the floor covering. Note how the curtains pick up, in smaller scale, the design on the floor. This is most effective, provided that no other decorative notes are introduced. Other ornamentation might make the room seem "busy" since pattern is used for both the floor and the window treatment.

NEW FRENCH FRYER

To meet the cooking needs of modern patio-living and more at-home entertaining, a special "party size" French fryer has been introduced.

Finished in satin chrome, this undercounter unit will French fry two pounds of shrimp in two minutes, chicken for 12 persons in half an hour, 16 doughnuts in three minutes.

Pre-Wash Treatment.

Shirt collars and cuffs, the seats of children's pants and other areas of heavy soil should be dipped in warm water and scrubbed lightly but firmly with a soap-rubbed brush before placing them in the washing machine.

'EXTRA' SERVICES FROM EQUIPMENT MAKE LIFE EASIER

In homemaking, as in the world of fashion, it is the little "extra" touches that make the difference between mediocrity and distinction. It pays to look about your home now and then with an imaginative eye; you may discover possibilities you have been overlooking.

For example, much of the usefulness of appliances depends upon HOW they are used. There is little point in possessing these modern marvels if they are not used to the limit of their capacity to work wonders.

One of the happiest features of a new appliance is its versatility. A few fresh ideas are all you need to use almost any piece of equipment for a myriad of purposes beyond even the manufacturer's fondest dreams.

For example, you can add a truly elegant touch to any meal by using your dishwasher as a plate warmer.

Of course you fry delectable foods in your deep-fat-fryer, but you can also use the low temperature setting for heating rolls for a party, for baking beans, for cooking delicious stews or making your favorite soup—and the same thing goes for the deepwell cooker built into your range.

Your dryer also will give you special services. It will dry feather pillows in one and one-half to two hours; make stuffed toys more fluffy than ever (no need to throw them away just because they are soiled); and recondition velvet jackets. Toss a wet bath towel into the dryer; when it is steam-filled, add the velvet garment and wrinkles will disappear. This slick trick also will work on gabardines and many other fabrics.

These are just a few suggestions; you will discover for yourself many other ways in which to get the most from your electrical servants if you will consider ways in which they can serve you.

HOW UP-TO-DATE IS YOUR ATTITUDE?

A personal question, this—but just how up-to-date is your attitude toward your job as homemaker? Have you checked it lately? Is it as modern as the electrical appliances which make quick work of your chores?

These are questions worth pondering. When one considers the entire subject of "What's New in Homemaking," it is wise to remember that the most basic change is the one which has taken place gradually in women's thinking. They are no longer slaves to housework.

It is no coincidence that there has been a slow but sure switch from the term "housewife" to "homemaker." Caring for a house means keeping it scrupulously clean; making a home involves planning for the growth, development and happiness of every member of the family in pleasant and orderly surroundings.

Of course new products and new appliances have made possible the leisure which has enabled women to take this wider view. The important thing is to plan carefully so that they are used to best advantage. Running a home is now more of a managerial job than one of physical effort.

The modern homemaker plans her time carefully, works out a schedule tailored to her individual requirements — and doesn't worry if it isn't orthodox.

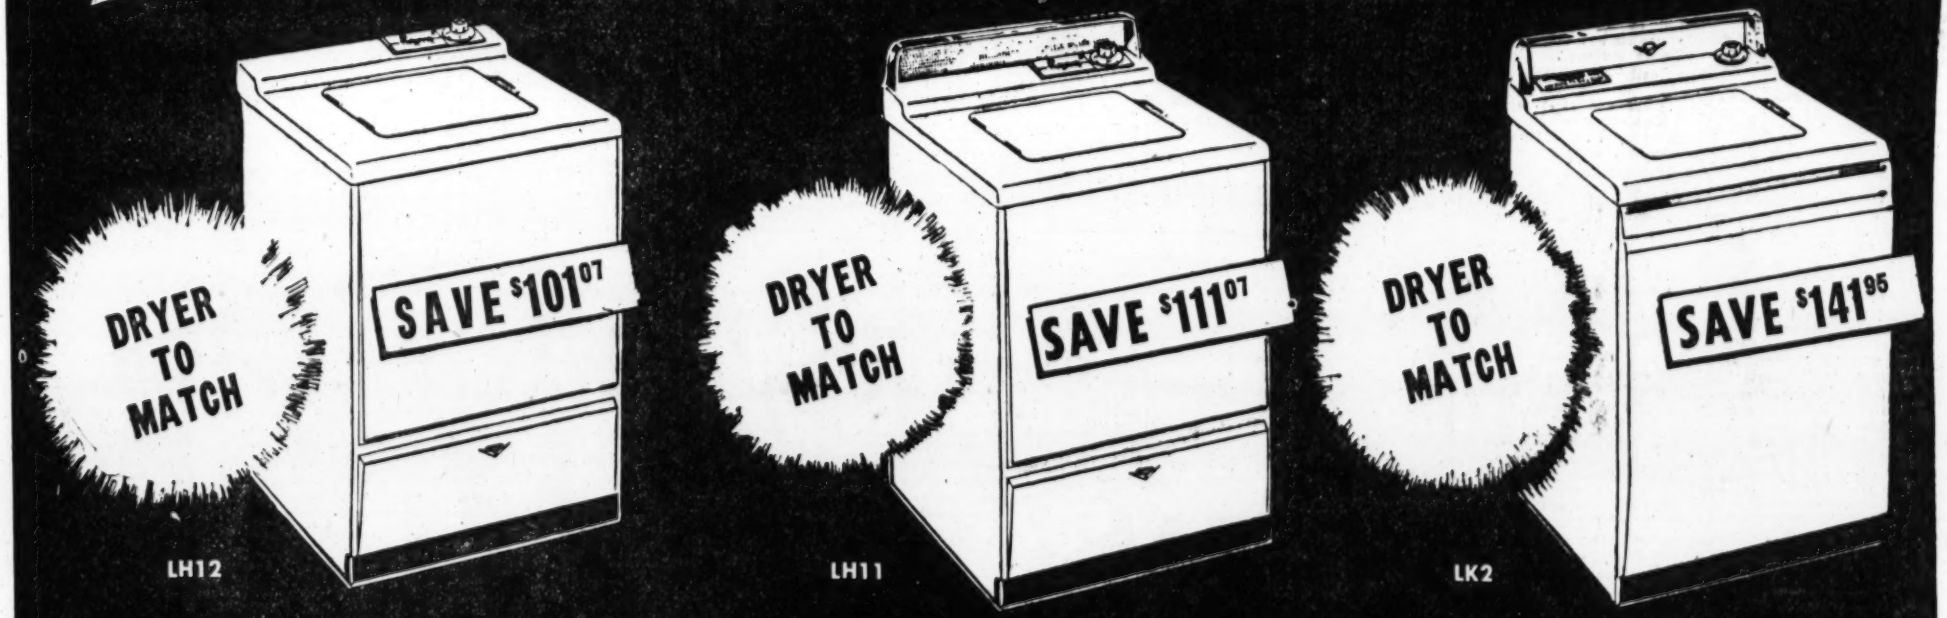

She keeps her freezer filled with thoughtfully planned foods, so that any member of the family feels free to bring home unexpected guests. She is ready for a picnic whenever Father suggests one; her schedule is flexible enough to "put first things first." And family fun is important. Above all, she takes great pride in her job, knowing that it is the most important one in the world.

Two Refrigerator Features

Engineers are constantly at work developing new features in refrigerators which will give users the maximum amount of convenience. Here are two worthy of note. The first, a king-size food storage bin on the door. A large shelf with two-thirds of a bushel capacity is attached to the lower door section. When the door is opened this shelf, almost a foot and one-half deep, swings out, putting fresh vegetables, tall bottles and bulky items at the homemaker's fingertips.

The second, a feature which women will really cheer—rollers. The appliance may be simply rolled out of the way for easy cleaning beneath, beside, behind, for decorating, or for finding that evasive earring that always rolls under the refrigerator.

Dishwasher Developments

The dishpan is fast becoming as outmoded as the garbage can, as more and more homemakers discover the advantages of having sparkling clean dishes and glassware by simply pushing a button and setting a dial.

One reason for this acceptance is undoubtedly the health factor. There can be no question which is more sanitary—dishes washed in a pan with mop or cloth, or those which are washed automatically with water too hot for the hands, and which go through an efficient spray rinse, two five-minute washes, two one-minute rinses, and are then dried by warm air.

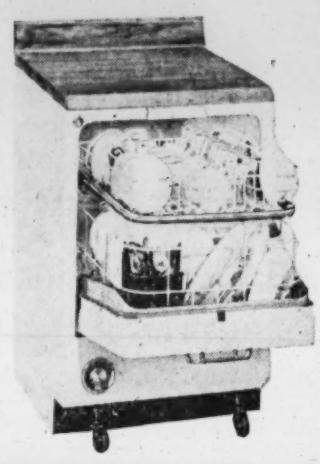

In many homes the question is no longer whether to buy a dishwasher, just which type will be best for the individual kitchen plan . . . a combination sink and dishwasher, a built-in undercounter model, or a mobile appliance.

Shown on this page are two types—an all-electric dishwasher sink available with electric food waste disposer; and a mobile dishwasher with a wooden counter top.

One of the most recent developments in dishwashers is a device that automatically injects "water wetting" solution into the final rinse water. It is claimed that exhaustive tests show that dishes, glassware and silver washed in the new dishwashers come out completely spotless over 99 per cent of the time.

Here is how this fascinating device works. When the timer mechanism arrives at the last one-minute rinse, it automatically injects a few drops of the liquid wetting agent into the water through a tiny hole in the cap. The "wetting" solution breaks down surface tension of the water so that water, in the form of droplets, is not left on the glasses and silverware to form spots but slides off in sheets.

Different Types to Suit Varying Needs

SHORT ON SPACE? 30-INCH RANGE MAY BE ANSWER

If a cabinet range is your choice but you don't have 36 or 40 inches of available space, there is still an answer to your problem.

A 30-inch range, in standard or de luxe models, may be the answer. These small ranges now have the most-wanted features and conveniences, built into a minimum space.

New this year is an automatic grill in the oven of one range. A skewer turns food at the proper speed for even browning. To the left of the oven is a peg board which glides out easily to display a rack of lids, hooks for pot holders and a rack for the recipe book.

Remember that a 30-inch range may leave just the additional space you need to fit a freezer or automatic washer and dryer into your kitchen area.

Wise Use of Color Brings Life Into Today's Kitchens

Some Advice on Psychology of Color; Tips on How to Plan Decorative Scheme.

THE current interest in the use of color in the kitchen is an encouraging sign that women are finding more pleasure in their work, and are determined to have a cheerful spot in which to go about their daily chores. But just how to introduce this color effectively is a problem which puzzles many a homemaker.

The first point to take into consideration is whether the appliances themselves will be white, or one of the lovely pastel shades of pink, brown, green, yellow or blue.

This is a choice which is squarely up to you. If you like change, you may be wiser to keep your basic equipment white and use color for those things which do not represent such a large investment and may be replaced easily. In this way you can, by the simple process of re-painting the walls and making new curtains, change your color scheme at will. If you decide upon this safe-and-sane course, it might be well to have a neutral floor covering.

But if you do not change your mind too frequently, if you know that there is one special color or combination of colors which makes you feel happy and relaxed, then the new colored appliances are for you.

They are so lovely that they are truly hard to resist. No longer are they the bright colors originally introduced in the appliance field. They are now soft, livable tones that fairly make your heart sing.

Match, or Mix-Match?

If you decide upon colored appliances, the next question to be decided is whether to buy range, refrigerator, freezer and laundry equipment in the same color, or whether to mix-match—perhaps the brown and yellow, or the pink and brown, or the yellow and blue. So subtle are these colors that they blend happily with one another.

Do give serious thought to your choice of colors; they have definite emotional characteristics which affect individuals. Your own reactions are the surest guide. Usually there is some strong association connected with a strong feeling for or against a particular color, and it isn't wise to use a color to which there is a personal objection just because it is currently smart, or because you feel you may grow to love it. Chances are you won't.

The effect of color upon our moods and emotions has been studied thoroughly by experts, and is given serious consideration in business and industry these days. It is just as important in the home.

Authoritative Advice.

The following color chart and tips on the use of color have been compiled by the Decorative Fabrics Institute. Because this advice is authoritative, you may wish to save it for future reference.

Red is warm, vibrant, stimulating.

Yellow is cheerful, refreshing, and produces the sensation of sunlight and warmth. It should be handled carefully—the slightest change will make it cool or warm, soothing or aggravating.

Blue is cool and restful. It is soothing for persons who are inclined to be excitable, but is often depressing to a morose person.

Green is pleasing and invigorating, because most shades are subconsciously associated with nature.

Orange has a warmth and vibrancy often too stimulating to the majority of persons, yet in the persimmon shades it is an excellent accent.

Purple evokes both the cool reaction of blue and the warmth of red. It is neither very stimulating nor strongly soothing. Purple creates the impression of dignity. There are many tints and hues of this color in home fashions.

Balance exciting, stimulating colors in the red and yellow families with soothing colors in blue, green or neutral tones. Warm up the blues and greens with a spot of red or yellow.

Color is closely allied to light, and the reflection factor must be taken into consideration. The nearer the color approaches white, the more light you will have in the room. The nearer it approaches black, the less the light.

When planning the colors for a room, it is better to work with large samples of fabrics, wallpapers or paints, because color used in large quantities become darker and more intense.

Colors used decoratively must be tested under both daylight and artificial light conditions.

Color can be brilliant or very dull, a quality called intensity. The brilliant color will be more dramatic and has to be used sparingly, with great care.

Texture affects the intensity of a color to a great degree. A rough texture will reflect less light and seem duller, while a smooth texture will appear brighter because of the reflection factor and its luminous qualities.

Where to Start.

With the above advice from the decorators at the institute, and with your own personal preferences to guide you, assume that you have decided upon the color you wish to use in your own kitchen.

Now how do you go about building your decorative scheme? One safe system is to take a lovely fabric or a good painting, in which a variety of colors have been expertly blended, and use these colors.

For your kitchen, you might do the same thing with a decorative shelving paper that appeals to you.

For example, suppose your kitchen faces north or is on a courtyard where there is little natural light. Build your color scheme around a shelving paper with rich, ripe red apples with shiny green leaves shown on a pale yellow background. Taking your color cue from it, paint the walls yellow. Do the outside of the cabinets in the same color, but paint the inside red to match the apples. Any small shelves, such as a spice shelf near the range, also can be painted red.

Add a few minor notes in green—a plant or two on the window, perhaps a green dish on display, green canisters for flour and sugar. The result is a bright, cheery room.

Here are a few other suggested color schemes:

Paint cabinets and woodwork in a warm pink; use ivory for walls and ceiling. Spark the room with chartreuse used for trimming on the curtains and for a few kitchen accessories.

Or suppose you decide upon a refrigerator and range in soft yellow. A blue floor, light blue walls, white cabinets and yellow curtains would be charming.

Do you prefer appliances in a soft green? Try a black floor with gray-green walls, white cabinets, and cafe curtains of a gay yellow print.

Turquoise is one of the most high-style shades in home furnishings. Try it on ceiling, walls and woodwork, with cabinets and appliances of white, using rose as an accessory color.

PRACTICAL ADVICE

So many of the most attractive cottons are machine-sudsable this season, women are getting more and more accustomed to putting their dressiest clothes into the washer.

Thrifty shoppers don't hesitate to turn down a party gown which doesn't have a guarantee of complete washability. It's good sense to buy the outfits that cost practically nothing to care for and require so little effort.

Convenience Features

HERE are just a few of the many features which the modern electric range offers the homemaker. Shown above is a fryer which eliminates danger of hot fat spilling over. The kettle fits into deep-well position, and the unit keeps the fat at exactly the right temperature.

How is this for convenience? The rack may be adjusted up and down—to place the meat near the broil unit for searing, and then lower it to complete the cooking process. There is no need to touch either the hot pan or the rack.

Broiled meats should not be punctured with a fork if they are to retain all of those flavorful juices. And they need not be, when they can be turned with this grill. It also may be used to barbecue smaller items.

Just Look What Has Happened to the Old Kitchen Stove

NEW ELECTRONIC COOKING CENTER

Here is the very newest development in ranges—the electronic oven that cooks foods in seconds. Designed for modern American kitchens, the unit resembles a large built-in oven finished in satin brushed chrome. An electron tube converts electrical energy into high frequency waves that cook foods at truly amazing speeds. Frozen foods can be put directly into it with no defrosting. Cooking containers do not get hot.

OF all the changes which have been made in the appliances with which a woman works, the old kitchen stove probably has undergone the most radical revision. It has come a long, long way indeed.

There are many reasons for the growing popularity of the built-in range. For one thing, some homemakers prefer an oven at eye level. For another, the ovens and surface cooking units can be grouped to suit individual preferences or needs. Undoubtedly the popularity of early American kitchens with brick interiors, fireplaces and dining areas has contributed to the popularity of the built-in.

The new two-level built-in makes it possible to bake and broil foods at the same time, since each oven has separate time and temperature controls. It was designed for large families who want a single built-in installation with double oven convenience, for those with limited kitchen wall space, and for hostesses who do a great deal of entertaining.

Real news in the equipment field is the electronic cooking center. Some experts are predicting that within 10 to 15 years American homemakers may be preparing all of their foods by means of a bank of pushbutton-operated electronic devices.

Truly dramatic in performance, it works such wonders as cooking bacon in 15 seconds, poaching eggs in 10 seconds, converting frozen biscuits from freezer-hard to steaming-hot and ready to serve in 10 seconds.

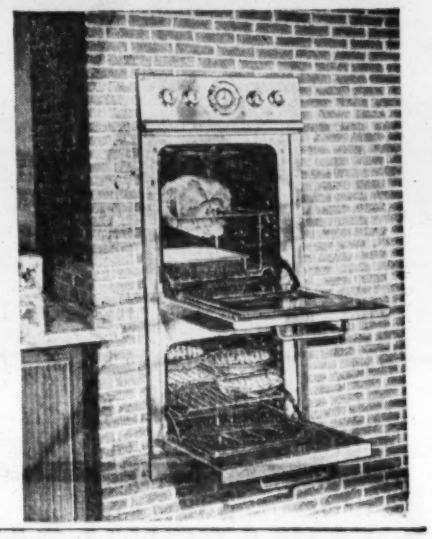

Said one woman, after experimenting with this miracle-worker, "I can put in a layer cake and watch it rise up in the pan. It's completely baked in three minutes."

Another amazing fact is that only the food gets hot in an electronic oven — not the dish or container in which it is cooking. The oven stays cool, and pans of hot food can be removed with bare hands.

Jilted, He's Lived In Cave 17 Years

By Bill Rawlins

JEFFERSON CITY, Tenn., June 23 (AP).

WHEN Ben Ballenger was 34, his sweetheart jilted him and "hauled off and married a fellow with a brand-new Hudson." To ease a broken heart, he holed up in a cave.

BEN BALLENGER AT THE DOOR OF THE CAVE IN WHICH HE MAKES HIS HOME.

That was almost 17 years ago, and he's lived there ever since.

"I've got it in my blood," he said, as he sat in his rocker, rolling a cigarette. "I've been told that I'm the only man in the United States who lives in a natural cave."

But for all this, Ballenger—slight of build, normally clean-shaven and neat—is no hermit. "When I first moved in here, I stopped shaving, and I had a beard down to here," he said, indicating his chest with his gnarled hands. "But it was too much trouble."

He welcomes visitors, knows everyone in his hollow, likes to fish on nearby Cherokee lake, and is ready with advice for anyone who seeks it—particularly advice to the lovelorn. He provides for his wants by doing odd jobs; he's a good carpenter and brickmason.

Opening into the side of a wooded, Holston river bluff, the 40-foot cave is reached by a wooden stairway, complete with handrail, which Ballenger built himself. He also fitted the arched cavern with a frame door and wood cooking stove, and such comforts of home as a pancake turner, hung from a nail, two teaspoons and a knife and fork, a coffee pot, and several jars filled with such things as sugar and flour. He sleeps on an Army cot, and keeps abreast of current events by reading the Knoxville newspapers. These he gets daily at the foot of his stairway in a rural mailbox. When Ballenger needs supplies, he hitches a ride to Jefferson City, about three miles to the south.

Come spring, the cave gets a bit damp and Ballenger moves his cot into a tiny shack outside the cave door—using the naturally air-conditioned cave (with a year-round temperature of 58 degrees) as a retreat from the summer sun. He usually moves his bed back into the cave in November.

● IN THE WINTERTIME, with a warm fire blazing in the stove, the narrow, jagged cave contains memories of four ex-sweethearts, all of whom, says Ballenger, "let me down for fellows with bigger bankrolls and cars." These include the fiancee who married the man with the Hudson, another who married "a fellow with a little Ford coupe," and two more he doesn't talk about.

"I tell people that a woman's theme song is 'How Green Is Thy Billfold?'" Ballenger said.

His role as area handyman keeps him too busy to fret much.

"I'm a sort of jack-of-all-trades," he explained. "I built every house in this hollow, I guess. And I've just been down the road cutting a neighbor boy's hair.

"The people around here don't have too much," he said. "I get about $300 a house. If I wanted to work for a contractor, I guess I could get about two and a half dollars an hour."

Born and reared in Knoxville, Ballenger joined the Navy when he was 18, and served a six-year hitch from 1923-29.

"I'm often asked how I got the idea for living in a cave," he said. "I guess it was when I was in the Navy in New York. We'd get toddied up, and spend the night in a subway. It was warm and didn't cost anything. When I found this cave, it was just like sleeping in the subway."

● THOUGHTS OF LEAVING can be dispelled by a 35-mile trip to Knoxville. "Whenever I get in one of those Knoxville traffic jams, with everybody in such a hurry, I get awful lonesome to get back to my cave. When I was a kid, I wanted to be right in the middle of the loudest noise there was—but not any more."

BALLENGER IN HIS CAVE HOME IN A RIVER BLUFF NEAR JEFFERSON CITY, TENN. THE CAVE IS 40 FEET DEEP BUT JUST ABOUT HIGH ENOUGH FOR A MAN TO STAND IN.

Now 51, Ballenger says he's over his broken love affairs. Asked if he might yet get married, a twinkle came into his blue eyes.

"You can't tell," he replied, grinning. "They say that guys like me fall the hardest. I wouldn't expect any woman to live with me here," he added, indicating the cave, with its dirt floor, kerosene lamp, jagged walls and ceiling—just high enough for a man to stand erect. "I'd want to save up enough money to build myself a house so I could take care of her. That's expected of a man."

His weathered face grew thoughtful.

"Fellow from Knoxville was up here talking the other day. He told me he'd just had another cuss fight with his wife. They have a couple of kids, and they're about the only thing that's holding them together.

"I tell people that I've sailed five of the seven seas—been on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans—and I've settled down here to some peace and quiet.

"But when any man tells you he hates women, don't believe him, because it's just not so. Look at me. Women have let me down a-plenty, and I don't hate 'em."

NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS

Beginning the Hilarious Account of a Georgia Hillbilly's Escapades in the U.S. Air Force

This is the first installment of a condensation of the best-selling book, "No Time for Sergeants," which tells of the humorous escapades of a hillbilly in the United States Air Force. Published by Random House, the book has been adapted for the stage and is a current hit on Broadway.

By Mac Hyman

WHEN THE FELLOW SAID, "THEY'LL COME OUT HERE AND TAKE HIM!" PA RARED BACK, LIFTED HIS FIST UP AND BELLOWED OUT: "OFF MY PROPERTY."

THE thing was, we had gone fishing that day and Pa had wore himself out with it the way he usually did when he went fishing. So after we walked the four miles back to the house, he didn't care to eat right then, so he set down on the porch and pulled his hat down over his ears and leaned his head back against the post to doze a bit.

In a little bit, he was snoring. I was kind of enjoying it as it was quiet by that time; it was about sundown and the dogs was laying around the yard opening their eyes every once in a while to make sure one of them didn't get fed before the other one.

All of a sudden I seen my dog Blue raise up his head and perk his ears and set there a minute and then stare at me with this real puzzled look on his face.

Well, I wouldn't have thought nothing of it if it had of been any other dog, but Blue warn't the kind of dog that ever looked puzzled about anything much. I listened. I didn't hear nothing at first, and it was a few seconds before I made it out myself.

It was a far-off moaning sound somewhere, and then it come to me what was bothering Blue because it sounded like a car to me.

So I knowed why he was puzzled then because I don't guess he has seen no more'n two cars in his whole life and one of them was one my uncle had and it didn't have no motor in it and he usually just hitched a mule to the front to pull it along.

ANYHOW, the sound kept getting louder. Then it sounded like it was almost roaring, and about that time it heaved into sight around the edge of the woods. And you should have heered the racket set up then.

The dogs got to barking and the chickens started squawking, running this way and that, and then the car came busing up in front of the place with dust behind it in long billows, turning and heading right for the house like it was aimed for it.

It jolted and stopped and jumped forward again and finally came to a halt, and then the door slammed and this little, fat, round faced fellow come walking through the cloud of dust talking just as hard as he could.

Pa usually warn't in so good a humor, even when he woke up easy and casual. So waking up with dogs barking and chickens howling and a man stomping up and talking that way was pretty much of a shock to him. I seen his eyes blinking and his jaws moving before he was halfway up; then he stood there a second, shaking his head trying to get his bearings.

All this time the man kept on talking — I caught the words " . . . want to see Will Stockdale; now is that you or ain't it because I've been riding for . . . " but that was all I could make out. He kept up with it, and then he raised one finger up and started wiggling it at me, saying someing else, but about that time Pa lit into him with about the only thing he could think of at the time, I guess, being half asleep from the way he was: he yelled out, "Don't you pint your finger in my boy's face!"

THEN the other fellow managed to get in a few more words, and he said, "Look, I don't care nothing about all that and I didn't come out here to talk to you nohow. I'm from the draft board and if this boy knows what's good for him, he'll get in that car right now and head back to town with me and we won't have any more trouble about it.

"You folks out here think just because you live 10,000 miles from town, you don't have to do things like anybody else, but I'm here to tell you different. I've been over roads that ain't even been discovered yet and down trails that nothing but a horse and wagon has kept down, and this is the third time I've tried to find this place, and I mean it's the last one, too!"

And he kept on like that for a pretty good while and kept Pa from busting in again, but then he said, "I've wrote you four letters and haven't had an answer to none of them and you needn't say you can't read neither because you could have got somebody to read them to you, so that ain't no excuse!"

And that set Pa off again so that he done some pretty fierce cussing right up in the man's face and asked him what he meant by that and all; and when the fellow said, "I mean just what I say. They'll come out here and take him if he don't come with me and they can do it too!" it looked like Pa was going to tear into him all of a sudden.

He rared back with his chest poking out and his face turning red and lifted his fist up and bellowed out, "Off my property!" so loud that the fellow's face turned right white. He started going backward, looking at Pa with his eyes wide, while Pa kept making those noises in his throat; and then he turned and headed for the car and slammed the door and started driving out just about as fast as he had been coming in before.

Pa was right wild by that time, too; he run around until he found himself a rock and he heaved it at the car just as it was turning off onto the road, but he missed it and hit my dog Blue instead, as Blue was just coming out of the woods, so that Blue gave a yelp and headed back again.

AFTER that, things settled down a bit. Pa was right wore out from it all. He set down on the steps to rest, looking weak and trembly all over. But after a bit, he begun to feel better and talk some until he got hungry and began smacking his lips and wiping his mouth as he talked.

So I finally said, "Why don't you just rest a while and I'll go in and get some supper ready?" So I went in and fixed up just what he liked best—grits and side meat and toast and coffee—and had it steaming on the table when I called him in.

He cleaned up one plate and started on another and I set there sipping my coffee, and then he got up and started pacing up and down the room, his chin kind of hung down his chest, thinking all along.

So I put off talking to him and cleaned off the table and stacked the dishes, waiting for him to get settled, but when I got through with that, he was still walking, only now he was going faster; and instead of having his hands behind his back, he was clenching up his fist and slapping it in the palm of his other hand and all like that, and seemed real lively and happy about everything.

THEY WERE LEANING THEIR HEADS OUT THE WINDOWS LOOKING AT THE ROLLS OF WIRE WE HAD ROLLED UP.

It was a little while before he come out with it. He got it in his head how he wanted to fix up the place so nobody could come busting up like that any more, and we worked half the night on it.

I NEVER seen Pa so full of plans and things in my life neither. The first thing he wanted to do was pull out all the rolls of barbed wire we had in the barn and drag them out front and leave them in rolls on this log fence we had out there. "We'll just stack it up along here," he said. "That way a man will have a right hard time getting through it."

Then Pa went in and got a bottle and we both had a drink, and then he got to singing all the church songs he knowed with these bundles of wire over his shoulder.

We finished laying out the bundles along the fence and then Pa got the idea of stringing what he had left from tree to tree out in the woods, just about the level of the grass, so that a man coming along might trip over it.

I thought Pa had really outdone himself in thinking of things to do, but then he got the idea of tying the dogs out there to the trees so they could set up a howl if they heered somebody coming, and that took a little while to do because the dogs didn't quite recognize Pa with him singing and taking on the way he was and wouldn't come anywhere near him.

He had to chase the only one he caught by running around the house about three times behind him, and only managed it then by diving headlong after him, which almost scared the poor dog to death.

Anyhow, I thought that would be enough for Pa, but he was sweating and happy and still hadn't tired none, and he said, "Will, this one time we can get some good out of them chickens," and then told me another idea he had about catching them all too and stringing them up by one foot to the bushes out in the woods and using them as kind of watch dogs too.

So we started on that, chasing the chickens around the yard with them squawking and flapping their wings in your face and making noises like you were wringing their necks.

ONE of the big ones got right on Pa's shoulder and beat his wings over his face and pecked at him until he fell in one of the bundles of wire one time, so that it took me nearly a half hour to get him out of it.

But we tied all the chickens by one foot so they wouldn't get tangled up and when we finished and went over to the well for a drink of water I throwed a rock down in the woods and you never heered such barking and howling and yelping in your life.

We stood around and cooled off and put a dipper of water over our heads, and I was right wore out with it all. But I guess by then I was about as wrapped up in the thing as Pa was because I got the idea myself about how we should go down and tear down the bridge along the road so no cars could come up it, but I didn't say nothing about it.

After a while he said, "Well, I guess that's about as good as we can get it," and I said right quick, "Yes sir, I reckon that pretty well does it."

I didn't say no more about it. But I did say, "I wonder what happened to them letters the man was talking about."

"I don't know," Pa said. "I guess they must have just come in down to the Corners and they forgot to give them to us. I don't think I would tell them that, tho. They would just think you couldn't read and didn't want to say so."

SO I said I would be sho not to mention it and we stood around a while longer, and I throwed another rock down in the woods to try the chickens and the dogs again, and once they quieted down, we went on in to bed.

Pa already had breakfast fixed when I got up, and while I was eating he got out this 12 gauge double barrel shotgun he had, and he got out a rifle and another gun, and he took them out on the porch and started loading them up, stuffing nails and powder into them.

The men didn't show up until nearly noontime nowhow. We were both standing there when these three cars came driving up — and we heered them whanging over the bridge down the way—but they didn't see us at first because they were leaning their heads out the window looking at the rolls of wire we had rolled up.

It was about that time that I seen Pa's gun coming up. It finally hung there in the air with him sighting down along it.

Middle Age; Its Hazards

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, June 23 (AP)

CURBSTONE comments of a Pavement Plato:

There is a disease in middle-age that cripples more people than heart attacks. It exacts a greater toll than auto accidents.

This disease is cancer of the mind. Its symptoms are an unreasoning discontent with life, a feeling of futility that sears the souls of so many people in their middle years.

Recently a man I have known for years came up and spoke with me. In the midst of a casual conversation he suddenly blurted out:

"Tell me, what do you do when you know for sure you aren't going to go any further? What has a guy got left?"

My friend was deeply depressed. He was suffering from his first onset of "middle-age sickness," one sign of which is that a man gets tired of himself and starts thinking he is a human failure.

For the life of me, I couldn't see why, and I told him so. To begin with he was wrong. His job future didn't lie in the past. He hadn't reached his limit of promotion in his field, and his fears that he had gone about as far as he could go were strictly premature.

BUT EVEN if he had at almost 50 achieved the top job and income of which he was capable, was that much a disaster?

This man owned his own home and his own car. He had kept his family comfortably fed, sheltered and clothed, and all were healthy. He had educated his two children, and both turned out well. Neither was a cop fighter or a pool-room shark.

By any sensible standard this man was a real success. He had done far better than most men throughout mankind's troubled history, which has been a long search for safety, a full stomach, and a warm place out of the cold to dream in for a while.

* * *

WHY SHOULD it make him either a better or happier man if he should now go on and pile up enough money to become the richest fellow in his part of the cemetery? What if he doesn't ever get a bigger job? Should that make him feel living has lost its luster?

For some reason, although middle age has been in the world for quite some time, it catches most people by surprise—and too often with a deep dismay.

The middle-aged wife, whose children are grown and flown, is inclined to brood that she has fulfilled her purpose in life and is no longer needed. The middle-aged husband, recognizing it is now highly unlikely he can ever realize the grandiose dreams of his youth, feels himself a rut-bound prisoner of time.

This "middle-age sickness" turns some people crabbed and sour. As any doctor knows, it leads to all sorts of maladies in others. Many even lose all zest for life and shrivel to death, like a flower caught by a late frost.

WE LAUGH in this country at older lands that still practice ancestor worship. But older lands than ours laugh at us for two of our commonest religions — success worship and and youth worship.

A dream is a great thing to live with, but a poor thing to be killed by. It is refreshing to the spirit to admire the stars on a summer night; but only a child weeps because he cannot clutch them in his hand.

We are doing a lot of "education for living" nowadays. Why doesn't some philanthropic foundation start a project to teach adults that middle age isn't the critical point of no return in life, but merely another bend in the road—and not a bad place to pause and have a picnic?

Element of Risk in Separate Vacations

By Josephine Lowman

THERE are all kinds of vacations!

There is the family vacation when the children go along with their parents. Then there is the stag vacation when father roughs it at camp with the boys and of course there is the vacation taken by the wife and husband without the children.

One seldom hears about a wife and mother going off on a vacation alone, although many go north in the summer time with their children. All of these vacations have their individual value. It's different and fun when the man of the house gets away with men only. The same thing is true of the woman.

It is most restful and adds variety if the woman in the home sometimes takes a little vacation with her friends. Usually both the man and woman turn the clock back a few years at times like these with lots of laughter and a change of pace and companionship.

YET THE IDEA of husband and wife spending vacations away from one another is not a good prescription for a happy marriage. Spending leisure is placed at the head of the list of causes of divorce, by some authorities. Then, too, think how much fun you would miss because a husband and wife who are congenial have such good times on trips and vacations.

Of course, if a husband and wife cannot have pleasant times together, it's a shame to ruin a vacation for both of them. Separate vacations may make the home waters smoother for them because of the separation.

While the children deserve some trips with the parents, the parents also should have some trips alone if the children can be arranged for. No matter how much you love them, travel with children is hectic and married couples merit some carefree, gay times alone.

It seems that the best thing to do is to vary the vacation from year to year so that you do not go to the same place and with the same family group each year, year after year.

Bird Walk on Farm; Experts as Guests

By Leonard Hall

SATURDAY in the city is generally a day of leisure; a day, in fact, when many people go to the country. With automation making giant strides, it even looks as though the four-day week is on the way; and a fine thing it will be, provided we Americans ever learn how to use leisure as it should be used. Nor do I by any means mean by this that every hour not spent at the office or the bench or on the production line must be spent in "improving" ourselves; for the very word leisure, to me, means time to do with as we will. If we want to loaf or be entertained or build a boat or go fishing or play the E-flat alto or paint the front porch or a landscape, nobody should complain that we're wasting our day off. The only way we can really waste leisure is to do things with it which add nothing to the sum of existence; for when we do this, we're shortening our hours of living. And I've never known anyone who started out to do this both willingly and deliberately.

In the country, despite all the progress which has been made in agricultural technology, Saturday is seldom a day of leisure. Some of us try to end the week's work in the fields at noon—having put in perhaps 60 hours since Monday morning. But even then there are the chores; the vegetable garden to plow and weed, the lawn to mow, the livestock to tend. Or if there's hay down in the fields or any other crop in the midst of harvest, we keep going until sunset or after. Long hours and lack of leisure, together with the ridiculously small return the farmer earns for his effort, are among the inequities of life on the land as compared with that in town.

Last Saturday, in spite of all this, we stole a day off. Early in the week we'd had a telephone call from Earl Hath, who heads the St. Louis Audubon Society and is one of the really fine ornithologists of Missouri. "How about our coming down this weekend," he said, "to make that long over-due summer census of Possom Trot's birds?"

● WITH HAY ON THE GROUND and too wet to bale and put in the barn, it seemed we'd never find a better opportunity to go birding, so we agreed to Hath's plan with alacrity. And along about 8 a.m. Saturday he arrived, bringing with him three more of the best binocular swingers in the St. Louis area—or anywhere else, for that matter. I suppose if you had to name one bird expert in this part of the country, it would be Earl Comfort who, with Hath, during the past year helped Dr. Sullivan of Harris Teachers' College conduct a popular class in conservation. Following Comfort and Hath out of the station wagon came our friends Rex Conyers and Dick Grossenheider. Rex is the brilliant teacher of natural sciences from University City High School who has done so much to develop science teaching techniques and to awaken in countless youngsters a lively interest in our living earth. In summer he works with Dr. Weaver, who heads the Conservation Department at University of Michigan and he was a leader in preparing the fine "Handbook for Teaching of Conservation and Resource Use" which was published last year. Dick Grossenheider should need no introduction; he is the St. Louis artist and naturalist who illustrated the "Field Guide to the Mammals" which should be in the library of every lover of the outdoors, alongside Peterson's "Field Guide to the Birds."

Now, here you have five fellows, all of them armed with Bausch & Lomb's latest and all of them except myself real experts at identifying the feathered denizens of the Missouri countryside. The only thing which stood between us and a list which would include every bird in the area was that all five were interested in a dozen other phases of the woods and fields and stream-sides we were exploring. "What is this thing we glibly call conservation?" "How can we interest teachers and, through them, young people in the whole broad field of natural resources?" "What makes good habitat for warblers or vireos—or flycatchers?" "Why is it that country people, generally speaking, absorb so little real knowledge of natural history as they go about their daily tasks outdoors?" "Have we made a mistake trying to 'sell' conservation as an economic rather than an ethical value; and may it not be necessary to start the whole movement over again from a new approach?" "Isn't a concern about and respect for these resources on which our well-being depends part of the responsibility of citizenship?"

● NO WONDER we missed many of our commonest birds on this bird walk. Down the country lane we went—fine birding territory with its thickets and big trees and the limestone bluffs. Then around the alfalfa field and across the creek and through the woods and out into the east pasture and back to the big pond, where we stopped for a half-hour seminar and watched the dragonflies and bullfrogs. Now and then, it is true, an ear would be cocked upward for the note of a warbler or a pair of binoculars would swing to catch a thrasher disappearing into the multiflora hedge or a dickcissel atop a tall cedar or the dipping flight of a goldfinch.

Back at the house, the boys said they must hurry off to the city. Rex had to drive to Independence and Dick was packing for a summer in Alaska where we all wished heartily we were joining him. But Ginnie had "hot dogs" on the broiler, a big bowl of salad from the garden, pitchers of milk, a pot of coffee and an emergency cake out of the freezer. We spread the repast on the porch, then moved out into the yard. Only then we remembered we still had to total up our day's bird count. It wasn't impressive—41 species, to which I managed to add another 11 before turning in that night and could have included a dozen more which we see almost every summer day. Yet when the station wagon pulled out at 4 o'clock, "country time," we all agreed it had been a highly successful bird walk.

YOUNG MAN IN A HURRY

Cousin of Queen Elizabeth Has Passion for Machines—And Speed

By Eddy Gilmore

LONDON, June 23 (AP).

A SENIOR officer at Britain's Royal Military Academy nodded discreetly in the direction of the gangling young Duke of Kent.

"If he weren't a duke," said the officer, "he'd be a good mechanic."

"Pardon me, sir," spoke up a cockney sergeant with a grease-smeared face, "'e is a good mechanic."

His Royal Highness Prince Edward George Nicholas Paul Patrick, second Duke of Kent and seventh in succession to the throne, has a passion for machines that fly through the air and race along the ground.

He likes to tinker with them and to drive them.

"Like father like son," mused an old servant who'd watched the young man grow up. "You might o' thought he'd hate machines, remembering what happened to his father."

The tragic death of the first duke is still fresh in the memories of the royal family. Fourteen years ago his life was snuffed out in a Sunderland flying boat when it plowed into the side of a mist-covered Scottish mountain.

The boy was almost 7 years old then and by that time his father had filled his chubby hands with mechanical gadgets and cluttered his nursery with toy airplanes and automobiles.

He'd taught him to love the rhythm of great machines . . . their oily sides . . . the churn of glistening pistons . . . the purr of motors . . . but principally he'd taught him the exhilarating thrill of flying along the ground with the wind in his face.

A LABORITE member of Parliament even delivered an oblique attack on the Duke by denouncing two parties His Royal Highness attended in one night as wild flings of hooliganism.

What happened at the parties?

Two young guardsmen who, with the Duke, joined 150 fluttering debs on a Thames riverboat, jumped into the river. The Duke threw them life belts while other members of the party pitched champagne glasses into the water.

The boat was set adrift in a river usually busy with commercial traffic. Somebody else turned a hose on a squad of river policemen.

From that hi-jinks the Duke raced to another gathering of debutantes in Mayfair where there seemed to be such an abundance of French champagne that the young things started pouring it into the street.

A newspaper reporter who patrols the night beat said His Royal Highness danced along a rooftop, jived on a foot wide parapet 40 feet above the street, drained half a glass of champagne and flung the rest into the thoroughfare.

In the midst of a pre-dawn yawn pretty Penelope d'Erlanger commented:

"I danced several times non-stop with the Duke. He's a wonderful jiver. It was frightfully hot on the dance floor, so why shouldn't we dance on the roof?"

A London paper quoted the Duke as saying:

"Let's have some fun. I'm fed up with being told what to do. For one evening I'm going to please myself."

Slowly but surely His Royal Highness has been getting himself talked about — and not for the books he reads, or his above average record as a young soldier and now officer in the Royal Scots' Greys.

At the Kutzbuhel hotel in the Austrian Tyrol, for example, he was photographed wearing a false handlebar mustache and holding a Miss Rona MacLeod on his lap.

Asked if this was a romance the young woman gasped:

"Good Lord, no. We were playing musical chairs. When the music stopped the men had to sit down and grab a partner. The Duke just happened to grab me."

THE Duke really began crowding into the headlines when he received his first driving license at the age of 17. In his first, a station wagon, he proceeded to collide with another car, in the English countryside. Both automobiles were badly damaged and so was his Royal Highness.

The Duke's mother then bought him a sports car costing $3080. But the Duke made a tin can out of this one, too, when he piled into a fallen tree near Wokingham.

His next car was a sports model with red leather upholstery.

Last summer he drove this one off the road and almost killed himself when he was hurrying back to the Royal Military College from one of those debutante parties about 5 o'clock in the morning.

Into the hospital he went again.

He's six feet tall with wavy brown hair and those same dreamy eyes of Princess Margaret. He would be a handsome young man were it not for a slightly receding chin and almost pouting lower lip.

His father left about $439,600. He is said to be a beneficiary from a trust fund reported to be $5,600,000 set up by the late Queen Mary.

The Duke is named Edward after the Prince of Wales, George after his father, Nicolas after his mother's father and Patrick—as he puts it—as a compliment to Ireland.

His friends call him Eddie and at Le Rosey, the Swiss boys' school, when the editor of the year book asked him his favorite hobby, he put down:

"Attending coronations."

Help for Mothers

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MANY women who are keeping themselves tense and exasperated all day would profit by getting out of the home for a while. If they can't do this, they can often help themselves greatly by listening to the right kind of music.

Of course, some people are relatively insensible to this influence. General U. S. Grant once remarked that he knew only two tunes: one was Yankee Doodle and the other wasn't. But even though you don't know any tunes at all, you are likely to be influenced by melody and harmony. Even the high school boy or girl quotes the poet, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast"; and the baby who sometimes behaves much like a savage may be lulled to peaceful sleep.

Most of us get too little value from this source of help because we derive our music in the home from radio or television. If you have an inexpensive record player and a few long-playing records, however, you can give yourself a helpful treatment at any time you feel like it.

Music that soothes you usually suggests the soft sounds of love and affection embodied in a mother's lullaby or crooning to her baby. If you want something to stimulate you to work, vigorous marching time will do the job. If you are inclined to be moody and depressed, keep away from the minor music. Play something brighter and more aggressive.

Volume is an important factor. When you want to stir yourself up, let the music be loud, but if you need to be soothed, the volume should not rise above moderate. If you merely want to take your mind off other things, you can use music with a wide range of sound. Even those who have little knowledge of music can benefit from it in this way. Get some "good" recordings that you will enjoy over and over again. Make them part of your daily life.

Answers to Questions.

Q. I'm stumped. Married a widow with a 10-year-old daughter, and the stepchild doesn't want to accept me.

A. In a sense, there's no reason why she should. You're not her father! Go slow. You'll have to win her and not demand anything from her as if it were your right. Let her see that you understand her position, and help her to be independent and to manage her own affairs as much as possible.

Q. OUR DAUGHTER, 11, and son, 10, are continually quarreling. I try to treat them equally. How can I pacify them?

A. Give them some separate interests; do some things occasionally with each of them alone; avoid comments that compare them with each other. Such quarrels are common and usually disappear as they grow older.

Q. You tell us that each meal should be made a happy time, including the children; but my husband insists on everyone eating and being very quiet so he can hear the news reports on the radio.

A. Try using these news reports as a basis for conversation and discussion. It will be a good education for the children.

Take Off Excess Weight

A REDUCING diet, the most effective weight-regulator you have, is easier to follow in the summertime. Your appetite isn't so ravenous during hot weather, and there seem to be more nonfattening dishes that appeal to you. In most cases the overweight problem results from just plain ordinary overeating.

After the age of 35, each pound you gain over your normal weight can endanger your health—and even your life span. When you consume more calories than your body requires, the excess calories are just stored as fat. For the sake of a long life as well as lifetime, it's wise to strive for an ideally-weighted figure at every birthday. If you can cut down on the amount you eat by following the proper diet, then you'll force your body to draw on that stored fat. In turn, you'll shed the extra pounds.

In "Charm's" "Beauty Diet" your calorie count as a reducer, in most cases, has been planned to average under the necessary 1200 units to allow for cream and sugar in beverages. You can lose two pounds each week, and yet you won't starve. For it is a way of eating that has been planned and tested to give you a daily balance of all the nutriments essential to sound health.

The diet can be followed by the whole family—the overweight, the middle weight, and even the growing adolescents. Here is how it works so you can all sit down to the same economical, well-balanced meal. Foods plussed (+) are for the underweight adult and normal adolescent; foods crossed (x) must be eliminated for losing weight; foods minused (—) should be taken in half quantities for losing weight; for maintaining present adult weight, follow the basic menu omitting only between meal snacks.

She Pitched in and Built Family Home

LEE'S SUMMIT, Mo., June 23, (AP).

A MILE and one-half south of this Kansas City suburb, Mrs. Dorothy Spencer and family are living in a new seven-room frame house. So what, did you say? So she built it, that's what.

And, we don't mean that she "built" it by offering helpful suggestions to a crew of skilled tradesmen. We mean she built it by hand and with little help. Mrs. Spencer's salesman husband, Richard, pitched in only when she needed an untrained mind and a strong back.

Without anyone's help, Mrs. Spencer wired the house, installed the plumbing and flooring, papered the walls and painted both the exterior and the interior.

"MY FINGERS and thumbs are battered and beat, but I still have all of them," she says.

"We had a full basement poured and I had to get help on the heavy work, lifting the rafters and floor joists, but the rest I did myself."

Mrs. Spencer, with the week-end help of her husband, handled the job in 20 months, and had the house in livable shape 18 months after she started.

The job wasn't the initial venture into the construction field for this young mother of a 22-months-old son. She handled her first project, the remodeling of a barn and the family's previous home, six years ago. That also was a major task, in which Mrs. Spencer reduced the barn from 48 to 36 feet in width and used the lumber she salvaged to repair the structure.

Next, she lowered the high ceilings in the old-fashioned farm home of her parents, and she's been doing general construction work ever since.

HOW DID a woman get involved in this sort of work?

"You might say I read a book," she said. "It was semi-technical and then I had subscribed to Popular Mechanics magazine for years. Girls weren't allowed to enroll in shop classes when I was at Lee's Summit High School in 1942, but I understand they've wised up now."

General housework, caring for son Charles and building projects leave no time for Mrs. Spencer to follow such ordinary feminine hobbies as sewing or gardening.

Since the house has been finished, she's embarked on a new job—remodeling the garage at a neighbor's home into a greenhouse.

"I'm like most people," insists Mrs. Spencer. "If I have just a little to do, I'll sit and look at it, but if there are a lot of things to be done, you get with it."

Smart Floor for Room

By Elizabeth Hillyer

DESIGN does wonderful things for resilient flooring. And it's what design is doing for it right now that puts it in any room in the house—the formal entrance hall, the smart dining room, and the living room, as well as in the kitchen, the recreation room, and rooms for the children.

Its fascinating floor was the attention getter in this room as it was shown in the recent American Institute of Decorators Big Show in San Francisco. Narrow contrasting strips are set into a colorful spatterdash pattern. They're inset diagonally, with asterisk designs where two strips cross to emphasize the area occupied by a glass-topped table and interesting three-legged chairs with brass frames. Brass pulls on curved corner cabinets repeat the asterisk designs on the floor. (Flooring by Armstrong Cork.)

'I Really Feel as if I Know My Child Well Enough'

By Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.

SCHOOL ended the other day and the 12-year-old heiress to all my worldly goods paused only long enough to stuff a suitcase and announce she was invited to Carmel.

There was a time when I took vacation seriously. Having read that a parent must approach this period as a time to become acquainted with the offspring. Nowadays I welcome all invitations. I feel I know this child well enough. There are some areas I don't care to pry into further than absolutely demanded.

I get regular reports by telephone: A lizard has been captured and is now doing time in a glass jar. I am instructed to prepare a place on a bathroom shelf for this wonder of zoology. The lizard eats nothing. At least it has not eaten a half ham sandwich which was offered. Therefore, it will be a handy household pet and no trouble at all.

Will I please send down underwear from the top drawer? Right away because there isn't any except what is now being worn.

I WILL GET A BILL from Los Laureles Lodge, former home of the wealthy Vanderbilt tribe and now a resort. Now don't get mad before I tell you. It seems that they were all having lunch, you know? And naturally she wanted to buy the lunch, you know? Because she was a guest and all.

"So I asked them if I could charge it. And when they looked, they said I didn't have an account or something. But they said you did."

"So you charged it to me?"

"Well, it was all I could do. And I'll pay you back."

"With what?"

"Well, you know. When you give me some money or something."

"Child," I said, "you have somehow acquired a curious idea of financing. It appears to me I came out losers on this deal."

WELL, IT IS NICE TO KNOW that the family line still has not lopped off an arm or head. And is eating well where the Vanderbilts once roughed it on quail and caviar.

Also that news of all this comes but once a day and generally at a time when I can totter off somewhere to recover. Signal when three minutes are up, please.

"Are you behaving? Being polite and everything?"

"Oh, yes. I had a little fight, though. But not my fault. She kept pulling my bathing suit. And I was very polite. I said, 'Please don't do that.' And she kept right on. So then I hit her.

"Not with a shovel or anything?"

"Oh, no. Just with my hand."

A polite child. I have taught her never to hit other children with a blackjack. Or ax the baby sitter.

Point Out a Friend's Bad Driving?

By Emily Post

A READER writes me as follows: "I have a friend who has a car and she is very generous with it. She often calls me and asks me to go for a drive with her. I would enjoy going very much except that she drives much too fast to suit me and it makes me extremely nervous. Would it be proper for me to ask her to please drive more slowly, or since I am her guest, would such a request be out of order?"

If she is an intimate friend of yours, I think you could tell her quite frankly before accepting her next invitation that much as you would like to drive with her, she drives too fast and it makes you very nervous.

DEAR MRS. POST: I am going to be married sometime this summer and am planning to have the reception outdoors, in our garden. Should this fact be mentioned on the reception cards inclosed; also mention that in the event of rain the reception will be held in the basement of the church?

Answer: Neither would have to be mentioned; merely the house address given for the reception. In the event of rain, guests could be told at the church that they are to go to the basement of the church for the reception.

DEAR MRS. POST: I prefer single sheets of letter paper for personal letters and have these marked with my initials. I wondered about the second sheet of paper—should this be left plain but otherwise a matching sheet, or is each sheet marked the same way?

Answer: Stamped first sheet and blank sheets following are quite correct. People who write many-page letters often order as much as three quire of plain paper for use with each quire of stamped paper.

REHEARSAL FOR PART OF THE TROMBONE SECTION IN A 186-PIECE STUDENT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA AT EGYPTIAN MUSIC CAMP ON THE DU QUOIN (ILL.) FAIR GROUNDS, ABOUT 80 MILES SOUTHEAST OF ST. LOUIS.

Where Air Is Thick With Music

By Dickson Terry

● Music Camp at Nearby Du Quoin, Ill., Draws Hundreds of Youngsters Who, at Moderate Cost, Get Intensive Training, Let Off Summer Steam

I DON'T know a fugue from a cantata, but I'm curious about a lot of things, and one of the things I have been curious about for a long time is a phenomenon of the summer season known as a music camp.

Music and camping would seem to be rather unrelated activities, yet each summer thousans of musically inclined youngsters pack up their oboes and their blue jeans and flock to dozens of camps throughout the country, from where their activities are rather sketchily chronicled in their home-town papers.

The nearest such camp to St. Louis, and one which has grown to become one of the largest privately operated camps in the country, is known as the Egyptian Music Camp. It is held each year in the Du Quoin Fair Grounds, about three miles from Du Quoin, Ill., which is about 80 miles southeast of St. Louis as the bus flies. It is now in progress, and it seemed to present an excellent means of satisfying my curiosity.

Du Quoin is a town of about 8000 people with a sun-baked main street. But there are no music campers on the streets of Du Quoin.

"We only see them when they get here, and when they go home," said the taxi driver who took me out to the fair grounds.

The fair grounds, scene of the annual Du Quoin State Fair, one of the best in the country, cover 1500 acres, a hundred acres or so bigger than Forest Park. In the approximate center of the place lies the grandstand, said to have cost $1,000,000 and which is actually a sort of combination grandstand, administration building and outdoor theater. The grandstand is the hub of the music camp. It is here that the youngsters play their trombones and tubas, eat their meals, sleep and have most of their recreation.

WHEN I dismissed the cab and walked toward the grandstand, my ears were assailed by a combination of noises which were to serve as the background music of my existence for the next couple of days. It was the noise of several pianos, playing different tunes, the noise of woodwinds and brass tuning up, like the preliminary noises of a symphony concert, plus the noises of several hundred teen-age voices which blended with the other noises and reverberated through the vast grandstand. After a few hours, I found, you get so used to it you don't hear it.

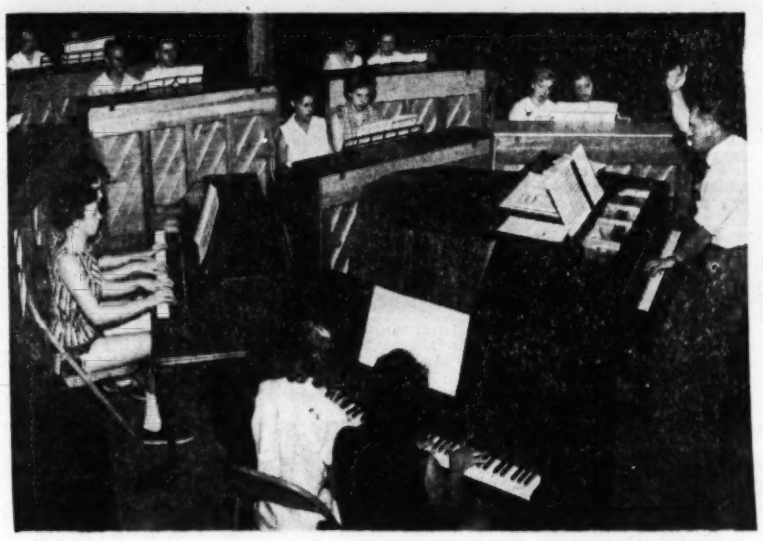

The first visual impression is one of hundreds of girls, all dressed in shorts and blouses, and almost as many boys dressed in T-shirts and blue jeans, moving in all directions, reminiscent of rush hour at Union station. The only ones who weren't walking somewhere were playing table tennis with terrific concentration, or trying to get waited on at the soft drink counter.

At that moment a disembodied voice, amplified through loud speakers scattered all over the place, blared forth a demand for attention. "Your attention now, your attention now," it demanded. "It is now time to dismiss music appreciation and time to report to your dormitories for a quiet period."

Gradually the crowd began to fade away until the lobby of the grandstand was almost empty, and I was able to make my way to the ticket office, which was serving as general headquarters for the camp. There I found A. T. Atwood, the man responsible for it all.

ATWOOD is in his late forties, short, round faced, with a graying crew cut. He wore a pair of summer pants and a red and blue cotton sport shirt, and he looked much less like an impresario than like a small town business man, which he is. He owns a music store in downtown Du Quoin. The music camp, he revealed, really started out somewhat accidentally, back in 1942. But it has been growing steadily through the years, and this year it reached its highest mark with an enrollment of more than a thousand young people.

WILLIAM BECKMEYER, DIRECTOR OF MUSIC AT MT. VERNON (ILL.) HIGH SCHOOL, DRILLS STUDENTS IN THE PIANO ENSEMBLE CLASS.

Atwood was directing the Du Quoin school band back in 1942, he recalled, and it was a pretty good band if he does say so himself. They played in St. Louis and Chicago, and then summer came along and they didn't have anything to do, so he took them for a week's camping trip at Giant City Park in southern Illinois. They had such a good time they went back the next year, and took their instruments and organized an orchestra.

"We had no idea of starting a music camp," he recalls, "but the crowd kept getting bigger each year, and it sort of evolved into a music camp. We went there for five years. I guess the thing that changed it into a music camp was when the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs got interested. Clubs all over the state would pick out an outstanding music student and pay his way to the camp. Then the Rotary clubs and the Lions and Kiwanis got interested, and the next thing we knew some 450 clubs were sending students."

"THEY had so many youngsters they extended the camp to two weeks, then to three weeks and now it runs four weeks. Which, of course, led up to the question, what do they come for? And what do they get out of it?

"To be truthful," says Atwood, "you can't teach them an awful lot in six days, the average length of stay. But they get good instruction from capable men, learn something about playing in large ensembles and what it requires and get ideas about such things as conducting, music appreciation and other phases of music they might not get otherwise.

A. T. ATWOOD, FOUNDER AND HEAD OF THE CAMP.

"At the same time they have a lot of fun. It's a sort of combined vacation and school. And I think most of them go back home with a new evaluation, an inspiration to work a little harder."

The youngsters who come to the camp are not prodigies, or potential geniuses, Atwood points out. "They're just average kids. And if they have any exaggerated ideas of how good they are, this is fine for them. They're likely to go away with a better perspective regarding their own abilities. On the other hand, if they have any fears, or feelings of inferiority about their ability, they quite often find they're about as good as the next guy, and that's good for them, too."

Most of the youngsters enroll for one week, but they can, if they want to, enroll for two weeks, or even the whole four weeks. They pay $35 a week, which entitles them to an Army surplus double-decker bunk to sleep in, three meals a day, and a tight schedule which keeps them too busy to get into trouble.

A bugle blows reveille at 6:30 in the morning, and breakfast is from 7 to 8. The boys' dormitory is at one end of the grandstand, the girls' at the other. The dormitories consist of rows upon rows of double-deck bunks, spaced so closely together there is barely room to get through. The students make their own beds and take turns sweeping the floors.

DIVIDING the dormitories is the dining room and kitchen where the meals are cooked and served cafeteria style, and eaten on long picnic tables covered with white oil cloth. The meals are simple but well cooked. The favorite dish is spaghetti cooked with ground meat.

At 8:30 the classes start. In one part of the grandstand William Beckmeyer, director of music at Mount Vernon (Ill.) High School, was conducting and teaching the piano ensemble, which meant he had 13 or 14 pianos in a semi-circle, facing his own piano, with one or two youngsters at each piano, all playing vigorously.

Out on the concrete patio in front of the grandstand, Claude Smith, supervisor of music in the Evansville, Ind., schools, was conducting the junior high band, consisting of youngsters in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades. "All right, cornets," he was saying as he tapped his baton on his music stand, "where are you? Do I have to write a letter?" The cornets gazed intently at their music as though to find the answer there.

On the big stage of the grandstand, Paul Yoder of Chicago was working with the older students, trying to organize them into a symphony. There were 186 of them, and they were giving their all to "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

Yoder, who is a conductor and a composer of music for students, is a large, blond man with an air of relaxed patience. This is his eighth year at the camp. "The level of ability," he told me when I got a chance to talk to him, "is quite varied. You have to bear in mind that they're just average kids, trying to learn some music. I think they get a lot out of camp like this. And they have a good time while they're doing it."

Yoder explained, when I remarked about his patience in the face of some rather overwhelming odds, that you have to stay relaxed for your own sake and that of the students. "You have to remember that you're working with youngsters who are not professional musicians. You can't expect perfection. If you do, you're headed for trouble."

As a matter of fact, one instructor did blow up one year. He was a choral conductor and a perfectionist. After a couple of days he was in bed with nervous exhaustion.

OF the 260 youngsters who were at the camp last week, about 150 were girls. "There are more girls every year," Yoder said. "I think the answer lies in the fact that athletics take up the time of many of the boys nowadays, and the girls go in for music." This accounts also, he says, for the fact that in the group he was working with, not only did the girls far out-number the boys, but they were playing instruments such as the bass drum, the kettle drums and the tuba, formerly considered strictly masculine instruments.

"Also," he pointed out, "the popularity of instruments runs in cycles. Right now it's saxophones. If you'll notice, I have 37 saxophones in that group, which, of course, is far too many."

In addition to classes already mentioned, there are classes in mixed chorus, conducting (in which the youngsters are somewhat surprised to learn that there is far more to conducting than waving a stick), dancing, music appreciation, rhythm patterns, and so forth.

When youngsters are not in a class they are usually found out under a tree, alone or in small groups, practicing scales. Or they may be taking a private lesson. The theatrical dressing rooms under the stage are, for the time being, individual studios where teachers hold forth all day, and where the tootling, strumming, blaring and um-pahing is added to the general cacophony. Private lessons are not included in the tuition. They cost $3 a lesson.

WHEN classes are over at 3:30 p.m., the youngsters have an hour and a half of supervised recreation. During this period the boys and girls play together—tennis, badminton, softball, etc.—under adult supervision. They play on the carnival grounds which adjoin the camp area, and which, during the rest of the time, are out of bounds.

The boundary, as a matter of fact, is small, and is rigidly enforced. It extends only about 100 yards in each direction from the grandstand. The rules of the camp are strict, and a strong religious atmosphere is maintained at all times.

Students who come by train are met at the station by taxi or bus, and that's the last they see of the world beyond the boundary until time to go home. Then they are taken back to the train and seen off. The only exceptions are cases where parents bring and call for their offspring.

There is planned activity every night. On Monday night a talent show is put on in which individuals perform. On the Monday night I was there I heard among other members, a snare drum solo by Steve Sample of Ferguson, a cornet solo by Anne Hill of Sparta, Mo., and various other performances on the trombone, the French horn and the piano. On Tuesday night there is a square dance, on Wednesday night a stunt show, on Thursday night a formal dance and on Friday and Saturday nights concerts by the choirs and the symphony orchestras which have been practicing all week for the big event.

SOME years the camp winds up the season with a big musical show. "It's our pet project," Atwood explained, "but we can't do it every year because it's too expensive. We lose our shirts every time, and it takes a couple of years to recoup."

In past years they have presented "Naughty Marietta," "The Desert Song" and "New Moon," each of them an artistic success. This year they are going to offer their most pretentious effort, "Oklahoma."

Students who attend the last two weeks of the camp try out for parts in the show, and the selected cast spends a week to 10 days in almost constant rehearsal. The scenery is designed and executed by the drama department at the University of Southern Illinois. The show will be presented two nights, July 3 and 4 this year, and Atwood rather pensively hopes that they will at least make expenses.

Except on opera nights, 10 o'clock means lights out, and after lights are out there is a 10-minute religious service over the amplifying system.

"When new students arrive on Sunday afternoon, we have a meeting," Atwood explained, "at which we simply lay it on the line. We tell them what kind of a camp we are running, what the rules are, and what's expected. In 10 years, only one boy has been sent home."

The campers can bring as much spending money as they want to. They deposit it at the office, and they can draw it out as they need. There is no place to spend much, however, except at the refreshment bar, which, in addition to the usual candy, gum and soft drinks, has a huge stock of sheet music, both popular and classical.

They can also buy T-shirts with the name, "Egyptian Music Camp" on the front. The camp took its name, Atwood explained, from the fact that Du Quoin lies in that section of southern Illinois which has long been referred to as "Little Egypt."

OUT on the lawn in the late afternoon a couple of teenagers sat in the shade of a willow tree, diligently practicing on their tubas. They were 15-year-old Cora Rogers of Carbondale and 16-year-old Bruce Adams of Sparta, Ill.

In view of the fact the tuba stands some five feet high, weighs 26 pounds, and makes a noise which can be described as doleful, I wondered what its attraction might be. Especially in view of the fact that this year's camp is fairly topheavy with tubas.

"I just decided I wanted to play it because it was different," Cora explained. She's been playing it for six years now, which means she started when she was 10, when the tuba was bigger than she was.

"I wanted to get in the school band real bad," Bruce explained, "and the only thing they needed was a tuba. So I learned to play the tuba."

Why do they come to the music camp?

"Well," said Cora, "I think it's a lot of fun. I make new friends and get the experience of working with other people and new instructors."

"I came because I'm crazy about music and I like companionship," said Bruce. "Of course my girl friend back home, she said it wasn't companionship I came for—it was galship. But she was just kidding."

MUSIC STUDENTS HELPING THEMSELVES IN THE CAMP CAFETERIA. THEY PAY $35 A WEEK TO ATTEND THE CAMP, WHICH FURNISHES BEDS, MEALS AND GROUP MUSIC INSTRUCTION. MANY ARE GIVEN SCHOLARSHIPS BY WOMEN'S CLUBS AND OTHER ORGANIZATIONS.

Art and Artists

Modern Art Needs Criticism

By William K. Wyant

FORMER President Truman, who once expressed his dislike for "scrambled egg art," ran into a kindred spirit recently when he had lunch with Bernard Berenson at Mr. Berenson's stronghold near Florence, Italy. Mr. Berenson, the great authority on Renaissance painting, is still an articulate and outspoken man at 92 years of age. He has had some very unkind things to say about the direction in which art has been moving.

"In the past ages, art has sunk as low, although probably with no such smirking self-adulation, as it has today," Mr. Berenson wrote in 1948. He charged modern artists with having cast away hard-won traditions and skills, abandoning the world of nature, and indulging in all kinds of idiotic malpractices. He predicted that some day art would wake up, as from a bad dream, and move back into the sunlight, but he did not say when that might happen.

An American who was born in Lithuania, attended Harvard College and has lived in Italy since shortly after his graduation, Mr. Berenson had a hand, with the late Lord Duveen, in assembling most of the big private American collections. His is an educated opinion but not necessarily a correct one. Large numbers of art connoisseurs would disagree with him violently. They would have to admit, however, that it is not easy to judge the quality of art works at a time when, as nowadays is often the case, each painting is a world unto itself. When an artist is trying to paint the way he feels, rather than how something looks, it is hard for any outsider to say how successful he has been.

THE TREND to the abstract and the non-objective has brought with it manifestations that are all to the good. At the same time, rebellion against academic standards in art has created a kind of revolutionary chaos out of which even expert viewers find difficulty in bringing order. This point is made by Marya Mannes, writing in the June 14 issue of The Reporter magazine.

Miss Mannes went out and looked at two exhibits of contemporary art. She read what the critics, and the artists themselves, were saying in leading art publications. Then she noted that the new $16,000,000 Bank of the Southwest, in Houston, had decided not to use three panels that were designed for the bank by William Zorach, a sculptor whose policies had been attacked by some Texans. Her article defends Zorach, whom she considers a fine sculptor, quietly "working in the main stream of art," and it sails into the leaders of the American art world for not doing more to educate the public.

THE VIEWPOINT of Miss Mannes is that many museum directors, exhibitors and art critics are failing to apply qualitative judgments for fear of being considered narrow. As a result, she believes, the public gets no guidance to speak of from those who should be guardians of esthetic standards in this country. Moreover, a lot of purely experimental or occasionally second-rate stuff is permitted to crowd into the limelight. Miss Mannes is not entirely clear on the question of how museum directors, by educating the public, can affect the acceptability of sculpture in Texas banks, but she is on solid ground in saying that a great deal of what is written and said about modern art is incomprehensible nonsense.

It is a simple matter to go through an art magazine and cull from it examples of prose that will not stand the cold light of day. This does not refer to the technical jargon. All professions have jargon that outsiders do not understand. Where the art writers offend, quite often, is in pretentious flights of fancy concerning the philosophy and meaning of an art work. And in a great many cases the offenders are more to be pitied than blamed because the art work itself gives them so little help.

FOR EXAMPLE, the Abstract-Expressionist school led by William de Kooning, now very much in vogue and aped by many young painters, produces canvases that can be both beautiful and interesting. But they are deliberately nonobjective, which means they have no subject recognizable in nature. They are color on canvas, more or less hurriedly splashed on in the fury of the creative mood. What they mean to the observer is a personal and highly individual matter, varying from one person to another.

Leo Steinberg, writing in Arts magazine a few months ago, discussed the critic's difficulties in lucid and intelligent fashion. He said it was the critic's job to tell the reader how the picture functions "as an active agent in his own (the critic's) emotional and intellectual life." Mr. Steinberg said he knew of no universal canons to apply to new art. He did not approve of applying to the future the dead hand of the past, and maybe that is just as well.

'The Student Prince' Next at Muny Opera

PRINCIPALS FOR THE MUNICIPAL OPERA PRODUCTION OF SIGMUND ROMBERG'S "THE STUDENT PRINCE," WHICH OPENS TOMORROW NIGHT. FROM LEFT, FRED HARPER AS LUTZ, THE VALET, EDWIN STEFFE AS DR. ENGEL, THE TUTOR, JIM HAWTHORNE AS PRINCE KARL FRANZ, AND PAULA STEWART AS KATHIE, WITH WHOM THE PRINCE FALLS IN LOVE.

"THE STUDENT PRINCE," one of the late Sigmund Romberg's two most famous operettas, will be revived at Municipal Opera for the week beginning tomorrow night as the third production of the season.

It will be the sixth production at the Forest Park theater of the story of life at Heidelberg University. It was last given at Muny Opera in 1952, after a lapse of 19 years. A huge success in the 1920's, it toured for many years. It was given previously in Forest Park in 1928-29-30 and '33. The score includes such hits as "Golden Days," "Serenade," "Deep in My Heart Dear," "Drink, Drink, Drink," "Student's Marching Song," "Just We Too," and "Gaudeamus Igitur." The book, from the play "Old Heidelberg," was written by Dorothy Donnelly, and tells how Prince Karl Franz of Karlsberg goes to Heidelberg, falls in love with the innkeeper's daughter, Kathy, but has to forsake her for a marriage of state.

Jim Hawthorne, tenor who played de Jolidan in "The Merry Widow" in 1951 and last year, will be Prince Karl. Paula Stewart, a newcomer to the opera, will play Kathy. Hawthorne has recently sung leading role with the New York City Center Opera. Miss Stewart sang in the Broadway production of "Seventeen."

Other principals will be Edwin Steffe as Dr. Engel, the tutor; Fred Harper as Lutz, the valet; Nan McFarland as Grand Duchess Anastasia; Oliver Cliff as Von Mark, the chancellor; Robert Cosden as Captain Tarnitz; Dianne Barton as Gretchen; Emile Renan as Toni; Susan Shaute as Princess Margaret; and Gene Varrone as Detleff, leader of the student chorus.

Mary Ellen Moylan, current prima ballerina of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and former soloist with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the Ballet Theater, will be the ballerina.

The final production of "Paint Your Wagon," being given for the first time in St. Louis, will be at 8:30 o'clock tonight. The lusty musical story of the California gold strike, by composer Frederick Loewe and librettist Alan Jay Lerner, has a cast headed by Steffe, Christine Mathews and Tony Bavaar.

GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA REPRESENTS BEAUTY IN FLIGHT AS A TRAPEZE ARTIST IN DIRECTOR CAROL REED'S DRAMA, "TRAPEZE," WHICH COMES NEXT TO LOEW'S STATE. MADE IN PARIS, IT CO-STARS BURT LANCASTER AND TONY CURTIS.

EVA MARIE SAINT AND BOB HOPE GO TO TOWN IN "THAT CERTAIN FEELING," SCREEN ADAPTATION OF THE BROADWAY COMEDY, "THE KING OF HEARTS," COMING NEXT TO THE ST. LOUIS, IN VISTAVISION.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

TWENTY-THREE PACES TO BAKER STREET—A refreshingly different mystery drama, with Van Johnson as a blind American playwright beating Scotland Yard silly at figuring out a vague overheard conversation indicating a crime would be committed, and heading off the dirty work. Well made, with lots of suspense, relieved by occasional dry humor from Cecil Parker as a secretary. Good London atmosphere in CinemaScope. ST. LOUIS.

STORM OVER THE NILE—A well-done British remake of "Four Feathers," from the romantic novel of heroism in the African Sudan when a resigned British officer redeems his cowardice by saving the lives of three officers. With Anthony Steel, Laurence Harvey. Also SAFARI, also laid in Africa (Kenya) in which Vic Mature, as the hard-bitten white hunter, fights off Mau-Maus by the hundreds, and wins Janet Leigh, the fiance of an arrogant rich man (Roland Culver) who conveniently gets himself chewed up by a lion. Trite, but the locale is interesting. LOEW'S STATE.

TOY TIGER—A comedy about a lonely little boy at a private school, who has no father, so invents one, with ensuing complications. In spite of being contrived, improbable and predictable, it manages to be fairly amusing and Tiny Tim Hovey is cute. With Jeff Chandler, overacting deplorably, and Laraine Day. FOX.

THE ANIMAL WORLD—Some interesting sequences, including microscopic marine life shots, dinosaur fights and lions on the prowl, but as a story of the development of animal life from the beginning of the world, it has gaping holes, sidesteps the heart of the matter, evolution, and leaves much to be desired. PAGEANT.

MADDALENA—A finely made Italian drama about the torment of a prostitute who is hired to play the Madonna in a Good Friday religious procession to humiliate a priest. There are some deeply poignant and tremendously moving scenes. A remarkable performance by Marta Toren, the Swedish actress. English subtitles. RICHMOND.

SONG OF THE SOUTH—Return of the 1946 Disney exposition of the Uncle Remus stories, with some charming cartoon sequences diluted by hammy live action. ORPHEUM.

DISTANT DRUMS—Reissue of the 1952 film about Gary Cooper leading a raid on a gunrunners' fortress in the Everglades during the Seminole Indian war of 1840. Lively, even hair-raising action, but too often interrupted by tedious interludes involving a beautiful blonde who just happens to be along. Also DALLAS, reissue of the 1951 run of the mill Western starring Cooper and Ruth Roman. MISSOURI.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD—Unimaginative and hackneyed Cinerama travelogue. AMBASSADOR.

Little Symphony To Play Mozart Flute Concerto

CARL LUTES, flutist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist with the Little Symphony in its second concert of the season at 8:45 p.m. Friday in Washington University Quadrangle.

He and the orchestra will play Mozart's Flute Concerto in G Major, K.313. This being

CARL LUTES.

Mozart's bicentennial, the great composer's works are being featured at every concert this season except the last one.

The orchestra, with Jascha Horenstein conducting, also will play Clementi's Symphony in D, op. 18, No. 2, Ginastera's "Concertantes Variaciones," and Bartok's "Roumanian Dances."

John Kennedy Oversaw New York 'Show Boat'

John Kennedy, Municipal Opera producer, was production supervisor for the Jones Beach Marine Theater's production of Jerome Kern's "Show Boat," which opened the Long Island open-air theater's season Thursday night. Kennedy continued his work with both the St. Louis and Long Island productions by flying back and forth.

The cast, in addition, was virtually a roster of Muny Opera alumni. It included David Atkinson as Ravenal, Gloria Hamilton as Magnolia, Helena Bliss as Julie, Helen Raymond as Parthy Ann, Marie Foster as Ellie, Hal LeRoy as Frank, William C. Smith as Joe, Helen Dowdy as Queenie, Evans Thornton as Steve, Walter Klavun as the backwoodsman and Sara Floyd as the landlady.

Republic to Film 18 Low-Budget Pictures

HOLLYWOOD, June 23—Republic will resume filming operations the middle of next month. A program of 18 low budget pictures was projected today by Herbert J. Yates, president. Each picture, it is intended, will be budgeted between $150,000 and $200,000 under the new plan. The move actually represents a return to the company's original operating policy which was gradually changed over a period of years in an effort to compete with films from major studios for top playing time in theaters. Pictures made on budgets up to $2,000,000 did not, however, give the company hope for profits. Last month Republic started a retrenchment program which resulted in the layoff of studio workers and employes of its distribution offices.

Jean Hagen Role

HOLLYWOOD, June 23—Jean Hagen, who was seen as the mother in the Danny Thomas television show, "Make Room For Daddy" will again assume a maternal air in "Spring Reunion."

The Night Spots

This Week in Radio

Salute to Canada On Dominion Day

A SPECIAL musical program, "Dominion Day Salute," presented in co-operation with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in observance of Canada's national holiday, will be heard on KSD at 9:30 Wednesday night. Composer-conductor Victor Young will present the radio premiere of his new song, "The Brave One," when he fills in for vacationing Percy Faith on "What's New in Music" on KMOX at 5 this afternoon. Guests will include singers Jaye P. Morgan and Don Cornell, and actress Barbara Cook.

JANET WALDO . . . STARS AS CORLISS ARCHER IN SERIES RETURNING ON KMOX.

One of the features on NBC's "Monitor," on KSD at 7:30 tonight, will be a jet pilot's recorded description of his experience after being ejected from a plane traveling at 700 miles an hour. At 11:05 this morning, "Monitor" will visit a tornado research laboratory at Stillwater, Okla.

Sam Levenson takes over on "Two for the Money" on KMOX at 7:30 tonight replacing Herb Shriner.

A word portrait of the late Fiorello H. LaGuardia will be presented on "Biographies in Sound" on KSD at 8 Tuesday night. Grover Whalen will be the narrator.

Corliss Archer Back

"Meet Corliss Archer," a situation comedy about a saucy teenager and her antics, will return to CBS radio and KMOX at 7:05 tonight, replacing "Our Miss Brooks" for the summer. Janet Waldo is starred as Corliss Archer.

Gene Lockhart and Dorothy Warenskjold will be starred in "Clipper Ship," a tale of California gold rush adventure, on KWK's "Family Theater" at 9:30 tonight.

"The Yankee Loves a Lady," the story of a Northern general who falls in love with a Southern girl just after the Civil War, will be presented on KSD at 8:05 Thursday night.

"New Light on American History," reporting on the discovery of a number of official letters written by George Washington and other leaders, will be presented on KSD at 9:15 tomorrow night.

Taylor Caldwell's novel, "Tender Victory," will be dramatized serially on "Weekday" on KSD at 9:15 each morning this week.

Public Affairs Discussions

Arthur B. Langlie, Republican governor of Washington, will be the "Meet the Press" guest on KSD at 5:35 this afternoon. Other public affairs discussions on radio this week:

Invitation to Learning: Machiavelli's "Discourses."—9:30 a.m. today on KMOX.

Face the Nation: Attorney General Herbert H. Brownell Jr.—9:05 p.m. today on KMOX.

American Forum—9:30 p.m. today on KSD.

New World: "The Science of Heredity"—10:30 a.m. today on KSD.

Northwestern University Reviewing Stand: "Lamprey Problem in the Great Lakes."—10:30 a.m. today on KWK.

Wake Up St. Louis: "St. Louis Airport and Its Problems." Conway Briscoe, chairman of Airport Commission, and David Leigh, airport manager.—7:05 p.m., Saturday on KXOK.

Circuit Attorney: "Juvenile Delinquency." Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd and the Rev. William C. Poepperling.—6:30 p.m. Saturday on KXOK.

St. Louis in Action: "Juvenile Delinquency." Judge Michael J. Scott and Dr. Val B. Satterfield.—1:30 p.m. Saturday on WEW.

Week's Concerts

Igor Stravinsky will be heard conducting his own music in the Ojai music festival in California on "World Music Festivals" on KMOX at 10:35 tonight. The broadcast also will feature the first American network performance by Italo-Hungarian soprano Magda Laszla in arias by Bach and Stravinsky.

Soprano Eileen Farrell will sing the "Liebestod" from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" on the Donald Voorhees concert program on KSD at 8 tomorrow night. Other numbers will include the traditional Irish air, "Bendeemers Stream."

Beginning tomorrow night, KSD will broadcast transcriptions of the Washington University Little Symphony Concerts at 8:30 Monday nights.

Metropolitan Opera singer Jerome Hines will be the guest soloist with the Howard Barlow orchestra on KXOK at 7:30 tomorrow night. His selections will include, "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" and "Song of the Open Road."

St. Louisan Speaker

In observance of the forty-third convention of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, "Church of the Air" on KMOX at 9 this morning will present the Rev. Dr. John W. Behnken of St. Louis, Synod president, speaking on "I'm Guilty, but Christ Redeemed Me."

"How to Form Good Habits" will be the topic of the Rev. Laurence C. McHugh on "The Catholic Hour" on KSD at 1:30 this afternoon.

"Church in the Wildwood," a program of hymns, will be heard on KSD at 5:45 each morning, Monday through Saturday, beginning tomorrow, replacing "Chapel by the Side of the Road."

Rabbi Randall Falk will speak on "Ten Commandments for Teens" on "Message of Israel" on KXOK at 11:30 tonight.

Ann Lewis of St. Louis will be interviewed on "My Life in the Russian Embassy Compound" on Louise Munsch's "Just for Women" program on WEW at 9:15 Wednesday morning.

A five-minute program in co-operation with the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis will be presented on KSD at 9 Monday nights, beginning tomorrow.

The story of Mullanphy Travelers Aid will be told on "The Human Investment" on KMOX at 10:15 tonight.

Senate Television Hearings

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, June 23.

SENATOR BRICKER, whose charges of monopoly against the three networks are being aired before a Senate committee, has succeeded in doing one thing that no one else has ever managed: he has managed to get the whole industry — the three different networks, the advertisers, the individual stations—to agree. Never before have they agreed about anything — and therein lies the crux of the problem.

SENATOR CHARLES E. POTTER . . . MUST HAVE CAUSED AMUSEMENT.

Bricker charges that two networks—NBC and CBS (wholly ignoring ABC which can no longer be ignored) — control television. Even if there were such a thing as a three-network monopoly—and right there you have a contradiction in terms—I don't think it would be possible. The senators—and not just Bricker either—are suffering from a lot of delusions.

Senator Charles E. Potter, of Michigan, for example, declared "Give me the three television networks and I'll run the country." This must have caused a lot of amusement around the RCA corridors. Given the three networks Senator Potter would just have three times the number of headaches that he would have with one network — or maybe five times as many.

As Robert E. Kintner, president of ABC, pointed out: "The ability to judge accurately the public taste, whether it be in entertainment, news, documentaries, or special programing, is the key to all network operation and no one has a monopoly or inside track on what the public actually wants."

THIS is the fundamental point that all three network presidents — Kintner of ABC, Frank Stanton of CBS and Robert Sarnoff of NBC—have hammered away at the hearings and that still seems to elude Senator Bricker. It isn't the networks that control the public; it's the public that controls the networks. Even if there were only one network that would be true. This isn't the telephone business; this is an entertainment, information and education medium and there will forever be violent disagreement on programing not only between networks but inside the same network.

Stanton pointed out: "The proposals for change must first, last and always be subjected to this fundamental test: Not how will the change affect particular stations or groups of program suppliers or scenic designers, but how will it affect the public. Will the change improve or degrade what the public is getting? Are you sure that the change will add to the public's fare or may the change involve the grave risk, instead, of taking away from the public that which it demonstrates it wants?"

Now, heaven knows, I'd be the last guy to accuse the networks of always providing what the public wants but, after long and painful thought, I can't think of anyone in a better position to judge what it wants. Certainly not Congress. From some of the statements emanating from Senators, it seems doubtful they have the foggiest notion as to how network television operates.

OF COURSE, it's routine procedure for anyone appearing before a congressional committee to yell that public interest is being violated but it just so happens that television is far more responsive and sensitive to the public than, say, the steel business or the soap business. The networks have to be. Yet, the one interest that has not been heard from in Washington are the people who own the 35,000,000 television sets and who like to watch Perry Como.

The package producers who syndicate films are yelling that they are being squeezed out of business and the scene suppliers are mad that they don't get more network trade and the independent stations without network affiliation are protesting against unfair competition. There is some basis for all these complaints. Senator Bricker could lay claim to being the champion of all these underdogs. But he cannot lay claim to representing you and me—the set owner. Nobody's representing us down in Washington.

Neighbor's Children Always Under Foot

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha,

I HAVE a neighbor who has three children and they are always over at my house or on my lawn, playing with my children. I have no objection to the children other than they are always untidy. The other mothers in this area always bathe and dress their children in the afternoon, but this woman leaves her children for her husband to bathe when he gets home from work. So they run around with their hair uncombed and even the little girl wears dirty jeans. If this woman was sick or too poor to buy clothing, then we would feel it our duty to help them, but all the neighbors say she is lazy and takes no interest in her home or her children. The little boy runs out in the street in front of cars, and we are always worried for fear he will get hurt and when we ask him what his mother is doing, he says she is sleeping. My husband thinks some of the women should talk with this mother and ask her to keep her children at home or keep them clean, but I really don't know how to approach her on this subject. I have noticed people stare at those children when they are on my doorstep and I'm afraid they will think they are mine and I'm the neglectful mother. Please give us some advice as it would be helpful to us and the poor little children. DISTRESSED.

I honestly don't see how you could tell this neighbor that her children are too unkempt to play with others but if they are running wild in the neighborhood and you are afraid they will be hurt, you probably would be doing them a favor by calling this to their mother's attention. Perhaps, too, you can guide the conversation around to a suggestion that your own children can't play at a certain time in the afternoon as they are being bathed and dressed before their father comes home, and that it would be best if her children didn't come over at that time. A few more remarks about how difficult it is to keep active children well groomed — and how important — may get through to her. But if all else fails, you can very easily send the youngsters home if they are a nuisance, and do so without hurting their feelings.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND AND I have been going out frequently with three other couples. We have always had a wonderful time together until recently when one of the couples brought another man and his wife along when we went to a dance. Gradually this fifth couple have been accepted. But we have now found out why they were invited in the first place. The wife of the fifth couple and the husband of the couple that invited the newcomers are interested in each other. The other wife and husband seem completely oblivious to what is going on. How they can be so blind I'll never know. We other three women are terribly worried about it and we want to do something about it. Our husbands say we should keep out of it. Who is right? WORRIED.

As long as you have not been asked for help, I would certainly go along with your husbands on this question. Maybe the other husband and wife aren't as blind as you think, and it would not help them at all for their friends to notice their mates' disloyalty and humiliate them by offering a helping hand. Maybe the three couples not involved would be better off gradually to close ranks and not worry about the others, especially if these two have created an embarrassing and awkward situation. But whether you keep associating with them or not, I don't see how you could possibly interfere.

Dear Martha:

● JUST A FEW WEEKS AGO I came home with my new baby. The little girls next door insist on ringing my doorbell then running away. At first their mother had me believing that all the children in the neighborhood were bad but I am finding out differently. I have seen another neighbor sweeping her front porch every day and found out these children are throwing rocks and mud on it, as well as in cars and mailboxes. Their mother will stand there and lie to protect them. She whips them if they damage her own property or lie about each other, but she lies for them if they do the same to the neighbors' property. It's no use talking to her because her children are always right and she says it must be the other children. I don't think she is happily married and seems to enjoy making other people as miserable as she is.

If you have found it useless to appeal to the mother, perhaps you can appeal to the children themselves. They are only reflecting her callous attitude toward others' belongings and you would be doing them a great favor—as well as the neighborhood at large—if you could instill in them a little respect and courtesy. The next time you see them, why not invite them in to see the baby, then point out to them kindly that the baby sleeps much of the time and you are so busy that it really is disturbing when the doorbell rings. Let them feel that they have a responsibility to keep things quiet so that the baby won't be awakened. The same approach might help in regard to mud-slinging, or trampling of flowers or lawns. Tell them something about the particular flowers, how they grow and how they need to be protected. Point out how hard it is to keep a porch clean and neat. If you can gain the children's interest and their affection, you have won more than half the battle.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 15 and have been going with a boy for about two months and he asked me to take his ring and go steady. I had to refuse because my mother doesn't approve. He hasn't asked me out since then and has told other boys my mother won't let me go steady so I'm sitting at home. I think my mother was right in a sense but I'm beginning to believe her only reason for refusing is to keep me at home. What am I to do, sit at home the rest of my teen days? J.B.

---

I can't believe that your mother doesn't want you to have any fun at all, but I can understand why she would not want you to go steady. Many parents disapprove of that and I think it's unfortunate that the boys would refuse to date a girl at all if they can't go with her exclusively. Surely in your neighborhood there are some boys who would like to have an occasional date. Ask your mother if you can't invite some of the boys and girls to your home. That will help you get back into circulation.

---

Vogue of White Catching On for Summer

As Temperature Climbs, St. Louis Women Are Turning to Costumes That Flatter Sun-Tanned Skin

By Sylvia Stiles

COOLEST - LOOKING fashions this summer indorse the vogue of white. From millinery to footwear, the popularity of white is increasing with the temperature. As the mercury soars, St. Louis women are investing in white costumes that flatter their suntanned skins and give them a well-dressed and well-groomed appearance in spite of the weather.

Outstanding among the white ensembles this season are those that require a minimum of ironing. Many of these are made of several fibers, such as "Dacron" and cotton or some of the other recognized synthetics that wash easily, dry quickly and require little pressing. There is interest, too, in the all-linen dress with crease - resistant finish. Sheer cottons, such as batiste and voile, join in the fashion parade of all-white themes.

Youthful evening dresses for summer feature white organdy and lace. More sophisticated modes are made of organza or chiffon. Typical of the cool white dresses for dress-up occasions is Madeleine Fauth's young party dress made of sheer white cotton and trimmed with vertical bands of narrow Val lace insertion. Suzy Perette has contributed in her summer collection a dress and jacket ensemble of white organdy banded with many rows of lace. The dress is full-skirted and strapless, with the natural waistline marked by a white organdy cummerbund tied in a soft bow at the side. The sleeveless jacket is Empire length and hemmed with white flutting.

Noted among the linen fashions is a skirt and blouse ensemble. The white linen skirt is knife-pleated, each of the pleats edged with narrow linen lace. A linen dress that is sleeveless and vertically tucked to give the effect of tiny pleats is a "go-anywhere" type that looks especially attractive with white hat and white accessories.

Sharkskin has returned to popularity with the fashion for white clothes this summer. It has a crispness that is liked for tailored and for casual needs. Some interesting "separates" consisting of skirts and blouses or skirts and jackets are made of sharkskin. Also in the fashion limelight are tennis dresses and play suits of sharkskin. One tennis dress made of Celanese Arnel sharkskin has a sleeveless surplice bodice, wide, fitted midriff section and a brief pleated skirt. A typical one-piece play suit of the same material has rounded notched collar and a brief, flaring skirt worn over matching fitted pants.

Coolest of the white millinery fashions are the hats of draped net. Some of these have wide brims and oversize crowns. Others are exaggerated turbans or pillbox shapes that are worn straight on the brow and are untrimmed except for a bow of ribbon. Panama straw is being used again for many tailored hats, especially those with the cloche or mushroom type of brim. Braided straw is another hot-weather millinery material being revived this year.

Contributing also to the effectiveness of white costumes are white shoes. These have appeared in all of the shops in a variety of different styles and materials. Leather, plastic, linen, and shantung are well represented. The bare type of sandal predominates but there are sufficient women who insist upon the plain, untrimmed pump to give this style much impetus.

Add white costume jewelry for a completely co-ordinated trend. Enameled themes predominate but simulated pearls and some lightweight plastic sets of necklace, bracelet, and earrings are noteworthy. Coro features pairs of necklaces and bracelets. The design suggests summer blossoms rimmed in gold. This same jewelry designer gives an airy effect to a costume with floral spray earrings and coiffure ornaments. Tiny buds sparkle with rhinestones.

Corduroy, formerly regarded as a cold-weather fabric, appears in cool-looking summer sports outfits, with white as the dominant theme. This cotton material is light in weight and has a new emphasis for vacation clothes. Typical of the trend are short coats and overblouses. The coats have a knitted look. Many are finger-tip length although the longer coat that reaches to the knees is attractive in the new, semi-fitted style. "Popovers," as those brief jackets that stop short just above the waistline are called, appear in corduroy. The V-neck pullover is another popular style for summer, and looks unusually interesting in a white corduroy printed with tiny pastel flowers. Matching shorts are provided.

Most women have learned the necessity of including a white knitted sweater in a summer wardrobe. This season's models stress the ribbed patterns although the sweaters are light weight. Cardigans with colorful emblems are liked for casual use. The vogue of the jeweled sweater continues for wear with late-day and informal evening attire. Summer types are less ornate than the winter versions, and there is an emphasis upon crystal and pearl adornment to keep the sweater entirely white. Cashmere in summer weight is available while orlon and nylon sweaters comprise a less expensive group.

White stoles, like white sweaters, have become wardrobe "musts," because of the increased use of air-conditioning. Lacy stoles made of synthetic yarn are lightweight and easily laundered.

FINE TUCKS AND INTRICATE PLEATING CONTRIBUTE TO A BATISTE DRESS MADE OF DACRON AND COTTON MATERIAL. FULL SKIRT IS PLEATED ALL AROUND

COMPLETELY WHITE COSTUME INCLUDING HAT AND SHOES FEATURES SLIM LINES. FABRIC IS WHITE SPUN LINEN. A MR. MORT DESIGN.

A WHITE POLISHED COTTON DRESS DESIGNED BY BETTY CAROL HAS ACCENTS OF PEPPERMINT PINK PETIT-POINT EMBROIDERY. PELLON UNDERLINES THE SKIRT.

A COOL, POLISHED SHARKSKIN SHEATH DRESS IS PURE WHITE EXCEPT FOR THE COLORED FABRIC CORDS THAT FORM THE BELT. FABRIC IS WRINKLE RESISTANT.

Schedule for Cleaning or Housework?

By Dorothy Brainerd

A LETTER from Mrs. L.M.J. brings up a question which has bothered many a homemaker.

Writes Mrs. J.: "Could you tell me if there is such a thing as a schedule for cleaning or housework? Do you wash the blinds once a week, or once a month? And is there any one place where it is best to start your housecleaning?

"Maybe this sounds stupid, but I really try. Somehow I always seem to be behind in my work, with the house in a state of confusion. I guess I'm just not very systematic, so could you work out a definite schedule for me—I mean, do this on Monday, that on Tuesday, and so on?"

I'm afraid that it wouldn't be practical for me to plan such a cut-and-dried schedule for you, Mrs. J. This is something every woman must do for herself. We are all of different temperaments and have different personalities, and what will work for one person may not be the answer for another.

Also, every household has its own peculiar situations. Perhaps meals must be served off-schedule, perhaps one member of the family works irregular hours, and so on. Some houses need cleaning more frequently than others, dependent upon location and the amount of traffic in the neighborhood. I can give you some general ideas and suggestions, however, which you can adapt to your own circumstances.

FIRST OF ALL, I would suggest that you go through the house early every morning and do a quick job of putting it in order. Not cleaning it (that comes later), but just straightening it up. As soon as your husband has left for work, clear the breakfast table, pick up the newspapers, make the beds. This will create an appearance of order should anyone come to the door, and also make it a more pleasant place for you to work.

Also, get those breakfast dishes out of the way as soon as possible. Don't let them stand in the sink until noon; it is an easy habit to get into, but an unwise one. It is little things like this that create that 'state of confusion.'

A generation or so ago there was one day of the week set aside for washing, one for ironing, one for cleaning, et cetera. Due largely to the improved equipment, modern homemakers have gotten away from this idea to a considerable extent. For example, many women who have an automatic washer do a load two or three times a week, or even daily, instead of having one big "washday."

I WOULD SUGGEST that you try to clean one room thoroughly each day of the week and just run through the others lightly—they will get their turns.

Try to set aside a specific time each week for one "extra" task. One time this might be used for washing bedspreads; the next for cleaning silver; the next for straightening the china cabinet, et cetera.

One final word of advice — train your family to help. It is not unreasonable to expect each one to hang away his or her own clothing, throw back the covers on the beds so that they may air, and be accountable for some specific household duty. Even a young child can gather up newspapers or empty ash trays. Encourage every one to get into the act, and you will be surprised how much it will help.

WE ALWAYS feel defeated when we have to admit we can't come up with an answer, as though we couldn't meet a challenge. But it happens occasionally, and this is one of the times.

Sometime ago Mrs. A. W. asked for "a good cheese cake recipe with a yeast dough for the bottom."

Well, we can give her a good cheese cake recipe, but not with a yeast dough. We inquired far and wide (including New York and Chicago) but to no avail.

Several women reported that they remember this type of cheese cake, which was sold in German bakeries, but apparently no one has the recipe.

The Wheat Flour Institute did send us a recipe from a German cook book, but it is obviously a very old receipt" and is written in such outmoded terms that we don't think Mrs. W. would find it practical nor helpful.

So, much as it saddens us, we must admit we can't help with this—and it isn't that we didn't try.

A CARD signed simply "Thank You" asks for the cause and prevention of rust spots in head lettuce.

The message reads: I've been washing head lettuce and then storing it in the refrigerator drawer but rust spots appear in a few days' time."

The cause is basically beyond your control, since it is due to growing conditions involving soil and weather. The "rust" may not be evident when the lettuce is shipped, but may develop in transit and becomes more pronounced the longer it is kept. This imperfection is often the reason for the wide range in prices sometimes found in lettuce.

Incidentally, two to three days is the recommended length of storage for this rather perishable vegetable.

Jeweled Flowers Accent Costumes

JEWELED flowers, tinted in the pale and vibrant hues of the blossoms they emulate are pretty accents for summer costumes. Tiny as new buds or full blown in their design, they are worn as necklaces, bracelets and earrings. Spray earrings that are dotted with rhinestones are light weight and effective as the only adornment for late day dresses. Most of these appear in white as the coolest looking theme that could be provided.

Many of the flower designs add leaf sprays to give them a realistic impression. There is much use of gold, too, as a decorative addition to the jewelry. Wreath themes are numerous in the pastel shades as well as white. The vogue of wearing flower ornaments in the hair, offers another opportunity to decorate a costume with jeweled flowers and sprays.

Canned Figs

Serving canned figs? You'll need three to four for each portion.

New Versatility In Lace Fashions

LACE fashions are featured extensively for summer. They are seen on the beach and the street as well as on the terrace. The new synthetic fibers, sometimes combined with natural fibers, have given lace a new versatility and packability.

Among the designers who are using lace is Julie Lynn Charlot. Her separates trio includes a tailored shirt and full skirt of allover white cotton lace banded with blue cotton satin. The lace also is used for a cardigan. Another costume combines a white linen blouse and skirt that are edged with narrow lace.

Chantilly vies with cotton lace for honors in the evening field. One striking costume by Sylvan Rich of Martini is a slim sheath of champagne colored Chantilly with a darker coat of the same lace pattern. Ann Klein of Junior Sophisticates has created a long-sleeved evening shirtwaist of cornflower blue cotton lace to go with a white chiffon skirt.

Wonderful Idea

Spoon hot cheese sauce over poached eggs arranged on toast; top with crisp slices of bacon. Wonderful for Sunday brunch

Interesting Summer Fashions of Cotton

BECAUSE young people like cotton and because St Louis enjoys a "cotton" climate, designers in this city of young fashions stress the creation of interesting summer fashions made of cotton. With an emphasis upon how the fabric will perform in hot weather, the designers have chosen cottons with finishes that resist soil and wear. Cottons that hold their pleats permanently! cottons that can be "dripped" dry and need only a light pressing are among the featured types.

Fine broadcloths that have a wrinkle-resistant finish, poplins, piques, polished effects, and many pretty sheer themes are noteworthy in traditionally young fabrics. The petticoat influence continues, and many of the full-skirted cotton dresses have their own petticoats of nylon net attached. Others are cut with expandable fullness to accommodate full petticoats. The princess silhouette with inverted box pleats that start high and extend to increasing fullness at the hemline is an example of this.

Open necklines and bare arm fashions dominate the summer collections, but many dresses add brief jackets. The sheath dress made of cotton and lace is a popular type for late-day wear. Schiffli embroidery trims many cotton and linen dresses. Lingerie ruffles also are liked. Colors of these youthful styles range from white and pastels to deep blues, greens and violets.

Calypso Influence In New Sportswear

INSPIRED by the colorful styles worn by Calypso singers, a California designer, Stephanie Korst, has created some unusual co-ordinated sportswear. These separates are authentically West Indian in fabric, color and design. The two fabrics featured are a nubby finished cotton and a print in earth tones of terra cotta, black and deep brown.

One of the items in the collection is a "top-over" inspired by the loose shirts worn by West Indians. This has a convertible collar, slit front neckline and short sleeves. It is designed to be worn as an over blouse with a bright, printed sash tied at the waistline. A copperty alloy in the collar of the "top-over" makes it possible to adjust the collar as the wearer prefers. The same alloy is used for the cuffs of tapered Calypso pants. Blouses are co-ordinated with full circle printed skirts, and there also are sun dresses, shorts and bathing suits to complete an ensemble.

Men's Fashions Are Now More Colorful

FASHIONS for men are becoming more colorful. This is noteworthy in accessories as well as in the major items of summer attire. Jewelry, for example, include many gay, conversational pieces that look appropriate with the casual clothes worn so extensively during the summer months. Some handsome cuff links and tie bars feature precious stones for a spot of vivid color. Other pieces are treated with interesting finishes and textures.

According to the Jewelry Industrial Council 25 jewelry items are included in a well-dressed man's wardrobe. Here is the list: wrist watch for business or sports, pocket watch and chain for evening wear, identification bracelet, ring, collar pin, tie clasp, watch bracelet, key chain, charm for watch chain, diamond or pearl studs and cuff links, plain gold cuff links, scarf pin, gold or silver pen and pencil set, gold pocket knife, cigarette case, cigarette lighter, gold or silver belt buckle, bill clasp, wallet with gold or silver initials, emblem lapel buttons with matching ring, cuff links and tie slide, gold latch key, umbrella with gold or silver handle or initial plates.

Town Suit

Bold houndstooth checked cotton is used by Adele Simpson for a town suit with a short, fitted jacket and gently flared skirt. This same type of double woven sheer cotton in a pattern of zig zag stripes is used by Pauline Trigere for a sleeveless two-piece dress. A long over-blouse buttoning at the back has two pockets to break the slimly tailored line.

Many New Homesites Developed

Increased activity in the development and opening of new subdivisions—widely diversified in location and type—was reported the past week.

Fred J. Hardesty, president of Hardesty Developments Inc., said that negotiations had been completed for the purchase of additional adjoining property to increase the size of the firm's Castlereagh Estates development to 800 acres, with approximately a mile of bluff frontage overlooking the Missouri river.

The tract lies between the Old Jamestown road and the Missouri river, approximately four miles northeast of the City of Florissant. Hardesty remarked that it had been difficult to assemble adjoining farm lands after his company's original purchase of the 465-acre Curlee bluff property.

The tract, which is near the historic encampment of the Lewis and Clark expedition, has been divided into homesites ranging from one to three acres, planned to take advantage of the natural setting.

The project will have a water supply, electricity and construction contracts have been let for concrete streets. The first four roads have been designated as Prince drive, Queens drive, Baron Court and Castle drive in keeping with the original Castlereagh (Grey Castle), a historic castle estate in England.

J. W. Pyle is in charge of a field office recently opened at Castle drive entrance on Old Jamestown road.

Robert M. Berkley reported that he expects to begin construction soon of homes in a new Hickory Hill section, just south of the first one which is in the City of Frontenac, a mile and a half south of Clayton road on the west side of Geyer road.

George A. Winkler, architect, planned the houses in both sections to retain as much natural beauty of the site as possible. Basic features of each house include three bedrooms and a library or a fourth bedroom.

Commenting on the fact that Hickory Hill has been styled in early American design, Berkley said, "We've put modern developments inside the home simply because we feel that is where they belong. Because of the natural beauty of the development, we've designed each exterior to blend with the landscape."

Williamsburg Estates, a 26-acre St. Louis county subdivision at the southwest intersection of Clayton and Mason roads, was formally opened last week. The development will be limited to homes in the "$40,000 and up" class, according to C. I. Silver realty agent.

Each lot has a front footage of 225 to 250 feet. Winding concrete roadways are designed to take advantage of the wooded, rolling terrain. Utilities including water, electricity and storm sewers have been installed.

The site is near the campus of Principia pre-college departments.

The Harvey Vatterott Real Estate Co. announced the recent opening of its St. George Hills development, adjoining St. George Village, between Union and Gravois roads in Affton. The homes, of brick construction, are planned for two or three bedrooms.

According to the developer, a committee was recently appointed from St. George Village to study the possibility of annexing St. George Hills into the Village and approval has been received from the trustees of St. George Hills subdivision.

The Smith Company has opened the second section of Southview Gardens, a development left of Buckley road, near Lemay Ferry road. The John Hubatcheck Construction Co. is the builder and developer.

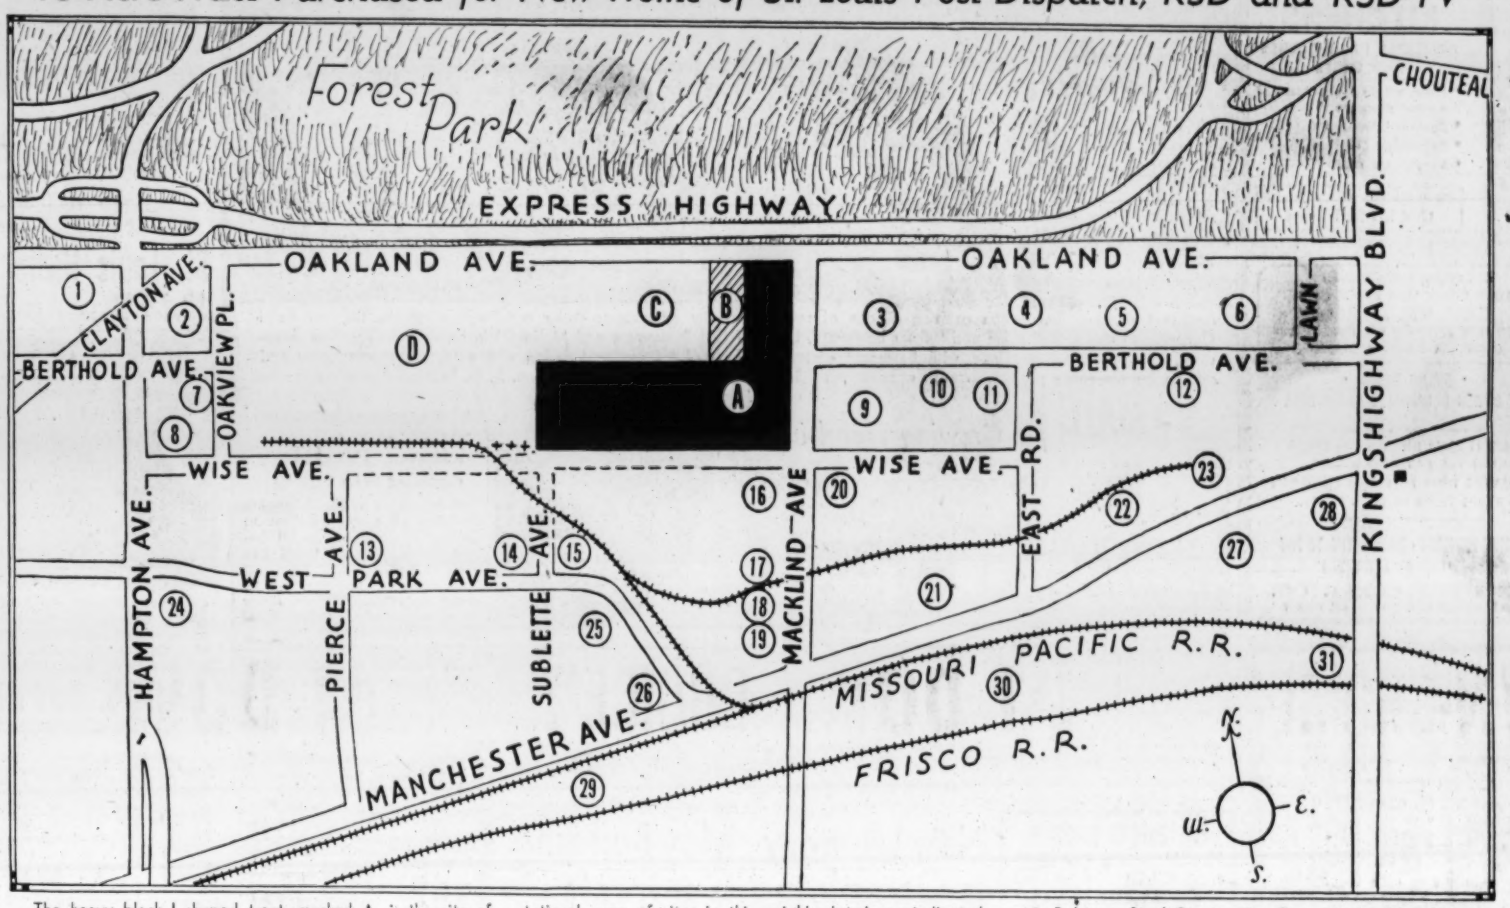

Sanitary and storm sewers and concrete streets designated as Fain, Jonathan and Darding drives have been installed.

Hathaway No. 5 has been opened, according to the Vorhof-Duenke Real Estate Co., sales agent for the development. Display houses, furnished by the Lammert Furniture Co., Scruggs Vandervoort Barney, Stix, Baer & Fuller and Famous Barr Co., are open for inspection in the 1000 block on Old Halls Ferry road.

Opening of new Northland

18-Acre Tract Purchased for New Home of St. Louis Post-Dispatch, KSD and KSD-TV

The heavy black L-shaped tract, marked A, is the site of about 18 acres acquired by The Pulitzer Publishing Co. for a future establishment for the Post-Dispatch and its television station, KSD-TV, and radio station, KSD. It fronts 300 feet on Oakland avenue, facing Forest Park; 1000 feet on Macklind avenue, and more than 1250 feet on Wise avenue. It will be served by a spur track from industrial sidings of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad. The shaded area, marked B, is an additional tract of about two acres, fronting 200 feet on Oakland avenue, which was placed under a 10-year option of purchase by the company. The area marked C is Forest Park Highlands; D is The Arena. Other present and prospective commercial, industrial and institutional users of sites in this neighborhood are indicated by the following numbers: 1. Deaconess Hospital. 2. # Vacancies And Rental Rates Firm

Over-all rental vacancy rates and residential rents in most cities have not changed appreciably in the last year, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Basis for N.A.R.E.B.'s finding was information gathered from 220 real estate market areas in the semi-annual market survey just completed by the association's division of research.

Probably the strongest influence in the stability of the rental market in most areas of the nation, the survey showed, has been consumer interest in better housing. The marketable supply of units for rent that meet the amenity requirements of the average family is still relatively low.

Other factors bearing on the housing inventory were given as the demolition or "boarding up" of deficient units, changing patterns of land use and the unwillingness of families to live in neglected areas.

Demand for single-family, detached rental houses far exceeds the supply in many areas, N.A.R.E.B. said. For 92 per cent of the communities available units of this type are reported to be two per cent or less of the supply. Vacancies were quoted as between three and five per cent for six percent of the cities and above that level for the last two per cent.

Comments from around the nation pointed up the marginal quality of many available unoccupied units and the progressive elimination from the market of war-time conversions. Attention was drawn to the rising vacancies in buildings where maintenance had been neglected.

Nation-wide, the supply of unoccupied habitable apartments has not changed significantly during the last 18 months.

Vacancies in multi-family structures are higher in a number of cities than they were six months or a year ago, but these areas are not necessarily the same ones reporting rising vacancies in previous surveys.

Two-thirds of the market areas reported vacancy rates for habitable multi-family rental units of "two per cent or less," while 21 per cent listed them at "three to five per cent."

Higher vacancies were most frequent in the South Atlantic region where 33 per cent of the communities reported six per cent or more habitable rental units vacant, and the West South Central region where 27 per cent of the reporters listed the same situation. Vacancy rates were lowest in the West North Central region where 93 per cent of the communities found two per cent or less of the habitable rental units vacant.

With respect to rents for all residential rental housing, 65 per cent of the country indicated no material change, compared with a year ago. Eighteen per cent of the nation reported modest rent increases caused by higher taxes and maintenance costs, and 17 per cent found rents lower.

Goodyear Building Under Way

Construction is under way for a new district office and warehouse building, to be occupied under a long-term lease by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., it was announced yesterday by G. W. Dempsey, district manager for the company.

The structure, being erected at 8544 Page avenue, will be of one-story design, 400x200 feet, with 80,000 square feet of floor space. The office area of approximately 9000 square feet will be air-conditioned.

The building will be served by the Terminal Railroad and there will be six truck bays for receiving and shipping merchandise. Ample parking will be provided on the site which measures approximately 230,000 square feet.

Dempsey said that the new facilities were designed for "a one-step operation" with merchandise coming in on one side of the building by rail, moving straight through and out the other side by truck. Merchandise movement at the company's present quarters at 4210 Forest Park boulevard requires five operations.

The lease by Goodyear of the four-story building on Forest Park, erected for the company in 1921, expires Dec. 31, when the new quarters are scheduled to be completed.

Plans for the new building were prepared by Arthur B. Rathert, architect, under supervision of the Goodyear real estate department. Merle-Jung Construction Co. is general contractor.

Lease on Olive St.

The Buena Vista Film Distribution Co., distributor for Walt Disney Productions, has leased two ground floor offices at 3309 Olive street.

The property is owned by the Idalene Hotel Co., headed by Harry Israel. The lease was negotiated by the Carl G. Stifel Realty Co., managing agent for the building.

District Office and Warehouse Building for Goodyear

Sketch of new quarters being erected at 8544 Page avenue for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. The structure, measuring 400 by 200 feet, is scheduled to be completed Dec. 31. Merle-Jung Construction Co. is general contractor and Arthur B. Rathert, architect.

Addition to Reavis School in Affton Under Way

Perspective of two-story addition to the Reavis School being erected at 9700 Mackenzie road. New facilities will include 12 classrooms, rooms for special instruction and enlarged cafeteria and kitchen. William B. Ittner, Inc., is architect and the Schneiderhahn Construction Co., general contractor.

Addition For School In Affton

Three contracts have been awarded and construction is under way at 9700 Mackenzie road, Affton, on an addition to the Reavis School, consisting of 12 classrooms, an "all-purpose" room, enlarged kitchen and cafeteria facilities and rooms for special instruction.

The addition will be a two-story structure connected to the existing school by a two-story enclosed bridge. Classrooms will ocntain sink cabinets, counters, tackpanel and chalkboard. In grades 1-3 individual toilet facilities will be provided adjacent to classroom.

The "all-purpose" room will have a folding stage to allow maximum floor. The present cafeteria is to be converted into a kindergarten and other remodeling to the present building is planned.

Construction of the addition will be of steel frame with bar joist and poured gypsum roof deck. The exterior will be of brick to match the present building.

Interior finishes will be painted concrete block in classrooms, ceramic glazed tile wainscots in corridors, stair halls, cafeteria and toilets and brick in the "all-purpose" room. Unit ventilators will provide individual classroom temperature control.

A circular drive will be constructed for bus and automobile traffic to the existing building and an additional paved area will be added.

Educational planning for the addition, scheduled for completion Sept. 5, 1957, was initiated by Charles J. Mesnier, superintendent of schools for the district of Affton. William B. Ittner, Inc., is architect and the Schneiderhahn Construction Co., general contractor.

Peck & Peck Will Open 3rd Local Shop Aug. 15 On Maryland Avenue

F. Carleton Peck, president of Peck & Peck, specialists in womens' sportswear, has announced the purchase of Brickman's, Inc., 4944 Maryland avenue, from J. Brickman who is retiring.

The new Peck & Peck Maryland avenue shop will open Aug. 15. Two other local shops of the firm are at 909 Locust street, opened in 1930; and in Clayton at 7734 Forsyth boulevard, opened in 1940.

The store will be designed by Raymond Loewy, Associates, in Peck & Peck style with a color scheme of softly toned pink, rose and beige shades.

The company, established in New York in 1887, is a family organization headed by A. Wells Peck, chairman of the board; Frederic C. Peck, president, and E. Wallace Peck, executive vice president.

Convention in St. Louis.

The forty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will be held in St. Louis this year from Nov. 10-15.

Interstate Supply Co. Starts Building of $100,000 Warehouse

Dale E. Neiswander, president of Interstate Supply Co., distributor for R.C.A. Victor and R.C.A. Whirlpool products in St. Louis, southern Illinois and eastern Missouri, announced that a new 17,000 square feet warehouse is being erected to augment present facilities at 4445 Gustine at a cost of approximately $100,000.

The plans were disclosed to 400 R.C.A. Victor dealers attending a showing of the company's new 1957 line of television sets, phonographs, radios and tape recorders.

The new building, with exterior finish of brick, is scheduled for completion by September. It will house ranges, washers, dryers, ironers, freezers and room air-conditioners. Refrigerators will be added to the line late in the fall.

Neal Campbell is architectural engineer. C. Rallo Contracting Co., Inc., is the builder.

Applications for G.I. Home Loans in May Only 14 Less Than April

G.I. home loan application and appraisal activity remained about the same in May as it did in April, according to J. F. Kelley, manager of the St. Louis Veterans Administration regional office.

During May, VA received 45,250 loan applications from private lenders for veterans, a drop of only 14 applications from the previous month.

No Immediate Change Seen In 'Tight Money' Situation, Realty Finance Man States

By L. L. SEEMAN, Lecturer, Real Estate Financing, Washington University.

Much publicity has been given to the tight money situation which has existed for many months. Tight money has probably been more pronounced in the mortgage field than in other industries. However, there are no tangible signs that mortgage money should become more available before the end of the year.

When we talk about tight money, we mean that interest rates increase, commissions are greater, the terms are shorter, and mortgage lenders become more selective in the quality of the mortgage made. Between 1939 and 1951, mortgage market conditions were quite stable, with the rates remaining around 4½ per cent.

In 1951 the price of mortgages dropped sharply, but quickly recovered. When we speak of the price of mortgages declining, we can state in another way that interest rates increase approximately because for every two points that the price of a mortgage increases the interest rate decreases a quarter per cent, and vice versa. Again in 1953, money conditions of the country became unstable and mortgage prices dropped sharply to a record low for recent times but gradually recovered to normal in mid-1954.

In August, 1954, the price of mortgages started to decline and money became tighter. This downward trend has continued steadily until the present time, when prices are approaching the extreme low of 1953. It has been this continuous and unabated tightening of mortgage credit that has caused the present situation.

The reason for this condition today is mainly twofold: first, through natural economic conditions, the demand for mortgage money has greatly exceeded the normal supply, commercial and industrial building are at an all-time peak, although residential construction is lagging; second, there has been a fear on the part of the government money managers that unless credit expansion is halted serious inflation will be the result. Therefore these money managers, through the Federal Reserve, have tightened credit, including mortgage credit.

There are two good reasons why money should become easier. The first is political, since continuation of the present hard money policy will certainly cause mortgage bankers, builders and realtors to suffer financial losses, and accordingly probable blame the Administration. Second, this long, continued decline in mortgage prices, or the increase in interest rates and commissions, has slowed down future building of all kinds, and is easing the demand.

Approximately 60 per cent of all residential mortgages made today are either FHA or G.I. These loans are readily bought and sold on a national basis and therefore can be tabulated as to market price. Today these 4½ per cent loans show an average price of 95¾ against a high two years of 99. It appears that the price will continue to decline another half point before the downward trend has been reversed.

Tight Money

Of course it is dangerous to quote an average figure, since there are many quality FHA loans that are selling today at near 100 (par), while the discount market is asking a 10 point discount for sub-marginal G.I. loans.

The present situation has been very disquieting, not only for the public in general, trying to buy homes financed with G.I. and FHA loans, but also for the builders and real estate dealers who must pay the "discounts" and the mortgage banker who must collateralize and warehouse his mortgages until he finds the ultimate investor — usually an insurance company or savings bank.

New Laundry Is Completed On South Side

A laundry building, said to be the first such type structure specifically designed and constructed "from the ground up" in the past 30 years, has been completed at the corner of Gravois and Russell for the Hollis E. Suits Family Laundry.

The 20,000 square-foot building, replaces smaller facilities formerly occupied by the company at 1517 Clark street for 35 years. Designed for the growing trend of drive-in facilities, cash and carry, and one-day laundry service, the Suits building has a 300-foot frontage along Russell boulevard, served by six driveways designed for drive-in service.

The masonry-type building is laid out in 25 by 20-foot bays with structural steel framing supporting steel bar joists and a precast insulated concrete slab roof deck. Five large roof monitor-type fans provide building ventilation. Galvanized steel sash in the four walls provide daylight lighting for laundering operations.

A loading dock and protecting canopy permit all-weather loading and unloading operations for laundry truck facilities on the west side of the building. Approximately 1500 square feet of office space and counter facilities for customers occupy the northwest corner of the structure.

Officers of the laundry are Hollis E. Suits, president, who served as executive secretary of the Laundry Owners Association of St. Louis until starting his own business in 1921; Kingsley E. Suits, vice president, and McCawley Suits, secretary.

General contractor for the project was the Murch-Jarvis Construction Co., with Russell Maloney as consulting engineer.

May Building Contracts Up 44 Per Cent

Contracts awarded for future construction in May in the St. Louis district, totaling $96,667,000, were 44 per cent above May, 1955, it was reported by Carl G. Momberg, district manager of F. W. Dodge Corporation. The cumulative total of $392,563,000 for the first five months of 1956 was down 3 per cent over the like 1955 period.

The district comprises Eastern Missouri, Southern Illinois, Western Tennessee and Arkansas.

Individual May 1956 categories compared with May 1955 showed: total building up 39 per cent at $74,847,000; heavy engineering up 63 per cent at $21,820,000.

First five months 1956 individual categories compared with the like period of 1955 showed: total building down 5 per cent at $317,287,000; heavy engineering up 6 per cent at $75,276,000.

Subdivision

Hills, a subdivision on West Florissant road, north of Northland Hills shopping center, is being held today by the Schuermann Building and Realty Co.

Interior and exterior design represent departures from previous Schuermann-built homes, and are the result of surveys taken over a period of months among visitors to 11 Schuermann experimental homes, erected for the purpose of discovering up-to-the-minute preferences of today's home buyers.

The Northland Hills project will increase the total of houses built by the Schuermann Building & Realty Co. to more than 11,000.

Institute for Deaf Begins New Addition

Expansion plans to increase its service to the hard of hearing are under way at St. Joseph Institute for the Deaf, 1483 82nd boulevard, University City, where construction has started on a two-story modern brick supplemental structure, expected to cost more than $300,000. The building will adjoin the three-story main structure of modified colonial design.

The addition will provide increased classroom, recreational and dormitory space to present facilities used in training preschool and grade-school-age children. Hard of hearing and deaf children are admitted without restrictions as to race or creed.

Approximately $200,000 has been subscribed to the institute, founded in 1836 in Carondelet by the Sisters of St. Joseph who came from France at the request of Bishop Rosati, St. Louis' first Catholic Bishop.

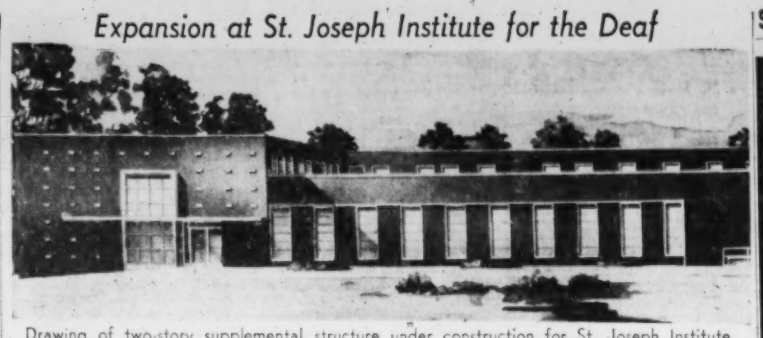

The school is nationally known for its training program in eduacting and preparing hearing-handicapped children to enter high school and engage in sports and other school activities with children of normal hearing.

The present building, completed in 1934, accommodates 75 boarding and 25 day students and a faculty of 17 teaching Sisters and six lay teachers.

Supervising the institute is a board of directors with M. E. Rowan as chairman.

John H. Howe is the architect with the Hercules Construction Co. as builder.

New Building For Leather Firm to Start

Plans for construction of an air-conditioned factory and executive office building, as part of an expansion program, have been announced by the Prince Gardner Co., manufacturer of personal leather goods.

Construction of the one-story building, which will contain approximately 34,000 square feet of floor space, will be started July 9.

The precast concrete structure, with exterior finish of brick and terra cotta, will occupy approximately three acres at the southeast corner of Kingshighway and Swan. There will be a parking area for 200 cars.

The new factory will be in addition to one now operated by the firm at St. Mary's, Mo.

Allan Holtzman, architectural and industrial engineer, designed the building which will be erected by the Millstone Construction Co.

Local Delegation Attending Convention

A local delegation arrived in Los Angeles this morning to attend the forty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. Heading the group is William G. Godwin, president of the association.

Others attending include: James F. Cook Jr., a past president of the organization, Mrs. Cook, Judith and Jay Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dischinger, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gaffney, Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Heineck, Walter K. Mathias, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Robinson Jr., Mrs. Florence Stern, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Holthaus, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Theme of the convention will be "Salesmanship."

Physicians Lease Space in East Side Medical Building

Maurice J. Frankel, president of Shop City, Inc., reports the signing of leases by physicians, who will occupy offices in the new Shop City Medical Building being completed at 4601 State Street, East St. Louis, Ill.

The east wing of the first floor will be occupied about July 1 by Dr. Edward W. Carnady, Dr. Arnold S. Noe, Dr. Julian W. Buser, Dr. Williard C. Scrivner, Dr. J. J. Carroll, Dr. V. P. Siegel and Dr. J. W. Compton.

All offices will have acoustical ceilings, air-conditioning, fin-type perimeter heating system, plaster walls, asphalt-tiled floors, fluorescent lighting and built-in telephone and intercommunication systems.

The Medical Building occupies 10,000 square feet of a 100,000 square foot ground area. The site landscaped around the building, includes a blacktopped parking area.

Schwartz, Schwartz & Landsman, attorneys in St. Louis, represented Shop City in the lease negotiations. Shapiro & Tisdale, architects, designed the building.

First St. Louis Dealer For French-Made Auto Opens in Ferguson

The first Renault dealership in the St. Louis area has been opened by Eugene Ziaja and Clarence Vollmar at 803 South Florissant road, Ferguson. ## LEAVES From a Gardener's NOTEBOOK

By Eleanor McClure

On a recent Eastern trip I enjoyed an encore of spring bloom. When we drove through Indiana on June 6, the peonies were in full flower. In New Jersey, June 10 was the peak of the iris season, but most hybrid tea roses were still in tight bud.

Such variations in the bloom calendar make an early summer trip particularly interesting. The effects of differences in elevation are noticeable, too, for in some Pennsylvania mountain communities, spireas looked like white bouquets.

The drive across Indiana and Ohio convinced me that it is nice to travel in peony time and that everyone should plant more peonies. Those great globes of color made such a cheery show beside the old farm houses and in town and city gardens. Some of the white peonies (probably our old friend, Festiva maxima) seemed as large as shrubs, with the leaves almost hidden by giant flowers.

Near Columbus, Ohio, we were impressed by eye-stopping masses of red floribunda roses. There were so many rose beds, not only in home gardens, but beside stores, filling stations and other commercial establishments that I wondered if it were the result of a garden club campaign.

It is in the Columbus area, too, that one notices a change in landscape planting, with greater use of yews and of various broad-leaved evergreens. Up to this point the typical "foundation planting" seems to be in what might be termed "Midwestern style," a green planting of conifers (mostly junipers) that gives a somewhat somber, ponderous effect.

The area from eastern Ohio to the Atlantic coast enjoys a more favorable climate, and particularly, higher humidity in both summer and winter—a factor that is appreciated by the plants. Rhododendrons, which grow so reluctantly in the St. Louis area, thrive in Pennsylvania. In New Jersey some venerable plants look as big as magnolia trees.

In Montclair I was particularly impressed with the veritable hedgerows of giant rhododendrons and mountain laurels which were planted beside the sidewalks, making dense screening from the traffic of the streets. These aristocratic plants are decorative at any season, but in peak bloom they made a fabulous display. In New Jersey they thrive in full sun and don't have to be pampered.

I had the pleasure of attending the annual Rose Day festivities at the home of Dr. Cynthia Westcott, the Glen Ridge, N. J., "Plant Doctor." It was a nice surprise to find that one of the guests at the buffet luncheon was an old and valued friend, E. L. D. Seymour, former horticultural editor of American Home Magazine, and author of numerous garden books. Just a few days before he had been the recipient of the country's top horticultural honor, the Arthur Hoyt Scott Horticultural Award, presented at the Swarthmore University commencement.

Following the luncheon, we were whisked away on a brief garden tour. The first stop was a visit to the Montclair Garden club's display garden, which has gay beds of perennials and roses. Then we saw the remarkable iris display gardens, where masses of irises made long ribbons of bloom.

This garden has a historical collection of irises with labels calling attention to some of the species iris and earliest types. Most of the newest bearded hybrids are represented, too, so that it is possible to see how this flower has changed and progressed through centuries of cultivation.

When we returned to Dr. Westcott's garden, Rose Day visitors were arriving. Although it was a dark and gloomy afternoon, with ever-threatening skies, there were more than 600 visitors from at least a dozen states. Luckily, the rain held off until late afternoon.

Dr. Westcott, who confesses she is a proselyter who can't help preaching the "rose gospel," dispensed horticultural information with lavish generosity. Twice during the afternoon there were brief talks by distinguished visitors, as well as practical demonstrations of rose dusters and rose sprays.

Following her usual practice, Dr. Westcott has been using her own rose beds as test plots. This year half of the flowers are getting an antibiotic spray, but with little noticeable effect up to the present time. She has also been experimenting with foliage fertilizers. Her roses, as always, were exceptionally large and beautiful and the leaves were rich green and glossy. This peak of perfection is the result, she maintains of about one hour's care a week—the application of an all-purpose, three-in-one spray.

Half-Bath Helps.

Half measures can be a big help — especially when they mean half baths. Essentially a bathroom without tub or shower, the half bath serves both as an adjunct to gracious hospitality and as a reserve facility during the family's morning rush hour.

'Built-In-Spare' Tire

A new automobile tire with a "built-in spare" has been announced by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Named the "Captive-Air," it s a dual compartment safety tire which, even if it is ripped wide open by a blowout, enables the motorist to keep driving safely at legal speeds for a hundred or more miles. A Goodyear spokesman described the construction as a "tire within a tire."

More Private Housing Need By Oldsters

A strong recommendation for the expansion of private home building for housing older persons has been approved by delegates of the Federal-State Conference on Aging, meeting at the National Housing Center as a special committee on housing and living arrangements for elderly people.

The conference is sponsored by the Council of State Governments and the Federal Council on Aging, the latter an interdepartmental Government group appointed by President Eisenhower to explore housing programs and needs of old folks.

In their recommendations to the conference, the delegates proposed that the various states take appropriate steps to encourage the production of small, suitably designed houses built by private industry and utilizing for that purpose, wherever necessary, the liberalized provisions for Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance contained in pending congressional legislation.

"It was recognized by the delegates that private housing, both single-family and group units, plays an important role in any well-rounded program of housing for the aging," said Mrs. Irene Thrasher of Newton, Mass., a member of the Massachusetts legislature, who was discussion group leader.

"We feel that the need for adequate housing for older persons presents a real opportunity to both private firms and non-profit organizations.

"A fact that should be stressed is that we ought not to be building homes for older people as such, but well-designed, more flexible homes which would include special features, such as hand rails and a minimum of stairs. Such houses would have features that would be both essential for the aging and also useful and practical for younger people just starting their families. They would be, in effect, small homes that would be attractive and saleable to any small family seeking a modest-sized home."

Other recommendations by the group included: State-wide meetings to be called by the various governors, of representatives of public, private, and voluntary organizations to study the housing problems and needs of the aging in their own states. Only 14 states now have active formal organizations for dealing with problems of older persons.

That governors include housing in the program of any state organization created for assisting older people.

That social security legislation be amended to permit recipients of public assistance to receive old age assistance if living in tax-supported boarding houses, such as county homes.

Encouragement of services in each community which would enable older people to stay as long as possible in their own homes. The delegates stated that older persons prefer their homes to institutions, and that if such services as homemaking, visiting nurses and friendly visitors were provided and expanded, this desire could be met more widely.

Participation by private and non-profit groups in building housing for the aging. This would include church groups, citizen organizations, and housing associations.

Small homes and apartments for older people in and facing retirement, who are now living in large homes bought when their incomes were substantially greater and their children lived at home.

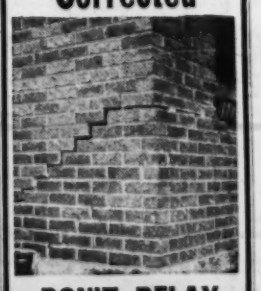

A two-year extension of the Hill-Burton Act, as recommended by the President, because several states have not yet had the chance to avail themselves of the special provisions for nursing homes and rehabilitation and treatment centers.

Socony Mobil Oil Co. Names New Manager For Central Region

H. T. Ashton, manager of Socony Mobile Oil Company's central region since 1946 and a member of the oil industry for 43 years, will retire July 1, according to an announcement by Vern A. Bellman, manager of domestic marketing. He will be succeeded by Henry J. Muller.

Socony Mobil's central region, with headquarters in Chicago, includes five marketing divisions and covers 16 states, extending west from Ohio to Wyoming, Montana, and Colorado, and north from Kansas and Missouri to the Canadian border.

Muller joined the company in 1912 as a messenger boy. He was assistant to the president from 1931 to 1934, when he was transferred to central region marketing. In 1955, he became assistant manager of the central region.

Additional Facilities Completed for Water Company

A second floor addition and added garage facilities for the St. Louis County Water Company's service building at 8691 Olive Street road have been completed and were occupied the past week. The $150,000 addition more than doubles the size of this headquarters for customer services including pipeline construction, installation, inspection and facilities for emergency crews. The office also serves as a central radio control for company radio-equipped vehicles. The addition is another phase of the company's expansion program which includes a new south county plant, near Gravois road and the Meramec river, which will go into operation about July 1.

On 'Less Than Cent-a-Mile' Trip

This Nash Rambler "Cross Country" 4-door station wagon passed through St. Louis yesterday morning en route from Los Angeles, Calif., where it started June 19, to New York City. Plans are to make the 2950-mile gas economy test run on less than six tanks of gasoline, or a cost under one cent a mile. The Rambler standard production model was met at the city limits by a fleet of St. Louis dealers' cars, headed by R. L. Tuckwell, zone manager for American Motors, and escorted through the city to the Chain of Rocks Bridge. It is expected to reach New York City tomorrow.

CARNIVAL — An Impression

LIGHTS FROM WHIRLING RIDES etch a carnival's gaudy trade mark in the night. The diagonal ribbon of white and the white fan are made by fluorescent tubes of the Round Up ride. Named for its own evolutions and not for what the cowpokes do, the Round Up carries its daring passengers in a circular cage, whose sides are faintly inscribed beneath the ribbon. The cage is parallel with the ground at the start of the ride, then is gradually tilted as it gains speed. Neon lights on a moving Ferris wheel paint the enormous red hoop, ringed in blue-green. Star shining through is a decoration between the revolving wheel and its twin. The twin is still, and its neon ribbing cuts slender lines in the darkness to the right of the hoop. Through the hoop's center shine floodlights from one of the towers illuminating the carnival grounds. The picture, a time exposure, was made while a show was set up at Grand boulevard and Laclede avenue.

Eighth Grade Commencement

Graduate Joyce Gilliam trims Graduate Robert Cheatham's class ribbons, in final preparations for ceremonies.

During a spare moment, class members busily trade autographs. All the girls wore identical tea-rose corsages.

Arthur Koch tells about Western Academy of Natural Sciences.

Carrying copies of their readings, which they had memorized, solemn-faced eighth graders march onto stage in the kindergarten room at Scullin School for graduation exercises. The program commemorated the founding of several local and state organizations, and the 250th birthday of Benjamin Franklin.

By GARY W. FERGUSON of the PICTURES Staff

AT SCHOOLS THAT STILL make an occasion of it, eighth-grade graduation is a big day. Some school administrators question whether all the fuss is desirable and favor doing away with the formalities. Although acknowledging the practice had more significance when many pupils left school after the eighth grade, other educators contend that the end of the first eight years of school is still an important milestone and deserves recognition.

The St. Louis public school system keeps to the eighth-grade commencement tradition, although extent of the ceremonies varies among the schools. Scullin School, at 4160 North Kingshighway, is one of those that accord graduates the full treatment.

There, watching last-minute bustle before the morning exercises, Scullin Principal Thomas J. Rucker Sr. said, "It seems like they've grown up overnight."

"Oh, children always look much older when they're dressed up," a mother responded. Rucker, an understanding man, agreed. But it was apparent his observation had been prompted by things besides the contrast between everyday school clothes and new graduation outfits.

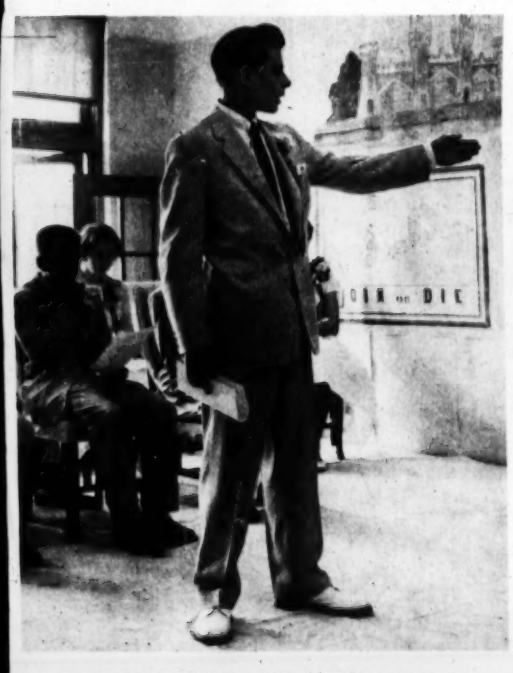

As the grand march from "Aida" was played on the piano, the 16 members of the graduating class marched single-file onto a small, portable stage in the kindergarten room. The room was filled with nearly 100 guests, most of them relatives of the graduates. About midway through the program of readings and songs, some of the younger relatives grew restless, and the lack of success small children have in attempting to whisper became evident occasionally.

Finally, the readings having all been said and the songs all sung, time came for awarding graduation certificates. "I wish for you all a very bright future," said Rucker. "We are just as proud of you as we can be. We almost wish you could stay around here with us longer."

Then the class gave the principal $6.80 for three books for the school library, and it was time for the piano to play the march again. The graduates filed out.

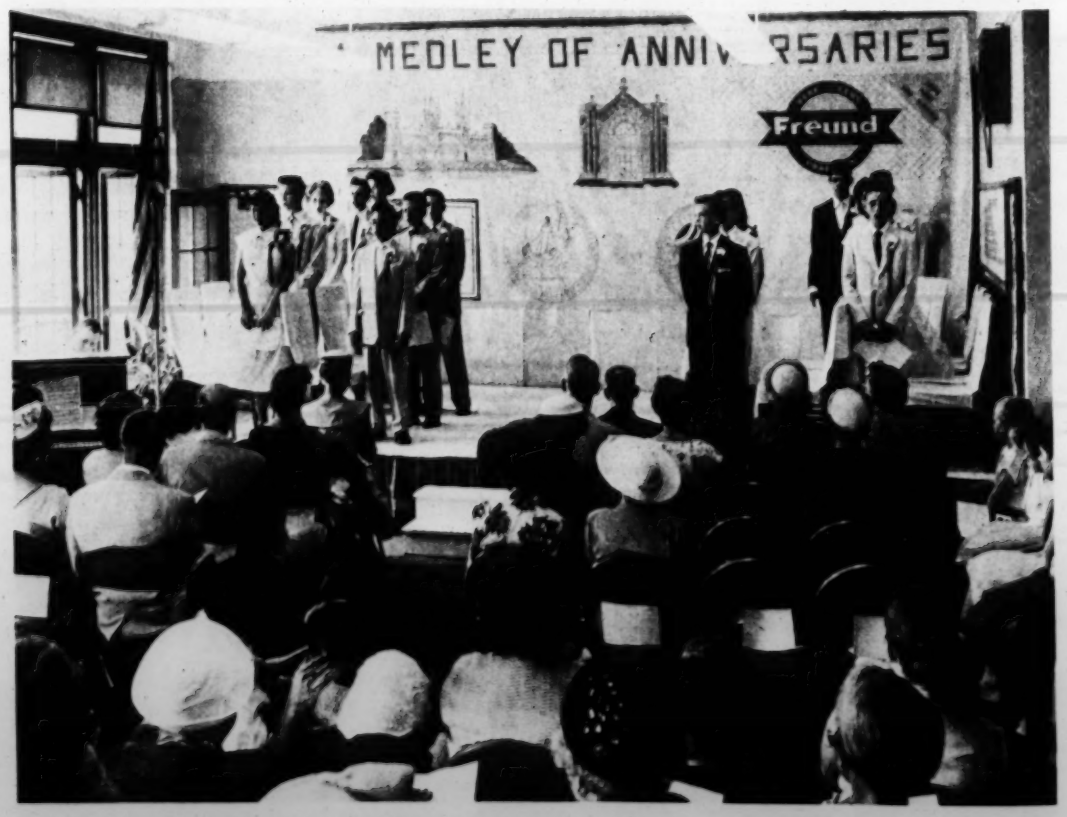

Wayne Tobler, left, talks on early times of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association, as Ruth Dickerson and Michael Crow wait to tell of the fair-sponsoring group's later years.

In welcoming address, William Haggett gestures with outthrust hand toward stage backdrop, illustrating the program theme, "A Medley of Anniversaries." Join or Die cartoon honors Franklin.

Joyce Gilliam, left, and Carolyn Owens give a two-part reading. The subject: History of the St. Louis Dental Society.

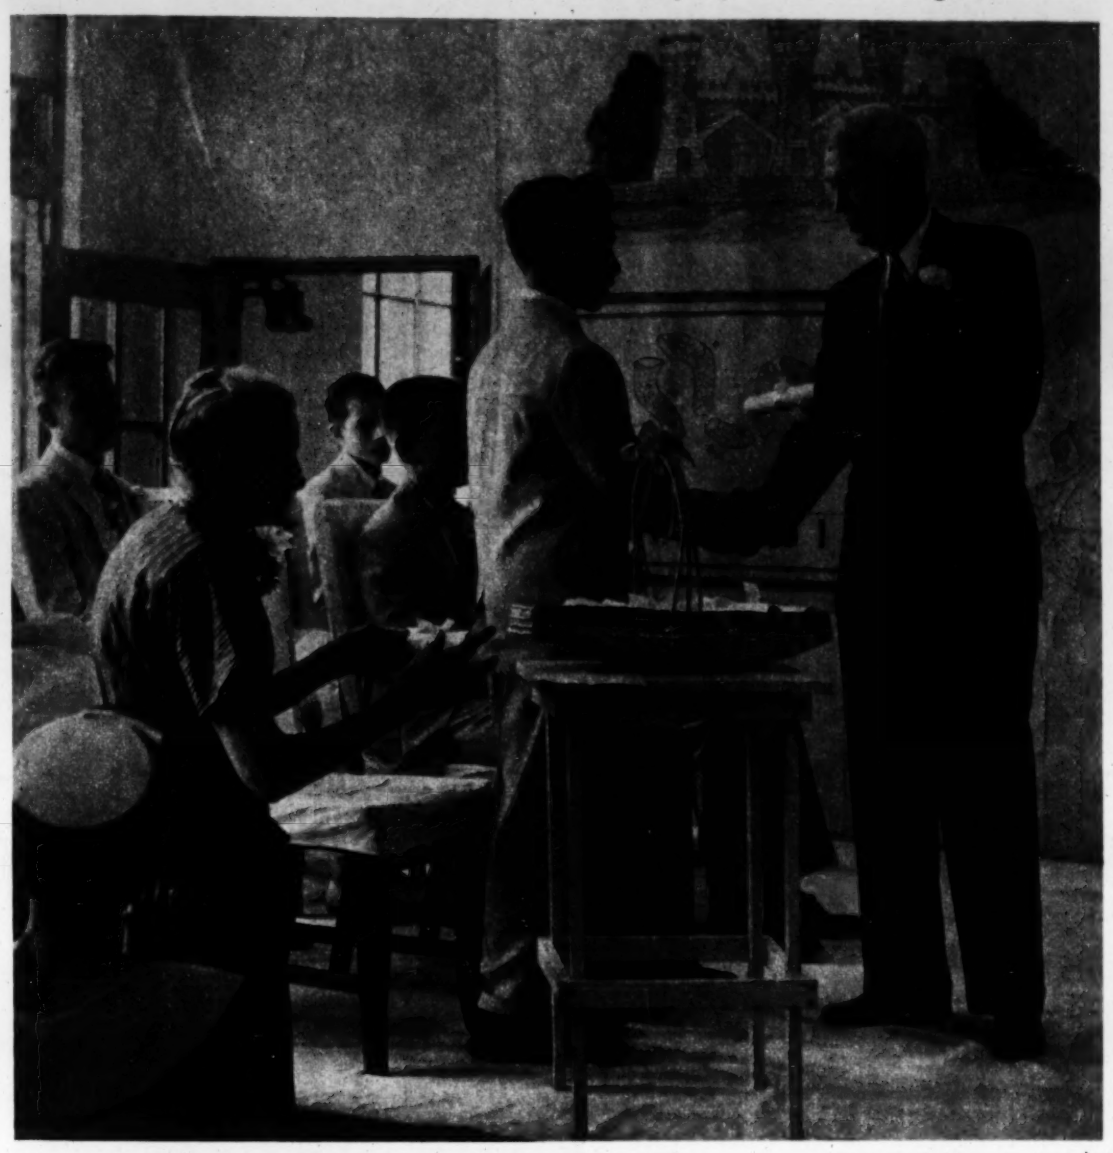

Between readings, the class sings a song. On backdrop, made by the class, are crayon drawings to scale of buildings, emblems and other symbols of honored organizations.

Girls in class sing "It's a Lovely Day Today." From the left, they are Lois Isbell, Paulette Mennemeyer, Joyce Gilliam, Carolyn Owens, Ruth Dickerson and Dorothy Atanasoff.

Scullin School's 16 Graduates, With Others in St. Louis Districts, Get Send Off In Exercises Following Old Tradition That Many Systems No Longer Observe

Principal Rucker hands William Keay his certificate. Miss Stella Michel, class teacher, holds the diploma to be awarded next. She is known throughout the St. Louis system for her elaborate graduation programs.

Parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters and well-wishers of the graduating eighth graders fill closely spaced folding chairs set up for the exercises. The day was hot, and brow-mopping and fanning were freely indulged in. Even the small guests generally were attentive.

Proud principal and teacher watch program. Afterward class gave Miss Michel a large white handbag.

Founding of a 100-year-old St. Louis baking firm is described by Dennis Olenyik. Beside him is Donald Richardson, who told of the company's recent history.

Paulette Mennemeyer relates details of the founding of the St. Louis Academy of Science.

Class members march from the stage at conclusion of the exercises. A few graduates were misty-eyed, but the nostalgic moments were short-lived. Establishment of junior high schools has led to abandonment of ceremonies like this in many cities.

Graduates fill their plates at a luncheon given by the Scullin Mothers and Teachers Club following the exercises. After the meal, the club had a party for the class members.

These Paul's Scarlet climbing roses make a graceful boundary between two homes on Clayton road. Long a favorite in this area, the Paul's Scarlet variety is well suited to St. Louis' climate. It blooms only once during the season, usually in late May and early June.

JUNE'S ROSES

Favorable Weather Has Resulted in Lavish Growth

Radiance roses, bountifully blooming in red and pink, dominate this section of the rose garden at the Jewel Box, standing in the background. Like all 10,000 bushes in the famous garden in Forest Park, these had been cut to within six inches of the ground at the start of the season.

ROSES HAVE BLOOMED profusely in the St. Louis area this year. In stately gardens and in simple plots alike, the flowers show their glory. The lavish growth is a colorful dividend of a cool spring with well-timed rains. "Our fine spring was the best for roses in the past five years, although last year was fairly good," City Floriculturist Henry Ochs said. "A cool spring keeps roses from budding too early and prevents a bleaching out of early blooms."

"If you could see how wonderfully my Bendix and Dash work together you'd know why I am so pleased with them. I'm so proud of my clean, bright washes!" Mrs. D. G. Friel, Rochester, N. Y.

"First time I used Dash in my Bendix, I knew it was just the product I'd been waiting for. My clothes look so much cleaner even my husband is bragging!" Mrs. F. L. Mitchell, Ingle, Calif.

DASH is Procter & Gamble's great new detergent for automatics . . . gives you low suds that really clean!

Important news! The makers of Bendix Automatics tested all leading detergents in their famous Tumble-Action Automatics at their Home Laundry Institute and enthusiastically recommend Dash. Dash gets clothes cleaner in these Bendix Washers than any other product—cleaner than any high-sudser or any other low-sudser! That's why Bendix named Dash as number-one choice for use in their automatic washers. Think what that means to you and your automatic! Dash is the only low-sudsing detergent with so much cleaning power . . . gives really high level cleaning with low level suds for best machine action.

Yes, DASH gets clothes cleaner in these Bendix Washers than any other product known!

With Dash you get cleaner, cleaner clothes than with any other detergent especially made for automatics. And Dash has the low suds your machine needs to work freely . . . won't smother washing-rinsing action and cause poor cleaning as high sudsers can. Dash is the result of years of research by Procter & Gamble. So try Dash. You'll love those cleaner Dash washes!

"My new Tumble-Action Bendix washes like a dream!"

"What a thrill to see how clean my clothes come out of my new Bendix," says Mrs. Savin proudly. "Its Tumble Washing and Triple-Rinse Action are just two of its many exclusive features. I never had such complete washday freedom until I got this new Bendix!"

Ten "Hiroshima Maidens," After Year's Treatment Of 1945 A-Bomb Disfigurements, Leave New York

WHEN 25 young Japanese women, severely burned in the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, arrived in New York for free plastic surgery, one reporter wrote that they looked like "disfigured dolls." That was in May, 1955. This month, 10 members of the group, known as the "Hiroshima Maidens," left for home. As they waved goodby at Idlewild Airport, it was evident that the surgeons, in months of painful treatment, had been able to erase many of the scars left by the first use of a nuclear weapon.

Between visits to New York's Mount Sinai Hospital, the young women lived in private homes in the New York area. They learned American customs, and 17 took a Red Cross course in home nursing techniques. The hospital donated its services, as did the surgeons. Other expenses were met by contributions. The undertaking was organized by Norman Cousins, editor of The Saturday Review magazine.

Along with its happy side, the year had its sorrow. Last month, one of the group, Tomako Nakabayashi, 26 years old, died of a heart attack, six hours after undergoing her third operation. The other 14 young women will complete their treatment and depart for Japan late this summer.

Ready to start back to Japan, eight of the young women bid farewell to American friends at Idlewild Airport. They were schoolgirls when the bomb was dropped August 6, 1945. Ages of those in the group now range from 18 to 32 years. Although the surgery had its cosmetic benefits, it was intended primarily to restore mobility to injured necks, legs, arms and fingers.

Six Children Playing on Unguarded Brooklyn Expressway Site Die in Landslide

Mrs. Theresa Stanikunas, second from right, has to be restrained by two neighbors after learning her 10-year-old son and a 5-year-old daughter were among the six children buried alive. Girl at left, with hand to head, is her 11-year-old daughter, Marie, who lost her shoes when she scrambled out of the path of the falling earth. Marie had warned her younger sister and brother, who had crawled inside the cave, just before dirt wall collapsed.
United Press Photo

Using inhalators, rescue workers strive to awaken a spark of life in two stretcher-borne victims. As soon as children were uncovered, they were carried to blankets spread out near the earth mound. Artificial respiration, inhalators and a new rocker apparatus that helps restore breath were used in attempts to revive them.

Families and friends of the trapped children watch in anguish as rescue workers, at right, attempt to revive victims. A woman at right holds hands to her face, one at left tightly holds a little boy's hand. Other spectators watch from top of ledge where the fatal slide occurred. Excavation is near the Brooklyn end of the Williamsburgh Bridge, at a point where the Brooklyn-Queens Expressway is being cut through.

On day after the accident, Felix Ortiz, 13 years old, consoles his sister, Martha, 15, who sobs as they visit the spot where their 8-year-old sister Anna was one of those buried alive.

IN A CROWDED TENEMENT DISTRICT OF BROOKLYN, eight children waited near an expressway project excavation for workers to stack their tools and leave for the day. Then the youngsters, who had been playing cowboys and Indians, picked up some of the tools and began digging a cave in which to hide. They made rapid progress in the soft, moist bank of the excavation, and soon the hole was big enough for several of the diggers to wriggle inside. Then the wall of earth came down.

Four boys and two girls were buried alive under 25 tons of yellow subsoil and gravel. A passer-by, hearing screams for help, hurriedly dug a boy, still alive, from the mound of earth. A girl who had scrambled away as the dirt rolled down stood watching. Within 15 minutes the six buried children had been pulled out, but efforts to revive them were in vain. Bereaved and irate parents, relatives and neighbors had to be held back from digging and resuscitation operations.

Next day, nine separate investigations into the tragedy were begun by city and state agencies. Key questions were why a watchman wasn't on the premises and whether or not the contracting firm was guilty of criminal negligence. Angry mothers formed picket lines at the excavation site. Said the woman president of the Parents Association of Public School 19, which some of the victims attended: "We don't care about highways, we don't care about Ebbet's Field (home of Brooklyn's baseball Dodgers). We want police here to protect our children."

Firemen and a nurse, lower left, try to revive a victim as men at upper right continue digging through earth for other bodies. The fatal accident occurred at 6:15 p.m. A patrolman said he had checked the site 15 minutes before that and had found no children playing there.

Shoes Are Modeled at Y.W.C.A. With St. Louis Skyline as Backdrop

WITH THE CITY'S downtown skyline providing a scenic backdrop, a rooftop shoe fashion show was staged at the central branch of St. Louis' Young Women's Christian Association. The Roof and Hoof party, as it was called, took place atop the organization's five-story building at 1411 Locust street, with members of various "Y" groups modeling St. Louis-made shoes supplied by a downtown retail outlet.

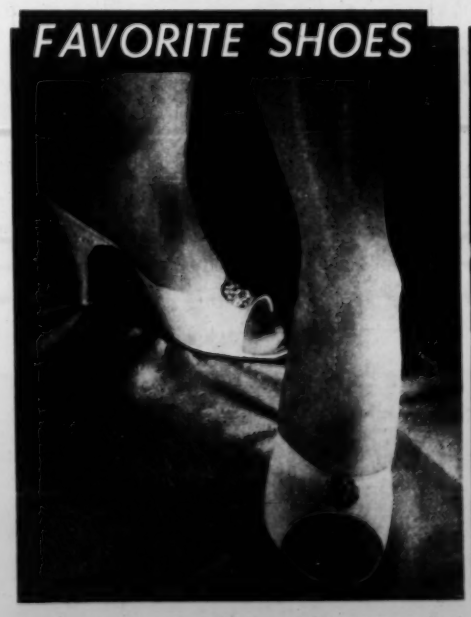

An elevated white-covered walkway gave the 300 women guests an eye-level view of the displayed footwear, which ranged from summer casuals to formal dress shoes. Members of the audience also served as amateur fashion consultants. They voted on their preferences and jotted comments, matters of considerable interest to both the retailer and the manufacturer. For comedy relief, the show's producers ran in a few gag modes that bore such titles as "The Butterfly," "The Shoe That Made a Spectacle of Itself," and "The Blinking Flower."

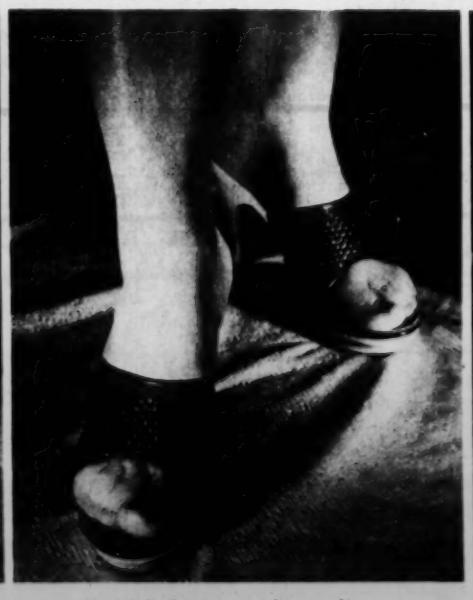

As the show took place during twilight hours, lights of downtown buildings blinking on lent a theatrical atmosphere to the presentation.

The first, hit by the Giants' Willie Mays, shattered the windshield; then a homer by the Cubs' Eddie Miksis hit the front door pane. Garcia didn't mind that one so much, because he is a Cub rooter. He had parked the car in the street outside the left field wall.*

Orange-Glazed, Nut-Filled Sweet Rolls

1. Mrs. Jorgensen dissolves yeast in orange juice. Milk is scalded, butter added and mixture allowed to cool.

2. Orange rind is grated, then combined with sugar, salt, eggs and dissolved yeast, and mixed thoroughly.

3. Flour is added to orange juice and yeast, and this is covered with a towel and set in warm place for 30 minutes. Filling is made by creaming together butter, powdered sugar and ground nuts.

By MERNA LAZIER

ORANGE-GLAZED sweet rolls with crunchy nut filling make a tempting addition to a leisurely breakfast. These are a specialty of Mrs. Bertha Jorgensen of Portland, Oregon, who, incorporating oranges and filberts in a basic German recipe of her mother's, won first place with these rolls in a national baking contest.

Mrs. Jorgensen dissolves yeast in orange juice for additional flavor. Butter is melted in scalded milk. This is allowed to become lukewarm, then it is combined with sugar, salt, grated orange rind, beaten eggs and the yeast mixture. After flour has been added to make the dough, the bowl is covered with towel and set in warm place for 30 minutes. Dough is then rolled into a rectangle approximately 12 by 22 inches. The full length of the dough and half its width is spread with the nut filling, made by mixing together butter, sugar and ground nuts. Uncovered half of dough is folded over filling; inch-wide strips are cut across the fold. These strips are twisted four or five times, then laid in a coil with end tucked underneath on a greased baking sheet.

Rolls should be spaced well apart to allow for expansion. They are set in a warm place (85 to 90 degrees), covered with a towel or waxed paper and allowed to rise until double in size, about 45 to 60 minutes. They are baked in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. They are removed from oven, brushed with glaze made of orange juice and sugar, then returned to oven for five minutes more. If removed from pan immediately they will not stick, but if this should happen the pan may be run quickly over surface heat to warm the bottom, then they can be lifted off with a spatula.

INGREDIENTS

For the dough
- Two cakes yeast
- One-fourth cup orange juice
- One-third cup butter
- Three-fourths cup milk
- One-third cup sugar
- Two teaspoons salt
- Two teaspoons grated orange rind
- Two eggs
- Four to four and one-half cups sifted flour

For the filling
- One-third cup butter
- One cup powdered sugar
- One cup filbert nuts, ground

For the glaze
- One-fourth cup orange juice
- Three tablespoons sugar

Shoes for Guard Dogs

Footgear Protects Paws on Rounds of Air Base in Germany

Caesar, one of 62 German shepherd dogs guarding the United States Air Force Base at Landstuhl, Germany, gets a shoeshine. The dogs were outfitted with shoes after a wave of absenteeism caused by cut and scratched paws, from long hours of duty on rough concrete runways.

With paws protected from the coarse concrete, one of the guard dogs begins a six-hour sentry stint on a runway. At first the dogs wore the shoes awkwardly, but soon became accustomed to them.

Guard dogs lie quietly as their handlers tie the shoes worn on duty. The shoes are laced down the back. They were made by a German firm at $1.15 a pair.

MAN VS. WHALE

Gregory Peck in Movie of Melville's "Moby Dick"

1. The whaling ship Pequod is about to set sail in 1841 from New Bedford, Massachusetts. Among those signed aboard are Ishmael (Richard Basehart, left) and Queequeg (Frederick Ledebur), a profusely tattooed Indian. They are told by another crewman that the master of the Pequod, Captain Ahab, is madly obsessed with destroying a ferocious white whale, Moby Dick. (Film is based on Herman Melville's famous novel.)

2. Mere appearance of Captain Ahab (Gregory Peck) is enough to indicate he is a man seized with grim purpose and that he will tolerate no interference with his command. Among his physical trade marks are a livid white face scar and an ivory stump for a leg. Moby Dick had bitten off the leg, leaving Ahab one of dozens of seamen killed or maimed by the whale in its long and elusive career. The whale has become to Ahab a symbol of the worldly force of evil.

3. As the expedition starts, Ahab insists on an ancient dedication ceremony in which three crewmen cross their harpoons. One participant is Starbuck (Leo Genn, second from right), the first mate and the only man aboard who dares defy Ahab. At sea, Starbuck expresses personal disapproval at what he considers Ahab's insane desire to track down the killer whale. But he promises co-operation in pushing on to the Cape Verde Islands, where Ahab predicts Moby Dick will be during January.

4. When whales already tied alongside the Pequod are cut loose, Starbuck tells Ahab of potential mutiny aboard, but Ahab again asserts his command of the ship. Now in waters off the Cape Verde Islands, the captain begins lookout for the white whale, spots it close at hand. Another whaling ship pulls close and asks help in trying to rescue several of its crewmen adrift in a longboat. Ahab refuses, thinking now of nothing but his one consuming ambition.

5. A storm shreds the Pequod's sails and the vessel almost capsizes. Starbuck, convinced the lanyards must be cut, is chopping them with an ax when Ahab lunges at him with a harpoon. Just then the Pequod becomes aglow with St. Elmo's fire, an electrical occurrence that often gathers around ships at sea during storms. The adversaries part and Ahab again shows his mastery over the crewmen. While he is speaking, the seas calm.

SEE PAGE 8

"LISTENING" through her fingertips, Miss Keller chats with the author (r.). Miss Cornell narrates the 1956 Academy Award-winning movie, Helen Keller in Her Story (now available in 16-mm.).

I'll always remember...

The day I met Helen Keller

by Katharine Cornell

I'll never forget the first time I met Helen Keller, for it changed my whole outlook on life. It was early in June of 1934. I was just finishing an eight-month, cross-country tour, during which I had appeared in 77 American cities and towns in a repertory of three plays — The Barretts of Wimpole Street, Candida and Romeo and Juliet.

Now I was en route from Boston to New York by train, to make my final appearance of the season in Brooklyn. The routine of playing on the road had been killing — strange food, strange faces, short hauls and long hops, endless packing and unpacking in cluttered hotel rooms. I was feeling tired and rather sorry for myself.

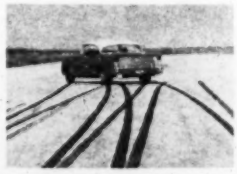

As I walked down our car toward the diner, two women approached. The face of one was wreathed in smiles. "That's Helen Keller," said my companion superfluously: I already had recognized the face from innumerable photographs. This was the woman who had been blind and deaf since infancy; who, lacking two of our essential senses, had triumphed over her handicaps to become an inspiration and symbol for millions throughout the world.

My companion, who knew Miss Keller, introduced me to her and her friend, Polly Thompson. Miss Keller, it seemed, had just returned from an exhausting trip to the Orient — but she didn't show a trace of it. If anything, she was refreshed. Unlike me, she wasn't feeling a bit sorry for herself. She had served.

That night I played with new strength. And since that day Helen Keller has enriched my whole life, deepened my sympathies and understanding. I need only to recall her quote of a famous Hindu saying to pull myself together in moments of stress: "I was grieved because I had no shoes, until I saw a man who had no feet." ■

inside parade

Once again PARADE makes news in the military scene, with the first national story on how — and why — the new West German army is being trained here in America. On the cover you see ex-Wehrmacht officers in a U. S. tank. On p. 8 you can read all about them . . . What does the photo below show? Skid marks—costly, dangerous ones.

Why? To dramatize the kind of thing you should not do if you're interested in the timely article on p. 14, "10,000 More Miles from Your Tires." Speaking of driving, PARADE has just won the National Safety Council's Public Interest Award for the fifth year in a row . . . When Sports Editor John Devaney and photographer Ben Ross went to Arlington, Va., to get the photo on pp. 26-27, it rained. So the students of Wakefield High School, who had expected to pose outdoors, amiably shifted in to the gymnasium.

As one result, no classes were held there that afternoon. As another, the students (one of whom is talking to Devaney above) worked just about as hard as they would have in class . . . Next week, "Report on Youth" takes up a teen-age boy and his first car.

Most likely to succeed

THIS is the year of the leanest, fittest looking grooms and slimmest waisted brides in history. This is the June of marriages most likely to succeed.

For, thanks to their wholesome eating habits, young couples of 1956 feel as fit and happy as they look. Their modern taste is for the lighter, less filling foods and drinks.

Pepsi-Cola goes right along with this wholesome, modern trend. Today's Pepsi-Cola, reduced in calories, is never heavy, never too sweet. It refreshes without filling.

Have a Pepsi—the modern, the light refreshment.

A new German army trains in America

By an ironic turn of fate, we're teaching our ex-foes to fight for us

U. S. TANK — an M-42 with twin 40-mm. guns — is handled by German officers at Ft. Bliss, Tex. They also are learning such subjects as gunnery and fire control.

by LLOYD SHEARER
PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

EL PASO, TEX.

FEW AMERICANS are yet aware of it, but since last January we have been training the vanguard of the new West German army — right in this country. At Ft. Bliss near here, at Benning (Georgia), Monmouth (New Jersey), Rucker (Alabama), Knox (Kentucky) and other installations, officers and some enlisted men who fought against the U.S. in World War II are learning to fire our newest guns, to understand our latest military tactics, to be familiar with our arsenal of highly technical weapons.

These representatives of the Wehrmacht (their exact number is classified) can be seen almost any evening on the streets of a dozen cities near Army posts. Smartly dressed in German uniforms, they go sight-seeing, date local belles, visit in local homes — mindful always that today they are guests in the land of yesterday's enemy. For the most part, the latter is unconcerned.

• As I talked with a German colonel in front of a hotel here, a resident, mistaking him for the hotel doorman, asked the colonel to flag down a cab.

• In Washington, D.C., Gen. Hans von Tempelhoff, Rommel's ex-operations chief and now German military representative to NATO, recently was stopped by an elderly lady. "I want you to know," she beamed, "that you have the best airline of any country. I always travel KLM." KLM is the Dutch airline.

• In the El Paso public library, as I photographed two former Wehrmacht heroes, an assistant asked, "Are these gentlemen from the Mexican army?" I explained that they were German officers being trained at Ft. Bliss. "But why?" she demanded.

The answer lies in the tangled web of international relations.

A year ago, as part of the bargain with the Western Allies for her sovereignty, West Germany promised NATO a 500,000-man army for the common defense of Europe against Russia. In return for more than $2 billion worth of U.S. arms, including $833,000,000 in heavy weapons, the Adenauer government agreed to develop an army of 12 divisions, an air force of 20 groups and a navy of 20,000 men. Now some of these ground troops are in the U.S. to learn the American way of fighting a war. They and others to follow (including air and naval personnel) will return to Germany and pass on their new knowledge to colleagues and subordinates in the Bundeswehr (the new name for the German army).

Supposedly the U.S.-trained Germans have been carefully screened by the Adenauer government as to their political affiliations. Supposedly they never entertained Nazi sympathies — though all fought for Germany in World War II and all swore fealty to Adolf Hitler. It is true that none of them belonged to the S.S. (Schutz Staffel), Himmler's notorious Black Shirts, or the Einsatzgrupen, the monstrous task forces responsible for exterminating 6 million innocent men, women and children in Europe between 1939 and 1944.

The Germans currently in America, mostly married men in their late 30s and 40s, are models of tact and discretion. When asked where they fought in World War II, they talk glibly of action on the Eastern front, in Crete, in Norway — not of fighting Americans. Yet practically all of them did fight Americans. Lieut. Adolf Ebner, one of the first to arrive at Ft. Bliss, admits he was taken prisoner and shipped back to a U.S. prisoner-of-war camp in Nebraska, where he learned most of his English.

While all these Germans speak English well, some have trouble understanding the many technical terms used in their ordnance classes. The 10-year gap in their military life, they say, also causes a bit of readjustment difficulty, but all of them consider themselves extremely lucky to be sent to the U.S. as they have been.

More than anything else, the soldiers want to see America. Our own GI's — with whom they are completely integrated in housing and training — have accepted them wholeheartedly and frequently invite them home or on weekend trips. So far there has been no report of unpleasant incidents.

In fact, were it not for their German uniforms, the former Wehrmacht members would be hard to distinguish from Americans. Generally they are no more rigid or particular in their military bearing. They talk with slightly guttural accents and are amazed at the finer points of baseball, football and rodeos but they are highly adaptable, eager to join all activities — and quick to learn. Take the two sergeants who were overheard discussing popular American music. Said one of a certain song: "I don't dig that."

The Germans are impressed by the high standard of American living. Occasionally they are stopped by GI's and asked questions. In answering, they try to avoid all mention of Adolf Hitler, Nazism, German politics or their country's current rearmament.

Yet the basic reason for rearming Germans can stand airing. From our point of view, it boils down to one thing: saving American lives. The new German army may let this country reduce its military-manpower commitments in Europe. Should the Russians attack, the Germans presumably would fight and, if need be, die in the defense of their own country (into which the American taxpayer has poured billions in aid since 1945).

Last year, Gen. Alfred Gruenther, at that time Supreme Allied Commander for Europe, explained why in military terms a West German army was important to the defense of Europe.

"Because of the limited strength available to us without Western Germany," Gruenther pointed out, "it is not possible to defend far enough to the east in Central Europe . . . We must have depth in our position in order to counter the striking power of mechanized armies and to fight off modern jet aircraft. We should, therefore, try to hold as far to the east as possible . . .

"The question is sometimes asked: 'What good are 12 German divisions in an atomic era?' The 12 German divisions, along with the German air and naval contribution, make the difference between a second-choice strategy and a much more desirable forward strategy . . .

"We must have a sufficient shield of allied ground and air forces to prevent the enemy from advancing in widely dispersed formation. That shield must be strong enough to force an attacking enemy to concentrate in his effort to break through. Those concentrations would be extremely vulnerable to attacks by our new weapons."

An East-West War?

How do the German soldiers training in the U.S. feel about this strategy? Six former Wehrmacht officers, now at Ft. Bliss, are convinced that an East-West War is inevitable. All of them gave up high-paying civilian jobs for low-paying army commissions, not because they were veteran professional soldiers but because of deeply felt ideological reasons.

"I am convinced," says Lt. Col. Eberhard Cornelius of Frankfurt, "that one day Germany must defend herself against Russia. When the day comes we must be prepared."

"In the last war," adds Lt. Col. Hans Rochlitz of Hamburg, "your country and my country fought the wrong enemy. This time we will fight the right one."

By contrast, many civilians in prosperous West Germany doubt that an army is necessary for the defense and dignity of the German Federal Republic.

We're training and equipping the Germans because we must

History has proved to the German man-in-the-street that, once in existence, a German army will somehow always contrive to fight, and war is something contemporary Germany has had enough of.

This is one reason why aging Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is having trouble finding recruits for the new German army. In the past year less than 10,000 Germans have signed up. Moreover, the Bundestag, the West German parliament, continues to drag its feet in passing the legislation which will make conscription (150,000 men a year) the law of the land.

Its members well know that in today's Germany the military is no longer venerated as in former times; that, in supporting Hitler and his gang, the Wehrmacht deliberately delegated its power and responsibility to the most despicable psychopaths and sadists of the century; that without the support of the military the Nazis never could have come to power.

At the postwar Nuremberg Trials, the German High Command tried to disassociate itself from Hitler's excesses. It did not succeed — because it could not. Today's Germans know this. They see Adenauer consulting with senior officers of the former Wehrmacht on the needs of the new German army, and understandably they feel reluctant to volunteer.

The original U.S. policy after World War II was to "denazify, decartelize and demilitarize" Germany. But the omnipresent threat of Russian aggression soon broke down this goal, so that today former Nazis occupy some of the most potent positions in West Germany, the industrial cartels are stronger than ever — and Germany is on the road, albeit a bit reluctantly, to remilitarization.

Our present policy of training German soldiers and providing them with equipment is based on sheer necessity. The British have reduced their armed forces to 700,000 men and will abolish conscription by 1958. The French have reneged on their NATO manpower obligations and have shipped most of their ready divisions to North Africa. Germany is the one European country the U.S. must look to for worthy military support in the event of war.

Will it look in vain? Some observers feel that once Konrad Adenauer dies (he is now 80), Germany may turn from the U.S. Already German politicians are demanding bilateral negotiations with the Russians. German businessmen want to trade with Russia more than ever, and practically everyone in West Germany realizes that reunification of their country awaits negotiations with the Soviets. In the course of negotiations all manner of deals are made.

One Cab-Driver's Opinion

Recently, in Hamburg, I asked a cab-driver on whose side he thought most Germans would fight in the event of a U.S.-Russian war. "The Russian side, of course," he said.

"Why?" I asked. "You all hate the Russians."

"Of course we like you Americans better," he explained. "After all, you saved our country. But it would be safer for us to fight with the Russians. If they won the war we would be the victors. If they lost, the Americans would soon forgive us. You Americans are the best forgivers in the whole world."

Tonight you can see proof of that, here in the streets of El Paso. ■

German soldiers react to the U. S. Army . . .

MAJ. HANS GUSTKE: "In the last war our propaganda told us the American soldier was lax and undisciplined. Now I see with my own eyes that it was a lie. You are stricter than we Germans ever were."

LT. COL. HANS ROCHLITZ: "My wife didn't want me to sign up for the new German army. But I am glad I did: it lets me study with the American soldier. Watching him in action, I feel honored that he is my ally."

CAPT. HANS BAMBEY: "Your men learn complex things so quickly, they are so mechanically minded and well trained, that they have won our admiration and respect. I can see now why we lost the last war."

Strange, how we sin against ourselves!

SOME OF US CAN BE, at times, our own worst enemies. We're so busy taking care of others—our husbands, our children, our homes—that we neglect our health.

"Oh, I take care of myself," you say. "I eat fairly sensibly. I watch my weight from time to time. Of course, I don't sleep as well as I should . . . sometimes feel sort of dragged out in the morning, but then who wouldn't be with my busy schedule? And, let's face it. I'm really not as young as I was ten years ago."

The insidious thing about this kind of "female logic" is that it's so very unfair to your family and yourself. Without realizing it, you may gloss over the "small" danger signals of nervous stress that can, and do warn of trouble ahead.

For instance, be honest with yourself . . .

Do little daytime worries grow big when you turn off the lights? . . . Are you too quick to punish the children and later blame it on "nerves"? . . . Are you oversensitive to criticism? Like so many women, when you're irritable, moody or just break down and cry, are you inclined to fall back on the age-old female excuse that it's "that time of the month" or "miserable weather" . . . or a dozen other things?

Any one of these just may be the explanation—but not when you feel "wrong" day after day.

Your doctor would tell you . . .

Maybe you're the victim of a habit that's grown on you . . . the habit of depending on caffein in coffee for quick, artificial "steadying" . . .

Your doctor would be the first to tell you that, for some women, one of the worst offenders against the human nervous system is the caffein in coffee or tea.

The use of this strong stimulant day after day, week after week, may make you jumpy, nervous, irritable, hard to live with. However, if you're addicted to this habit, there's no reason in the world why you can't get yourself in tune again, begin to feel as you'd like to.

You replace a bad habit with a good one

You switch from caffein-heavy drinks to a new, wonderful, caffein-free hot beverage . . . Imitation Coffee Flavor Instant Postum—now available for the first time.

What a rich aroma this new beverage has! And it tastes so full-bodied, so satisfying!

Your grocer has both new Imitation Coffee Flavor Instant Postum, and famous regular Instant Postum with a distinctive flavor that millions have enjoyed for many years.

You make Postum instantly, right in the cup. Just add boiling water and stir. You can enjoy it straight, or with cream and sugar, all day without fear.

There isn't a taut nerve, a sleepless hour or a headache in Postum. It can't make you nervous, irritable. It can't keep you awake at night because it doesn't have a single speck of caffein in it.

You owe it not only to yourself but to your family to try this delicious caffein-free beverage not just once, but for 30 consecutive days. After all, you can't expect to free yourself from the accumulated effect of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week.

Costs half as much as most coffees

Whether you choose new Imitation Coffee Flavor Instant Postum (red label) or regular Instant Postum (blue label), you'll get up to 100 cups from the 8-oz. jar and up to 50 cups from the 4-oz. jar—for less than a cent a cup! Postum is so inexpensive, compared with most coffees—cup for cup, it costs only half as much.

Why not do this?

So, try Instant Postum for at least 30 days—take this one step that may make a real difference in your everyday life—every waking hour, every sleeping hour.

THE SECRET OF LOSING WEIGHT

A successful dieter offers 15 tips for frustrated fatties

by MAE EANES

CHICAGO.
Summer, when Americans expose themselves to the healthful sun, also exposes a painful fact: about 30,000,000 of us are overweight. Gone are the clothes that hid it. It is there for all to see.

Many of the 30,000,000 will try to do something about those extra pounds. They'll go on diets. They'll exercise. They'll perspire. And at summer's end most of them will face a still-painful fact: the poundage will be right where it was.

Why? The reason is so simple that most people overlook it: Dieters won't stick to their diets.

Want proof? Recently a large group of would-be reducers was scientifically studied. Only about one out of four was "reasonably successful" in losing weight. Only one in 10 reached his (or her) ideal weight.

The remaining majority — that is, most of the dinner-time martyrs who look at you sadly and announce, "I'm dieting" — never lose much weight. For them, last year's clothing never quite fits.

Now, I'm no expert on dieting. No one has all the answers. However, I've dieted on and off for two years and slimmed down from 165 pounds to 125. In doing so, I've learned a little about the battle of the calories. Dieting is no cinch. There's no painless way of doing it — successfully — in my opinion.

Don't Fool Yourself

The first step is to see a doctor. He will provide you with a safe, sane (non-"miracle") diet. Perhaps he will give you some psychological counseling, so that you will understand why you overeat and what you ought to do about it.

But don't fool yourself that once you've left the doctor's office, calorie chart in hand, your troubles are over. They may be just beginning. For the doctor cannot go home with you and sit at the dinner table to make sure you don't cheat. Only one person can do that: you.

The temptation to backslide is tremendous. The would-be dieter kids himself into thinking he can lose weight without giving up something he likes. Of course he is wrong. Or he may go along promising himself to start dieting "tomorrow." For so many, tomorrow never comes.

To counteract this widespread and probably natural tendency, I feel dieters have to play a game with themselves. That is, they have to do a lot of little things that turn no-fun dieting into a livable experience.

In a sense, you have to trick yourself into sticking to your diet. You may even have to employ some devices that are a little humiliating. Strange as it may seem, "stick-to-your-diet" gimmicks may prove as important in losing weight as the diet itself.

Of course, dieting isn't the only activity in which we use such little subterfuges. Take the people who set their alarm clocks ahead every morning so they'll be sure to get up on time. The Federal Government has been doing this kind of thing for years with pay-as-you-go taxes. Dieters have to do it, too.

Below is a list of devices which may prove useful in the game of dieting. I've tried many of them — and they've helped. Some are recommended by TOPS (Taking Off Pounds Sensibly), an organization which helps people lose those inflated balloons around their middles and backsides. Use as many of them as you can — and good luck!

1 Get the scales out of the bathroom. Put them in front of the refrigerator — not to one side where you can sneak around them, but right smack in front so you'll have to stand on them before opening the refrigerator door.

2 Paste reminders in strategic places. For women, a picture of a model in a bathing suit. For men, a picture of a model in a bathing suit.

3 Avoid the company of thin people who complain loudly that no matter what they eat, they can't gain an ounce. Also avoid very fat people, who make the dieter feel slender by comparison.

4 Keep loose change in one pocket, transferring to another pocket amounts matching the calories you consume. When you've "spent" it all, quit eating for the day. (This is harder for women because they rarely have two pockets on anything.)

5 Tell your friends you're dieting. They'll be bored to death, but you won't have the nerve to eat in front of them.

6 Torture yourself: read recipe books containing rich, foreign specialties. But prepare none of them; don't even keep the ingredients in the house. This will give you a feeling of self-righteousness which would be spoiled by eating.

7 If you are happily married, insist that your spouse call you "fatty" at appropriate intervals. (Not recommended for quick-tempered dieters.)

8 Never go grocery-shopping on an empty stomach. Never take much money with you when you do go shopping.

9 Try on clothing one size smaller than what you are wearing now. The expression on the clerk's face — not to mention your reflection in the mirror — should haunt you for some time.

Be a Shining Example

10 If you have a friend who's also trying to diet, show yourself off as a shining example, eating lightly while he or she stuffs. It may make your friend hate you, but in the long run it will keep you in line. (It also might make your friend see the value of the stick-to-your-diet game, thus helping two people instead of one.)

11 Don't use large plates at dinner. Small amounts of food on large plates are demoralizing. Use small plates. What food you can eat will show up better.

12 While watching TV, keep a bowl of cracked ice alongside your chair. Suck on it — don't chew it or you'll endanger your teeth. Cracked ice substitutes for pretzels or popcorn. TOPS advises it to "whet down" your appetite.

13 Don't think that chewing gum and mints are food substitutes. The former may only make you hungry. The latter are loaded with calories.

14 Don't give up smoking when you start to diet. You'll feel sorry for yourself and only eat more.

15 Before dieting, some people claim they are helped by having one big final fling. They get sick on whole jars of olives, stacks of pork chops, cake a la mode. The effect may last for the first few days of dieting — which is really the critical period.

Those are some of the rules of the game. As in any game, the player can step out of bounds. Taping the tops of cookie jars, or hiding chocolates, is not considered sporting. ■

THE AUTHOR: Minus 40 pounds after two years' dieting, this is how Mae Eanes looks today — 5'8" and 125 lbs. Miss Eanes, 26, is a medical-science writer who lives in Chicago.

Most diet results aren't good, according to Cornell University research. Only a tenth of one group studied reached their ideal weight; 65 per cent of the dieters had no success at all.

Dromedary Presents Its New Angel Food Mix

Inspired by the historic recipe used in the Birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low, Founder of the Girl Scouts

Angel Food, indeed! Light as a moonbeam, fluffy as a summer cloud, white and moist as a fresh snowfall—that's the kind of Angel Food Cake you'll bake with Dromedary Early American Angel Food Mix. No matter how good you've made Angel Food Cake before, you'll outdo yourself with new Dromedary!

And, as any good cook knows, the secret is in the recipe. Dromedary has turned to a favorite recipe used in the Birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of the United States of America. The inspiration for this new mix—a veritable masterpiece of the baking art—was found in an old family cookbook. Result: an Angel Food Cake that bakes high and light and with a yummy crust and flavor all its own. Dromedary is the only Angel Food Mix wrapped in Glittering Gold Foil to keep it mixing-bowl fresh!

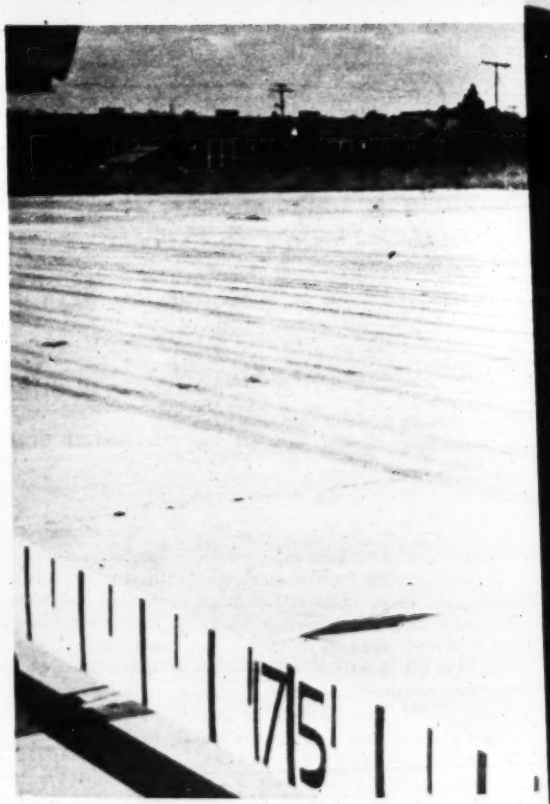

Once again, Dromedary makes baking history with another historic recipe. You, too, can make history at your own table if you bake a Dromedary Angel Food Cake—soon!

DROMEDARY received rights to the Angel Food recipe used in the birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low in return for its support of the restoration and endowment of that historic home now owned by the Girl Scouts of the U. S. A., a member organization of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

10,000 MORE MILES FROM YOUR TIRES

With summer driving here, an expert gives you money-saving suggestions

by EDWARD D. FALES, JR.

HOW'S YOUR TIRE MILEAGE?

If you're the average driver, you're getting 12,000 to 14,000 miles on your tires. Experts say you should be getting up to 25,000 miles or more.

New cars wear out tires faster than old cars, because of increased power. But they need not do so — if drivers observe carefully tested rules.

Of 50,000,000 emergency calls the AAA answered last year, 12,000,000 involved tire trouble. With driving at an all-time high this summer, a big increase is expected.

Will you get more mileage out of your tires? PARADE shows you how you can.

Test driver makes a sudden skidding stop at 50 mph — a serious cause of tire damage. Smoke is from melting rubber.

SOUTH LEE, N.H.

How will your tires look before — and after — your vacation trip this summer? Will you, as many vacationists do, have to spend at least $50 for new tires when you come home?

There are several ways to avoid this, and return with tires looking still new. Director Andrew White of the Motor Vehicle Research Laboratory here has been studying tire wear for one of America's largest chemical companies. And he has put together 10 rules which he says will help the average driver double the life of his tires:

1) Don't overload your car for your vacation trip. Overloading makes cars "droop" in the rear — because there's too much weight in the trunk. This strains the rear tires, lifts the front ones too high. How costly this can be to tires was shown in one trial trip White made.

"We put 1,100 pounds of test gear in the trunk of a new car," he says. "When we started we measured the amount of rubber in the rear tires. The outer rib had a layer of 11/32" of good new rubber. After a 5,000-mile round trip, with top speeds of 60 to 70, nearly two-thirds of that rubber had disappeared."

If you have much heavy luggage, White says, put some of it on a roof rack — far enough forward to distribute the weight evenly all around.

2) When you start a trip, don't rush to the nearest expressway and shoot your speed up to 50 or 60. Says White: "Warm up your tires just as you do your engine. Feed speed to them slowly. A cold tire 'bunches' if you speed, developing flat spots which wear it out fast. A five-minute ride on cold tires at 60 mph can take 500 miles of life out of each tire."

3) If you buy new tires for your trip, don't put them on right away. Have each tire inflated to twice its normal pressure and let it stretch 24 hours before using. Then deflate to road pressure — but hold your speed to 40 for the first 100 miles. Your tires will last 30 per cent longer.

4) Always buy new tires in pairs; better still, replace all five tires at the same time. This may sound extravagant but it actually saves you money. "A new tire should never be paired with an old one," says White. "Tires of different age pull unevenly, wear out faster."

5) Rotate your tires regularly — every 2,000 miles up to 10,000; every 5,000 miles after that. Rotate all your tires —

Skid marks here cost an estimated $135 in tire wear. Skids veer left because of worn front tires or using different makes.

1 No. ½ can Star-Kist Tuna
1 tsp. lemon juice
½ cup Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise
2 tbsps. light cream
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. prepared mustard
1 cup diced celery
1 cup diced, unpeeled apples
Dash of cayenne pepper
Lettuce

THREE EASY STEPS

1. Drain and chunk tuna; sprinkle with lemon juice.
2. Thin salad dressing with cream, add salt, cayenne pepper and mustard.
3. Combine tuna, celery and apples with dressing. Serve on lettuce. Serves 4-6.

2 STAR-KIST TUNA TOSSED SALAD

2 cups cooked green beans
Hellmann's or Best Foods French Dressing
1 No. ½ can Star-Kist Tuna
1 cup sliced cucumber
1 cup sliced radishes
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ cup Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise

Marinate green beans in French dressing. Break tuna into chunks and combine with cucumber and radishes; add seasonings and toss lightly with mayonnaise. Drain beans and add to tuna mixture. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 4-5.

3 STAR-KIST MONTEREY SOUFFLE SALAD

1 pkg. lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water and ½ cup cold water
2 tbsps. lemon juice
½ cup Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise
1 No. ½ can Star-Kist Tuna
¾ cup chopped celery
¼ cup sliced stuffed olives
2 tbsps. chopped pimiento
½ tsp. grated onion

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add cold water, lemon juice, mayonnaise, ½ tsp. salt. Blend well with rotary beater. Pour into refrigerator freezing tray. Quick chill in freezing unit 15 to 20 min., or until firm about 1 in. from edge but soft in center. Turn mixture into bowl and whip with rotary beater until fluffy. Fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into 1-qt. mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish. Serves 4-6.

4 STAR-KIST TUNARONI SLAW

2 cups shredded cabbage
1 grated raw carrot
¼ cup sliced green pepper
1½ cups cooked macaroni
1 No. ½ can Star-Kist Tuna
1½ tbsps. grated onion
½ cup Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise
2 to 3 tsps. prepared mustard
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vinegar
Lettuce

Combine cabbage and next five ingredients. Then, in small bowl, blend mayonnaise and the next three ingredients. Pour over cabbage mixture and toss thoroughly. Serve on lettuce. Makes 4 generous luncheon or supper main-dish servings.

5 STAR-KIST NEPTUNE SALAD

1 cup Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise
½ cup table cream
2 tsps. sugar
1 envelope gelatin
1 No. ½ can Star-Kist Tuna
½ cup finely chopped celery
1 tbsp. chopped pimiento
2 hard cooked eggs
4 tbsps. chopped sweet pickle
1 9-oz. can crushed pineapple, drained
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. salt
Green pepper rings, or stuffed olive slices

Blend mayonnaise, cream and sugar in top of double boiler until heated. Do not boil. Add gelatin which has been softened in ½ cup water. Fold in tuna, celery, one chopped, hard cooked egg, pickles, pineapple, seasoning. Arrange other egg in slices with pepper rings or olive slices at bottom of loaf pan. Spoon mixture carefully over slices and mold in refrigerator until firm. Serves 6.

PACKED BY THE EXCLUSIVE FLAVOR-LOK PROCESS

What one skid did:

Both tires shown above came to sudden stops from 40 mph. New tire at left shows worn tread area. Damage cost: $10. Same stop ripped through worn tire (right) to underlying strips and cord plies. Old tires often blow up directly after such locked-wheel stops.

Sharp turns: a dollar a squeal

including the spare — in regular sequence.

6) Avoid mixing tires of different makes. Similar treads work together better, last longer.

7) Never make a sudden stop above 55 mph. Just one locked-wheel stop at 60 can cost one-third of the life of your tires. Any quick, hard-breaking stop (as you sometimes make at traffic lights) costs an average 75c in tire wear. And a locked-wheel stop can run the cost to $15 or more. This is the stop that leaves a friction burn on the pavement. If you step on this burn while it's warm, your shoes will stick to it; that's expensive rubber melted from your tires.

8) Don't cruise above 55 mph. At higher speeds tires melt and break up fast.

9) Watch your front-wheel alignment. One driver ruined two new tires in 12 days because his front wheels were badly out of line. On long trips, have your wheels checked about once a week.

10) Don't be afraid to increase pressure in your tires — as much as 20 per cent more than recommended by tire makers. (A 24-lb. pressure can be safely hiked to 30.) You won't get as smooth a ride, but your tires will last longer.

Incidentally, "rolling" your tires on sharp turns is one of the costliest things you can do. Whenever you hear tires squeal on a turn, you can figure that squeal cost the driver a dollar bill.

White, who has spent five years studying tire performances and whose findings soon will be published in a book, made one test working with state police. New tires were put on five police cruisers; each car was assigned to a different kind of driver. Under each hood White installed a "tattletale" — a device that records driving performance.

One policeman wore his tires smooth in 11,279 miles. The tattletale showed he did a lot of "cowboying" — made quick starts and stops, "rolled" his tires on turns and traveled at high speeds. Two others were steadier drivers, tallying 17,774 and 21,236 miles each before their treads wore off. The fourth did better, racking up 26,603 miles.

The driver who did best had only gone 12,000 when the test ended — but he still had so much rubber left, White reported, that he could easily have made 30,000 miles on his tires.

You can do even better than that, says White. If you observe all 10 rules, your tires may take you 50,000 miles. Some drivers get this kind of mileage by examining their tires every day, and here's what they look for:

Uneven wear: If tires wear more rapidly on one side, it may be because 1) they haven't been rotated regularly, 2) they're not all the same age or 3) the wheels are out of line.

Cupping: This appears as shallow scoops or depressions in the tread and may mean 1) an unbalanced wheel (see your garage man) or 2) tire overload. Cupping is sometimes audible — as a soft, regular bumping sound.

Abrasion: This shows up as a darker or rougher area on the outer ribs. It may only be due to driving on rough roads and thus not serious. It is serious if caused by too-low air pressure, high-speed driving or turning corners too fast.

Drift wear: This looks like abrasion but appears only on front wheels. The rubber may be torn or frayed. It means your front wheels are out of line, and you'd better see your garage man right away.

Happy motoring! ■

DARK LINES along skid marks come from frictional melting of tire's outer ribs. This will cut down car's steadiness on curves.

TEST TIRES are sorted by Andrew White, whose conclusions appear in this article.

DINA MERRILL:

AT TEA in New York's Delmonico Hotel, society girl Dina Merrill chats about her career. Blue-eyed, 57", 120 lbs., Dina is heiress to a cereal fortune, took "Merrill" as stage name.

by KARL KOHRS

Is she the new Grace Kelly?

TV has found this lovely heiress—and Hollywood is eyeing her

Grace, Dina: Do you see a resemblance?

NEW YORK

Since Grace Kelly has married her Prince, show business has been looking around for somebody to carry on the tradition of ladylike sex Grace made so popular. The likeliest candidate up to now is Dina Merrill, the girl shown at left.

In her way of combining a certain aloofness with exciting physical charm, Dina is amazingly like Grace Kelly. And the resemblance (see photos above) doesn't end with looks. Both girls are wealthy. (Grace is Philadelphia "Main Line" society; Dina is in the Social Registers of New York and Washington.) Both possess that quiet intensity of purpose and whim of iron that makes stars out of merely talented people.

Grace and Dina began their stage careers about the same time — in the latter 1940s. While Grace was studying dramatics and breaking into television, Dina was touring in USO shows and playing in professional stock companies in the East.

Not long ago, Dina was spotted by Fred Coe, NBC television producer. Coe — who, perhaps by coincidence, "discovered" Grace Kelly — cast Dina in a show, then signed her up for five months. This was unprecedented, because Coe rarely signs anybody up for more than one performance at a time. Coe, and other show-business experts as well, say Dina is headed for stardom.

All this is happening to a poised, soft-spoken young woman who in private life is the wife of industrialist Stanley M. Rumbough, Jr., and the mother of three children — Lee, 8; David, 6, and Nina 3. The Rumboughs live in a comfortable, roomy house in Bethesda, Md. In order to combine housewifely duties with her theatrical career, Dina commutes here by plane.

For as long as she can remember, Dina has wanted to be on the stage — although at 9, she recalls, her ambition was to be Olympic broad-jumping champion.

"I could run and jump," she says, "because I was tall and lanky. For the same reason, I was type-cast in high-school and college plays as either the leading man, the villain or the 'heavy father.' "

Deadly serious today about her career, Dina says she intends to keep working until she is a star in her own right. As to pictures: "I want very much to do them. I think movies can further my career."

Do people ever tell her she looks like Grace Kelly?

"Oh, heavens, yes," says Dina. "I hear it all the time. But I don't consider myself in competition with her. After all, if you have talent the door is wide open. All you have to do is get inside.

"Who knows? Maybe someday they'll say Grace Kelly looks like me."

In any case, no one now confuses Dina with either a heavy father or a broad-jumping champion. ■

Scientists proved this Fluoride

Brisk's Fluoride is the only Fluoride proved in 10 year clinical tests. This Fluoride has been used successfully in water supplies and by dentists to reduce tooth decay — is widely approved by public health authorities.

Benefits both adults and children

Brisk's Fluoride/85 helps protect all permanent teeth in adults or children over six. Brisk's Fluoride works instantly on contact as you brush your teeth . . . strengthens teeth as no other decay-preventive ever could!

Works even while you eat, drink or sleep

Fluoride/85 is wonder-working Fluoride plus another tested decay-fighter that starts to work instantly . . . works all day against formation of decay acids. Unless you get Brisk, you cannot get the benefits of Fluoride/85.

Only BRISK has

FLUORIDE 85,

gives extra protection Fluoride alone can't give—works best where you need it most

Brisk's Fluoride concentrates in weak or "soft" spots where decay usually starts — combines with and becomes part of the tooth enamel — thus protects as no other decay-fighter can. And Brisk's stay-active decay-fighter reaches into crevices between teeth — starts working instantly to defeat decay.

WONDERFUL FLAVOR!

Learn The Truth About THE CATHOLIC CHURCH By Mail...At No Cost!

You can easily investigate Catholic faith and worship in the privacy of your home.

Just send us your name and address and advise that you want to know what the Catholic Church really teaches . . . what Catholics really believe. We will send you an interesting course of instruction which is short, yet complete.

We will send you a book explaining Catholic faith and worship . . . written in an easy-to-understand form. There are six test sheets which you can mark and we will check and return to you. This will enable you to determine how well you understand the book. It will give you quick and authentic answers on any point you do not understand.

There is no writing to do . . . and nobody calls on you unless you request it. Nobody knows, in fact, that you are inquiring into Catholic teaching. Thousands of people are taking the course and learning for the first time wonderful truths about the Church established by Christ Himself.

We know that many people would like to learn all about the Catholic Church—but hesitate to make personal inquiries. This offer is made so they may get authentic Catholic information and study it in the privacy of their own homes.

You will find in this course answers to the questions which confuse non-Catholics. You will discover that Catholic belief and practice are not what they are so often misrepresented to be.

And if it is true that the Catholic Church is Christ's Church . . . as we maintain . . . you owe it to yourself to get the facts. This you can readily do through this short course of instruction . . . without cost or obligation . . . and in the privacy of your own home.

As Catholic laymen, who treasure our Faith, we invite you to understand it and, we hope, to share it.

Write today, giving your name and address and stating that you want the course of Catholic instruction by mail. The book and simple test sheets will be mailed to you immediately in a plain wrapper. Nobody will call on you or urge you to join the Catholic Church. If you wish . . . while taking the course . . . to ask any questions which puzzle you, we will answer them promptly without any cost or obligation to you. Send a postcard or letter now—TODAY! ASK FOR INSTRUCTION COURSE—PR. But—please—apply only for yourself.

DINA MERRILL:

AT TEA in New York's Delmonico Hotel, society girl Dina Merrill chats about her career. Blue-eyed, 5'7", 120 lbs., Dina is heiress to a cereal fortune, took "Merrill" as stage name.

by KARL KOHRS

Is she the new Grace Kelly?

TV has found this lovely heiress—and Hollywood is eyeing her

Grace, Dina: Do you see a resemblance?

NEW YORK

Since Grace Kelly has married her Prince, show business has been looking around for somebody to carry on the tradition of ladylike sex Grace made so popular. The likeliest candidate up to now is Dina Merrill, the girl shown at left.

In her way of combining a certain aloofness with exciting physical charm, Dina is amazingly like Grace Kelly. And the resemblance (see photos above) doesn't end with looks. Both girls are wealthy. (Grace is Philadelphia "Main Line" society; Dina is in the Social Registers of New York and Washington.) Both possess that quiet intensity of purpose and whim of iron that makes stars out of merely talented people.

Grace and Dina began their stage careers about the same time — in the latter 1940s. While Grace was studying dramatics and breaking into television, Dina was touring in USO shows and playing in professional stock companies in the East.

Not long ago, Dina was spotted by Fred Coe, NBC television producer. Coe — who, perhaps by coincidence, "discovered" Grace Kelly — cast Dina in a show, then signed her up for five months. This was unprecedented, because Coe rarely signs anybody up for more than one performance at a time. Coe, and other show-business experts as well, say Dina is headed for stardom.

All this is happening to a poised, soft-spoken young woman who in private life is the wife of industrialist Stanley M. Rumbough, Jr., and the mother of three children — Lee, 8; David, 6, and Nina 3. The Rumboughs live in a comfortable, roomy house in Bethesda, Md. In order to combine housewifely duties with her theatrical career, Dina commutes here by plane.

For as long as she can remember, Dina has wanted to be on the stage — although at 9, she recalls, her ambition was to be Olympic broad-jumping champion.

"I could run and jump," she says, "because I was tall and lanky. For the same reason, I was type-cast in high-school and college plays as either the leading man, the villain or the 'heavy father.'"

Deadly serious today about her career, Dina says she intends to keep working until she is a star in her own right. As to pictures: "I want very much to do them. I think movies can further my career."

Do people ever tell her she looks like Grace Kelly?

"Oh, heavens, yes," says Dina. "I hear it all the time. But I don't consider myself in competition with her. After all, if you have talent the door is wide open. All you have to do is get inside.

"Who knows? Maybe someday they'll say Grace Kelly looks like me."

In any case, no one now confuses Dina with either a heavy father or a broad-jumping champion. ■

by BETH MERRIMAN PARADE FOOD EDITOR

COCONUT CIRCLES

¾ cup butter or margarine
½ cup sugar
1 egg yolk
2 cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups flaked coconut

Cream butter until soft; add sugar gradually; cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolk; beat well. Add flour, a small amount at a time, mixing thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla and coconut. Mix well. Chill several hours. Roll out ⅛" thick on lightly floured board; cut with round cookie cutter, 1½" in diameter. Bake on ungreased baking sheet (400° F.) 8 to 10 minutes or until edges are lightly browned. Cool. Spread half the cookies with Lemon Butter Filling. Top each with second cookie; press down lightly. Makes about three dozen filled cookies.

LEMON BUTTER FILLING

⅓ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon grated lemon or orange peel
1¾ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
4 teaspoons lemon juice
Dash of salt
¾ teaspoon vanilla

Cream together butter and lemon peel. Add part of confectioners' sugar gradually, blending after each addition. Then add remaining sugar, alternately with lemon juice, until of right consistency to spread. Add salt and vanilla; blend.

COLA CREAM

Blend ½ cup instant cream with ½ cup warm water; divide equally among 4 tall glasses. Add a generous scoop of coffee ice cream to each. Fill glasses with iced cola beverage.

From a World Famous Hospital Comes Startling Medical News! A new, gentle—Far More Effective Form of Iodine! Proved by hospital clinical work on over 3,971 patients. Proved safe Even in Babies' Throats! Yet so effective it has cured cases that even defied antibiotics!

NEW PAINLESS IODINE STOPS INFECTION FAST!

Won't burn or sting the wound! No poison label! Safe... even if swallowed accidentally!

AN OPEN LETTER TO PHYSICIANS

Since Davies' first report[1] on iodine in 1839, it has proved a useful antiseptic against bacteria, viruses, fungi, protozoa yeasts and spores.[2]

Despite this broad spectrum of activity, iodine is not widely employed, because of toxicity to the tissues, ability to incite sensitization, instability and insolubility.

Isodine Antiseptic is an aqueous solution containing polyvinylpyrrolidone iodine-complex[3] (PVPI) as the active ingredient. Detoxified, non-irritating, it potentiates the germicidal properties of elemental iodine, while minimizing the difficulties of free iodine.[3-4]

Clinical observations over three years indicate PVP Iodine is a safe and useful agent in the treatment of various infections. As a topical antiseptic, it has been used on more than 3,971 patients in the Outpatient Department and Inpatient Services of a leading New York hospital, as well as in Private Practice. No clinical signs of retardation of healing or iodine burn have been reported—even when bandaged.

It is felt that the non-selective, broad spectrum activity of Isodine makes it a valuable adjunct in both hospital and private practice.*

SO GENTLE THAT BANDAGING IS RECOMMENDED!

"My son, Brian, used to run screaming from iodine. Now he asks for non-burning ISODINE. Nothing like it—ever before." (J.A.—amazed mother)

"No tears! No flinching! Instead, just like putting water on." (M.K.—father of 4)

ISODINE has been tested in hospitals, under doctors' supervision, in babies' throat infections, in bone surgery, and on over 3,971 patients. A famous surgeon's report: "Effects were dramatic. We consider ISODINE the antiseptic of choice."

No need to lock away! Get new ISODINE today. Keep it handy in your medicine chest, kitchen and car.

WON'T STAIN TOWELS, LINENS, COTTONS, SILKS OR WOOLENS!

ISODINE Antiseptic is stainless—washable from skin and all natural fibers. Rinse with water.

Revolutionary ISODINE* the full-potency antiseptic... containing the new "complexed" iodine... soothes wounds, promotes healing like no other antiseptic does!

LABORATORY-TESTED AND PROVED UP TO 40 TIMES FASTER THAN TWO LEADING ANTISEPTICS IN KILLING GERMS

ISODINE Antiseptic, the painless, high-potency iodine, is now available to your family!

This safe, new "complexed" iodine gives the full antiseptic power of iodine—for the first time in a gentle form. Gone is the burn of iodine—with ISODINE.

Doctors hail ISODINE Antiseptic because:

1. ISODINE does not irritate or blister skin.
2. You can safely bandage over ISODINE.
3. ISODINE retains full potency.

It took years of experiments before a brilliant scientist "took the terror out of iodine." The secret of ISODINE is the remarkable achievement of "complexing" elemental iodine with a great discovery, polyvinylpyrrolidone. Today, scientists consider this highly important for use in both surgery and medicine.

WORKS CONTINUOUSLY AGAINST INFECTION!

Applied as liquid, there is no pain. ISODINE forms a brown film over the injury. This ISODINE film protects continuously. Protection lasts and lasts as long as the color remains. When the color fades, that is ISODINE'S built-in signal to apply it again.

U. S. TEENAGERS:

HOW FIT ARE THEY?

by JOHN DEVANEY

ARLINGTON, VA.

How fit are U.S. teenagers?

That question is vital to all of us — President Eisenhower, in fact, scheduled a conference this month to discuss it — for it is to youth, our greatest natural resource, that we will someday hand over America's destiny.

The country will be in strong hands, says Ned Warren, supervisor of health and physical education for the Arlington County, Va., school system, rated one of the most modern in its teaching of physical education. Hear this:

"The average U.S. teenager may not have the bulging muscles of many Europeans, but he's more fit, physically and mentally, for life in tomorrow's highly complex America."

Other experts differ. A recent study by Dr. Hans Kraus of New York University, for example, concluded that most U.S. kids do not even come up to a minimum standard for good health. He gave a set of six basic tests — like touching the floor with the finger tips, or lying on the floor and lifting the legs for 10 seconds — to 7,000 European and U.S. youngsters. Fifty-six per cent of the Americans failed, compared to only 8 per cent of the Europeans.

Understandably, parents say: "Our kids can't do the things we did at their age." Yet their claims cut no ice with many doctors. Says Dr. Donald Dukelow of the American Medical Association: "Studies of the modern generation in comparison with its parents show the modern generation to be far better off."

To back that up, Dr. Dukelow ticks off these findings: 1) The average GI in the U.S. Army during World War II was an inch taller, five pounds heavier and in a better state of nutrition than average World War I doughboys; 2) College students of only 25 years ago were shorter, lighter and in a poorer state of nutrition than college students today; 3) Sports records show that today's athletes far outstrip yesterday's stars in nearly every event.

Dr. Dukelow also aims a torpedo at the physical-fitness tests themselves, says: "... It must be recognized that [Dr. Kraus' test] measures certain factors of strength and flexibility. Granting that both strength and flexibility may be factors in fitness, they are only two of several factors."

No test, in fact, has ever been accepted as a way to measure even minimum fitness. Says a prominent New York City physical-education teacher: "A test that proves a boy can do 10 push-ups only proves he can do 10 push-ups and thus can try out for the gymnastic team. It doesn't prove he's fit in mind or body to be a white-collar worker, doctor, machinist or whatever he wants to be. Remember: A boy might be able to lift his legs off the floor for 10 seconds and yet be paralyzed above the waist; he'd be fit for lifting his legs off the floor but not for a lot of other tasks."

1930: High-school students squat and stretch during calisthenics, their principal — and sometimes their only — activity in those days.

YOUR DENTURE BREATH CAN'T BE BRUSHED OFF. When you brush false teeth, you risk offensive Denture Breath. You're safe with Polident! It soaks into places no brush can reach, keeps plates odor-free.

Unless you face these facts about

FALSE TEETH

...you may be in trouble!

If you are one of the many false teeth wearers who is not getting ALL the comfort and pleasure to which you are entitled – this is written for you!

Because your denture is important to your health and, yes, your happiness—you must realize that it can't be treated like natural teeth!

You cannot brush your plate or bridge with cleansers like toothpaste or powder and expect to keep yourself free from Denture Breath.

Plate material isn't half as hard as it looks! In fact, with daily brushings you can wear the fit right off your plate. And, you don't want to have to pay for another new denture, do you?

You and you alone pay the price of possible pain, expense, and unnecessary social problems, when you clean your false teeth the wrong way!

Recommended by Many Dentists

Do what dentists recommend—use Polident, the revolutionary cleanser that actually dissolves away film, stain, tarnish, odor—WITHOUT brushing! Your investment in your denture is worth protecting with Polident!

YOUR SMILE IS SPOILED. Are your false teeth dingy and yellow? Keep them bright with their original natural look. Just a quick soak in Polident dissolves tough, dingy film—keeps teeth odorless—clean—attractive!

BRUSHING MAKES SCRATCHES which trap odors, cause bacteria to lodge—because plate material is so much softer than natural teeth! Polident safely removes all stains and odors!

GENTLE POLIDENT'S SOAKING ACTION gets deep down into tiny cracks and crevices a brush can't reach. Polident is safe, cannot harm plate material which is many times softer than natural teeth!

POLIDENT PURIFIES PLATES! That's why dentists recommend it. Polident makes plates feel, look good, with one quick soaking a day! 35¢ and 63¢. At all drug counters. Try it!

NO!

THESE OLD-FASHIONED WAYS OF CLEANING do not safely, completely remove tough, dingy film, breeding place for bacteria, impurities.

YES!

POLIDENT WORKS SCIENTIFICALLY! A soak... a rinse... a clean, fresh mouth...no wonder it's the world's largest selling denture cleanser!

Treat yourself to delicious coffee...and sleep, too!

Compare the flavor

New Instant Sanka Coffee is all coffee, pure coffee, blended and roasted to perfection. Compare its delicious flavor with your present coffee.

Compare the sleep

When you drink Instant Sanka Coffee instead of your present coffee, you'll sleep better. To feel better all day, drink it for breakfast and lunch. 97% of the bothersome caffein has been removed.

Wakefield's teenagers stay after school—and like it

In determining fitness, therefore, he says, you have to determine fitness for what. "Fitness," he explains, "and that means social and emotional fitness as well as physical well-being, should refer to your ability to do the things you must do as part of your daily life. We're trying to make our kids fit — not necessarily for Olympic games or a military career — but for all the high-pressure strains and nerve-racking give-and-take of modern living."

A prime example of this modern concept in physical education is Wakefield High School here in Arlington, across the Potomac from Washington, D.C. Explaining the thinking behind Arlington's physical-education program, Warren points out: "Thirty or 40 years ago in this country, physical education was patterned after the European system, with a strong emphasis on calisthenics and other muscle-building exercises. Today we still use calisthenics but only as one activity of many; during a school year here, our 2,400 boys and girls learn, during one hour daily in the gym or outdoors, such sports as tennis, golf, archery, softball, track, basketball, volleyball, shuffleboard, table tennis, social dancing and a dozen other activities.

"As you can see, many of those activities are 'carry-over sports' — ones that teenagers can play after they graduate. That's important, for in the world that they'll enter — dynamic, full of tensions, yet with more and more leisure time — they must know how to use that leisure time to relax. Tension, remember, is the No. 1 disabler of Americans."

But one hour a day of physical activity is not enough exercise for any growing teenager, adds Warren. Result: after-school games at Wakefield for any student who's interested. The kids get to play — one class against the other in regular league games — every single sport taught in the physical-education classes. Since there's something for every youngster and he doesn't have to be too skilled to play, about two of every three Wakefield students stay after school (from 2:30 to 4) for these games.

More than their bodies profit. Says Warren: "Besides learning skills and developing self-confidence from these organized games, the children learn to abide by rules, to get along with the next fellow, to accept victory graciously and, more important, to accept defeat without feeling frustrated or incompetent.

Quick Muscles

"We feel here that a physical-education program that only builds muscles is merely a training program, while this richer program — one that builds social and emotional fitness as well as physical health — is an educational process."

But does this process reduce physical fitness at the expense of emotional and social fitness? Answer most doctors: Our kids may not have the muscles of the Europeans — because we don't stress muscle-building — but U.S. boys, when called into the Army, quickly develop those muscles. Moreover, when Americans have entered "muscle sports" in Olympic games, they've more than held their own.

But even without bulging biceps — needed less in this Age of Automation — today's teenager is more fit for the American way of living today than the average European, claim modern educators. If they're right, and there's increasing evidence that they are, then the next step is up to the parents. What's needed: better facilities for after-school play, as part of the school (below) or community playgrounds, so fit children can have the chance to keep fit. ■

NEXT WEEK: A teen-age boy learns responsibility — with his first car.

AFTER-SCHOOL field-hockey game at Wakefield stirs up some dust. Huge intramural program is possible because there are eight gyms, acres of outdoor play space.

A barbecue grill anyone can build

You'll launch a continuous series of outdoor family events when you build this barbecue grill — and it requires no more than a week end to complete.

The unit boasts up-to-date features: wide, slate-covered counters; high chimney to draw off smoke; large cast-iron grates; two large storage compartments for charcoal, utensils, kindling.

Tools needed: hammer, mason's pointing trowel, 18" or 24" carpenter's level, jointing tool. Materials: concrete blocks, sand, cement, angle-iron and flue pipes ($30); two grates ($10 to $24).

For full details, mail coupon below.

BACK-YARD CHEFS cook at table height on handy server-top grill.

CHIMNEY is blue pipe in concrete blocks. Angle irons support the cast-iron grates.

SLATE SLABS embedded in mortar provide smooth, neat counter tops.

Teen-age Topics

Q. At the church I go to, all of the girls wear their school clothes and I feel out of place because my mother says I have to get dressed up. What is your opinion on this? — F.R., Columbus, Ohio.

A. Your mother is right. Continue to wear correct church-going clothes and perhaps your example will help to inspire the others.

Q. I am 12 and my sister is 15. My mother always buys her new clothes and says I should wait until I get to be her age. Do you think she is right? — M.R., Erie, Pa.

A. Your mother should arrange for you to have some new clothes, if she can manage it. It is depressing for a child always to be dressed in hand-me-downs.

Q. The boys we date are all much older than we. Our parents feel that at 13 we should date boys nearer our own age and be home by 12. But most boys our age don't show us a good time and don't have cars. — M.R., Roanoke, Va.

A. Your parents are absolutely right and actually much too lenient. Thirteen-year-old girls should not be permitted to go out with older boys in cars, and letting you stay out until 12 o'clock is begging for trouble.

Q. When you stay overnight with a friend and there is no special time agreed upon to go home, what time would you leave? — P.M., Camp Pendleton, Calif.

A. It is well to be specific about these invitations. If your hostess doesn't say how long you are expected to stay, ask her. Usually you would leave in the morning.

Q. Is it proper for a 14-year-old boy to chaperone a 13-year-old girl to a high-school play? — J.L., Detroit, Mich.

A. If you mean your sister, or perhaps a girl cousin, yes. Otherwise, no.

Q. My fiance claims that a greeting card should be signed with his name first, for instance "Richard and Ellen." Is that correct? — E.T., Hilldale, N. J.

A. Usually the person signing the card signs the other's name first.

First Show Cost $1350, Average Now $180,000

NEW YORK, June 23

TELEVISION HAS changed considerably since Ed Sullivan put on his first "Toast of the Town" variety show in New York on June 24, 1948. Sullivan himself and his staff have brought about many of the changes.

The Sullivan program, now known simply as 'The Ed Sullivan Show," will observe its eighth anniversary Sunday (7 p.m. on KWK-TV) with an array of top stars who have appeared on the show at one time or another in the past eight years. The cost of Sullivan's average Sunday night program these days is about $180,000, so it's a safe guess that the anniversary show will top that figure by many thousands.

But back in 1948, Sullivan's first show cost only $1350. Among the entertainers that night were comedians Martin and Lewis, who got exactly $200. Today they can command $50,000 for a single guest appearance. Singing star Monica Lewis got $50 on the first program; she would get at least $3000 today. Eugene List, the pianist who played for Churchill, Stalin and Truman at Potsdam, received $75. Rodgers and Hammerstein, the famous composers, appeared for nothing. Sullivan's dancers that night were paid $10 each. Now they get $145 a performance.

PRODUCERS OF THE Sullivan show point to a number of innovations introduced on the program. It was the first to turn the cameras on the audience, first to use water and fire effects.

All St. Louis TV stations are now on Central Daylight Saving time. Listings of nearby cities are Central Standard Time except for KHQA-TV, WGEM, WTVP and WCIA-TV.

It introduced rear-screen projection, and was first to use an overhead camera. Among other "firsts" credited to Sullivan was the biographical program—"The Helen Hayes Story," "The Bob Sherwood Story," and "The Oscar Hammerstein Story," among others. Sullivan also used stars and highlights from current Broadway productions.

Constantly on the search for outstanding entertainers, Sullivan persuaded many to make their TV debuts on his program. Among these were Faye Emerson, Skitch Henderson, Sam Levenson, Jackie Gleason, Paul Winchell, James Melton, Jane Froman, Teresa Brewer, Charles Boyer, Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healey, Cora and Bil Baird and Gloria Swanson.

MARGARET TRUMAN made her television debut on his program, as did such other singers as Hazel Scott, Johnnie Johnston, Anna Maria Alberghetti, Mimi Benzell, Vic Damone, Lena Horne, Johnnie Ray, Sophie Tucker and Guy Mitchell.

Among musical giants were Irving Berlin, Gordon Jenkins, Andre Kostelanetz and Rudolf Friml. From the acting ranks Sullivan brought Lana Turner, Grace Kelly, Rita Hayworth, June Allyson, Bea Lillie, Helen Hayes, Burt Lancaster, Humphrey Bogart and a host of others. From the sports field he introduced to TV such figures as Sonja Henie, Rocky Marciano, Joe Louis, Ben Hogan, Sam Snead, John Landy and Eddie Arcaro.

Looking back, Sullivan recalls the time in 1948 when Philadelphia joined the TV network. Up to then, only New York and Boston were on it. "It was a big deal," he says. "Frank Stanton, head of CBS, was there. He used a big blackboard and pointer to illustrate what a great future was in store for TV when the coaxial cables would be extended to other cities across the nation."

Sullivan has acquired an ulcer or two as a result of his years on TV. He admits that he "plays the game hard." His sole objective is to provide the best possible talent and he spares no effort or expense. He travels thousands of miles each year and recently toured Japan in search of talent.

• • •

SULLIVAN WAS BORN in New York Sept. 28, 1902. The family later moved to Port Chester, N.Y., where Ed won 12 letters in sports in high school. He then became sports editor for a home-town newspaper at $10 a week, and in 1920 joined the sports staff of the old New York Evening Mail. Twelve years later, after sports work on the New York World, the Morning Telegraph and the Graphic, he became a Broadway columnist, first for the Graphic and later for the Daily News.

In television, Sullivan merges the varied talents he developed during his many years in New York. He not only co-produces and emcees his show, but arranges for most of the acts.

In spite of the fact that he has an exhausting routine, he calls himself chronically lazy. His main diversion is golf, which he learned while caddying for Gene Sarazen at Rye, N.Y. He lives at a Park Avenue hotel and usually spends Saturdays on his farm in Connecticut.

The Television Letter Box

Letters Intended For This Column Should Be Addressed To Television Editor, TV Magazine, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis 1, Mo.

YOU recently said that all John Wayne movies available to KSD-TV have been run. All of his movies were excellent entertainment for the whole family. Please consider a re-run of what you had. I am sure they will be appreciated more on a second showing.

CECELIA DROSKEY.

It is more than two months since the Johnny Carson show on Thursday nights went off the air. Would it be possible to bring him back?

RICHARD COOK,
East St. Louis.

(Johnny Carson has a weekday program, 1 p.m. Monday through Friday on KWK-TV.—Editor).

That was a disgusting performance by Debra Paget on the Milton Berle show. Can you call what she did a dance? I wonder if Mr. Berle let his own little girl watch that show. The way Elvis Presley acts is bad enough, but he did have clothes on.

MRS. M. C.

What a disappointment to find Lawrence Welk's show missing at 11:15 p.m. Monday. There is so little music on TV, and we so thoroughly enjoyed this relaxing program at the end of a busy day. Is there any prospect of having this show restored?

MR. AND MRS. HUBERT C. HAHN.

(To the many who wrote in about the Lawrence Welk show, we repeat that the program will return on KSD-TV at 10 p.m. Sundays beginning July 15.—Editor.)

Studio Notes and Gossip

A SPECTACULAR in honor of football, similar to the salute to baseball on the opening day of the major league season, is planned by NBC-TV for Sept. 9.... Greer Garson's real first name is MacGregor. Joi Lansing was born Joy Loveland. She is a Mormon from Salt Lake City. Betsy Palmer's original name was Patricia Hrunek. ... Gloria Lockerman, 12-year-old spelling expert who won a total of $48,000 on "The $64,000 Question" and "The $64,000 Challenge," runs a weekly interview program with children on a Baltimore station. . . . More than 30,000 children are competing in an archery tournament put on in conjunction with television's "Robin Hood" series. . . . Two new children's programs planned by NBC-TV for next fall are "Johnny Moccasin" and "Circus Boy." . . . Danny Kaye will be seen in a special "See It Now" in the fall in his role as Ambassador at Large for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. . . . Robert Q. Lewis has signed a CBS radio contract that will pay him $135,000 for the first nine months, $165,000 for the second and third years. . . . Frank Parker, who is leaving the Arthur Godfrey gang June 30, has been earning $60,000 to $65,000 a year with Godfrey, and about double that in outside bookings.

Blue Cross is the only hospital service plan sponsored by hospitals. That's why when you have Blue Cross, there's no red tape . . . no delay in establishing your identity. Your Blue Cross membership card serves as your ticket of admission because Blue Cross gets the bill for your service benefits.

Blue Shield is your doctor's own plan to help protect your family against the expense of medical, surgical, maternity care and other professional services when you are in the hospital.

When moments may mean a life . . . it's a wonderful feeling to know you can depend on your Blue Cross-Blue Shield protection.

If your company doesn't have a Blue Cross and Blue Shield Group, find out how you can help get one started.

"My opponent links me with 'bossism'! . . . I say this is a foul slur upon my wife! . . . And upon American womanhood! . . ."

"Tea will be served after the meeting is adjourned! . . . And any member may leave at her own risk! . . ."

"The boss doesn't want you to run to him with every problem! . . . Besides the golf course is quite a ways from here! . . ."

"I know for a fact she can run faster than THAT! . . . I happened to see a Dinosaur chasing her yesterday! . . ."

"The chief is pretty sore at his new electronic brain! . . . Says it lacks initiative! . . ."

"Take the covered wagon. The first pioneers came West in them. When Indians attacked, wagon trains formed circles to ward off flaming arrows. It's a real 'Trailblazer'."

"Then came the stagecoach carrying mail and passengers through the badlands. There is a 'Trailblazer' model stagecoach, too."

"Now highways hum with modern trucks and vans of all kinds—just like the colorful and exciting models you get free when you buy Nabisco Shredded Wheat."

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE ARN AND GARM STAND BESIDE A ROARING TORRENT. FOR WEEKS THEY HAVE BEEN SEARCHING FOR A ROUTE ON WHICH TO BUILD A ROAD OVER THE MOUNTAINS, AND NOW THIS CHASM BARS THEIR WAY.

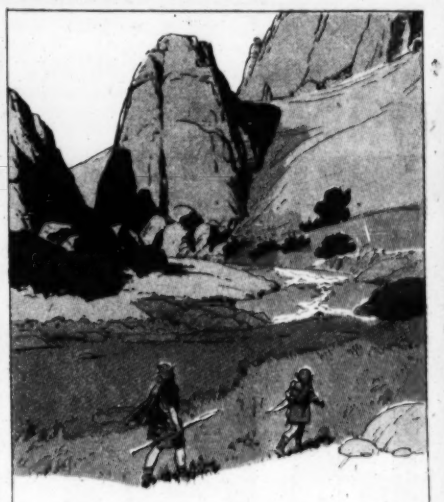

THEY FOLLOW UP THE STREAM SEEKING A CROSSING AND ENTER THE CLEFT IN THE MOUNTAINS FROM WHICH THE STREAM ISSUES.

BEYOND THE CLEFT A BEAUTIFUL MEADOW AND LAKE LIE CUPPED BY TOWERING CLIFFS. "WE WILL HAVE TO WALK AROUND THAT LAKE IF WE ARE TO REACH THE OTHER SIDE," SAYS GARM.

AT THE FAR END OF THE LAKE THEY FIND A CURIOUS THING. ANOTHER STREAM LEAVES THE LAKE AND IT IS FLOWING IN THE OTHER DIRECTION !

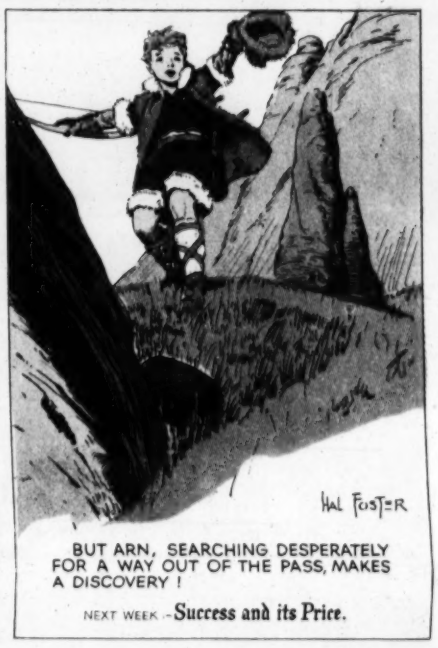

ARN IS SO EXCITED HE FAIRLY RUNS DOWN THE NEW STREAM. "WATER RUNS DOWNHILL," HE CRIES. "THIS MEADOW MUST BE THE VERY TOP OF A PASS THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS!"

6-24-56

FOR ONE DARK MOMENT IT LOOKS AS IF THEIR WAY IS BLOCKED AGAIN.

HAL FOSTER

BUT ARN, SEARCHING DESPERATELY FOR A WAY OUT OF THE PASS, MAKES A DISCOVERY !

LANCE

1. THE BEGINNING

WHEN THE AMERICAN COLONIES BOLDLY DECLARED INDEPENDENCE FROM GREAT BRITAIN, ADVENTURERS FROM MANY LANDS HASTENED TO JOIN THE FIGHT FOR FREEDOM.....

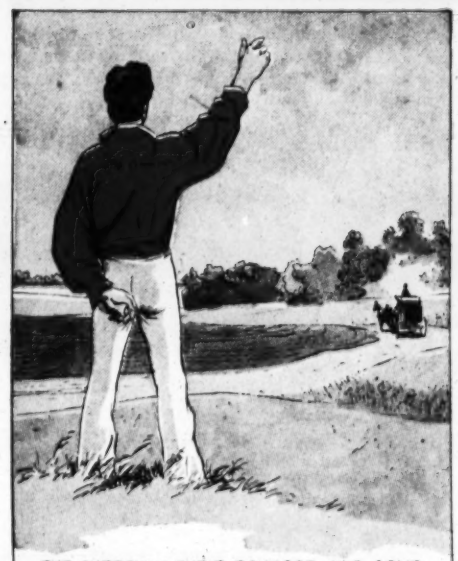

AMONG THESE WAS THE FRENCH NOBLEMAN, MARQUIS DE SAINT-LORNE, WHOSE CRACK CAVALRY LEGION SUCCESSFULLY CONTAINED THE BRITISH DURING THE DECISIVE SIEGE OF YORKTOWN.

THE WAR OVER, THE HANDSOME, HARD-FIGHTING MARQUIS DREAMED OF WARS IN OTHER LANDS...BUT HIS FRIEND, LIGHT-HORSE HARRY LEE, CHANGED HIS MIND: THERE STILL WAS SOME DELIGHTFUL CONQUERING TO BE DONE IN VIRGINIA!

IN THE YEARS FOLLOWING, THE TWO FRIENDS PRODUCED FINE SONS. LANCE SAINT-LORNE AND ROBERT EDWARD LEE WERE INSEPARABLE COMPANIONS.....

BUT SUDDENLY THEIR BOYHOOD WAS GONE AND ROBERT, THE ELDEST, WAS WHISKED OFF TO SCHOOL.

LANCE BROODED OVER THE LOSS OF HIS FRIEND UNTIL HIS FATHER COULD TAKE IT NO LONGER. "I HAVE CONTRACTED FOR YOU TO STUDY ON THE CONTINENT. THEREAFTER YOU WILL PREPARE FOR WEST POINT AND ONE DAY YOU WILL MAKE A FINE GENERAL!"

"BUT, SIRE, I—"

"THIS IS THE WAY IT IS TO BE! PREPARE!"

56 6-24-56

EIGHT YEARS OF SCHOOLING! TO A ROBUST LAD OF 14, WHOSE FATHER HAD BEEN A DASHING CAVALRY COMMANDER, THIS SEEMED PRETTY GRIM. NOT EVEN WEST POINT APPEALED TO LANCE, FOR THE ARMY HAD NO CAVALRY CORPS!

AND SUDDENLY HIS EAGER MIND RECALLED TALES OF EXCITEMENT ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER.....

NEXT MORNING, THE MARQUIS CAME DOWNSTAIRS WHITE-FACED AND TREMBLING. "I HAVE HERE A NOTE FROM OUR SON, LANCE..."

"OH, ETIENNE!"

"HE HAS DISOBEYED ME! HE INFORMS ME IN SO MANY WORDS THAT HE HAS GONE WEST TO LOOK OVER THE COUNTRY....!"

THE MARQUIS LOOKED UP, EYES WET WITH PRIDE, AND SAID: "GOD SAVE HIM..."

Next Week— 2. YOUNG MANHOOD
